SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Anemone Japonica.

One of the finest fall perennials is the Anemone japonica, which is now in bloom, and if it is not included in the growers' stock at present, it should be procured. There are both white and pink, but for general use the former is to be preferred. Where the plants are in bloom a framework should be built over them that heavy cloth may be drawn over and protect them from the early frosts, and they will bloom for some two or three weeks yet. If it is desired to increase the stock, a plant can be lifted and the roots cut into several pieces about an inch long and the pieces inserted in the propagating bench and they will root in about four weeks. Put them in 2½-inch pots and when the roots have spread into the soil the pots can be placed under a bench and run dry until spring, when they should be potted in 3-inch pots and grown on until all danger of frost is passed and then planted out.

Cleaning Up After Frost.

Every spring, from all sections of the country, come reports of the great amount of damage being done by cut worms in the fields of many growers, and as they are very difficult to combat in the open ground, a great loss is consequently the result. While the cut worms are unsuccessfully fought in the spring, they can be overcome by a little labor spent in the fall. The moths lay their eggs in the fall on any vegetation that is left, either weeds or the refuse of the crops that is allowed to remain on the ground either standing or lying around. It is therefore clearly understood that the best thing to do is to clean up the field of all vegetation and burn it up or cover it with soil and make manure of it, and then plow the ground and turn under any small weeds that might harbor the eggs. Deep fall plowing pays anyway in the crop for the succeeding year, improving the soil, and if this small amount of work will get rid of the cut worms it will amply repay for all the labor and expense. Many use this old rubbish for the covering of tender stock, but leaves and straw are far preferable for this purpose. The vegetation that is left after being killed by the frost is too full of water and will lie too close, and after the fall rains, will make too compact a mass upon the plants which it is intended they should protect, and as the freezing weather comes on become a solid mass of ice. It is much better to put all this rubbish in a compost pile and cover it with earth. The fermentation will kill all the insects and their eggs, and it will make fine manure for pot culture, or if this is not done dry it out thoroughly and burn it. The appearance of the ground will be improved, the soil benefited and the worms killed by giving the field a thorough cleaning and plowing.

Bouvardias.

As the weather becomes cooler the pinching back of bouvardias should cease and the flowering shoots be allowed to grow. The plants should be well established in the bench or pots and making good growth. Give them a cool, light situation and with all the ventilation possible; these plants are of cool nature and relish plenty of good fresh air. If grown too warm, bouvardia soon becomes infested with insects and stops flowering, and the plants are quickly ruined. Keep the soil free from weeds and well stirred on the surface, and be careful not to overwater until the roots have filled the soil. Keep a lookout for both aphis and red spider; the aphis quickly cover the soft, tender growths, and if the weather is warm the plants become quickly infested with spider. Constant syringings and frequent fumigation is necessary to keep these pests in check and insure a good crop of flowers. Keep the plants tied up in shape that the stems may be straight and erect.

Hydrangeas.

The hydrangea plants in the field should be now potted and made ready for winter quarters. If the plants have still a strong succulent growth they can be left standing out where the wood will be given a chance to ripen off. After potting they should be given a good watering that the soil may be settled around the roots, but after that the plants should be sparingly watered. The main object at this time is to harden the plants off and ripen them up. Never mind if the foliage wilts to some extent, for it is desirable that this should all drop off before storing away for the winter. A few frosts will be of benefit, but as the weather is uncertain they should be placed in a position where they can be conveniently covered and protected from a severe freeze. While it is desirous to harden up the wood and plump up the flowering bud, yet too hard a freeze will kill the bud. As soon as well ripened they should be placed in cool quarters where they will remain dormant until it is time to start them.

National Botanic Garden Extension Plan.

Extension and beautification of the national botanic garden, Washington, D. C., will be one of the first pieces of legislation of a general character considered by congress, after the cost of living, railroads, league of nations and relief of soldiers have been disposed of. Senator Moses of New Hampshire, who is a member of the committee on the library, which has jurisdiction over the botanic garden, introduced a bill on the opening day of the session for the extension of the garden, to take in park areas and other unimproved land to the west and south of the present site and for extensive beautification.

The entire square west of the present garden is serving no useful purpose and could be improved, making it not only a beauty spot but of lasting value to the government and of incalculable educational value, Senator Moses says, by authorizing the botanic garden to spread over into that space. It is also proposed to have the propagating houses, the behind-the-scene workshops of the garden, extended to take in some of the adjacent land now occupied by unsightly shacks. Many members of congress are anxious to see these improvements put through and have promised their heartiest support when the bill is reported out of committee.

Water Lilies and Gladioli.

The accompanying illustration is of a spray of real summer flowers, water lilies and gladioli. These have been very artistically arranged; good, long privet sprays and fancy nephrolepis were used as green. It is a double spray, each half separately constructed and then tied together at the stems, and filled in with greens, flowers and a bow of good chiffon. It is about four feet in length, and was made to lay on a casket. The water lilies are the large white, which when full blown, as used in this piece, are very showy. This combination is only to be sent for an early afternoon funeral, as towards night the lilies would close. This can be avoided in a measure by tying back the green calyx, and also cutting or making incisions into the base of the flower. This spray would have been even more effective had the gladioli been full open. It was arranged by T. Nelson Gieger, a prominent retailer of Philadelphia, Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

It is good policy at this time to make the most of the outdoor flowers, using them in decorative effects in the store and window. Golden Glow or rudbeckia is at its height, and when arranged with oak leaves, or some of the tall grasses, in vase stands or vase baskets, is very conspicuous.

Hydrangea paniculata can be had in quantity from now until frost, and nothing is more showy and useful. As it later on takes the various autumn tints, it is available for many color combinations. Many retailers find these tinted heads of bloom very good stock to handle when properly cured and lay in quite a stock for winter house decoration. Many customers have bowls and vases on top of cases or on mantels, which they fill, year after year, with these, and other prepared berried branches, grasses, plumes, etc.

A handsome window piece at this time is a choice wreath of purple asters. It can be made larger with the same flowers, if they are used to decorate a well made prepared magnolia crescent or full round wreath. If a crescent form, arrange all the flowers in a cluster in the full or wide portion, or use some to form a tapering spray to extend down one side nearly to the narrowest center. White gladioli may also be used in connection with the asters. A well made purple bow of ribbon or chiffon gives a good finish.

A border of green around the window on the tiles, close to the glass, makes a nice appearance. Narrow boxes, not over three inches in width, painted green, filled with lycopodium, will thrive here, even in very cold weather.

DOUBLE SPRAY OF WATER LILIES AND GLADIOLI.
Arranged by T. Nelson Geiger, Philadelphia, Pa

They may even freeze to the glass, but when thawed out, appear to be none the worse for it.

Summer cosmos is now at its best, and is good stock for table decorations, particularly for home consumption, where many do not think the dinner is ready until the vase of flowers is seen in the center. The new semi-double varieties in their various shades of color are beautiful; the white and light pink are useful in spray work, used either by themselves or in connection with other flowers. This is one of the best florist flowers of recent introduction.

Now that the schools are opening their fall and winter sessions, summer residents from out of town will be returning home, and the first opportunity should be taken to let the customers known that the store stands ready and is anxious to serve them. A neat "Opening of the Season" circular should go out, not later than September 15. A "Welcome Home" box of just a few choice dahlias or other fall flowers is sure to be appreciated, and a note or perhaps a personal call to express thanks, generally follows. While there may not be immediate orders, it is quite certain that the store will be kept in mind when anything is wanted.

A fair stock of table ferns is now to be carried, as one of the first orders is for a refilling of the fern dish. A little printed card with directions for the care of this table ornament to be sent out with each order is taken as an evidence of good will and a desire to have them do well. Be particular to state that they should always be placed next the window, between the lace curtains and the glass, when not needed for use on the table.

A printed label or notice, containing directions for the proper care of cut flowers, should be pasted inside the lid of all cut flower boxes. Many persons do not know that it is necessary to have the proper amount of water in the vase, or that the flowers should not stand in the sun, or too close to the register or radiator or in a draft, or allowed to remain in the box in a warm room, or even in a vase over night. The danger of long stems in shallow vases should be pointed out, and how to revive flowers wilted from any cause, by wetting them, wrapping in wet paper, and placing the stems in deep jars of water in a cool place over night Such directions may be printed on a slip of paper or card and placed in the boxes, and perhaps be more certain to be seen than when inside the lid, but also not so certain to be placed in every box.

Dahlias are fast coming to the front. Plans should be made to use them to the utmost in the height of their season, the last weeks of September and up to October 10. Some of the select or special flowers are choice enough for the very best table decorations, or to sell as loose cut flowers. They should command good prices, as it was demonstrated last year that people will pay well for choice flowers. Local advertising campaigns should boost the dahlia, so as to create as large a demand as possible.

Outdoor Cut Flowers for Summer.

From the time of the first candytuft or feverfew, in the early spring, until the frost finishes the last of the hardy pompon chrysanthemums, there can be in the well planted commercial flower garden, a continuous supply of cut bloom, which, if it has quality, will find a ready market the entire spring, summer and fall.

The ground for such a garden should be well drained, the soil rich, or given good mulchings of manure in the fall. Most important of all, and absolutely necessary, is an overhead watering system, so that at no time shall the plants suffer in this respect.

In every community throughout this broad country, there are thousands of dollars of loss through lack of this great labor saving watering system. Again and again does the grower look despairingly over his fast fading crops and up to the sky for rain; one hot day is succeeded by another for a week at a time with further loss to the stock. His dealer calls repeatedly, telling of the high prices and urging shipments, which he is unable to send.

It is, of course, somewhat expensive to install such a system, but when once in place, it is there to stay, a permanent improvement that will return a better interest than any other utility on the place. In fact, the crops can be controlled almost the same as if growing under glass.

A portion of this garden can be brought into profit even as early as the first of the year, when sprays of the pussy willow are forced into salable condition, and a supply kept coming on until spring. Well-budded pussy willows, in lengths from six inches to three or four feet, meet with a good demand the entire season. Willows will easily respond to culture and judicious trimming, producing straight shoots of any desired length. In forcing, every bud can be brought to good size, and will then, when well graded and bunched, bring the best market prices.

Forsythia can be brought in from February 1, and until it is in flower outside, is the best seller of the forced shrubs. It should be encouraged to throw up straight, single shoots, which when well grown, flower freely their entire length.

The earliest of the soft wooded stock can be hurried a week or two by being wintered or started in frames. Candytuft and cornflower, from the frame, have an advantage of 10 days or two weeks over that grown in the open ground, which means much greater returns. The outside stock of these varieties then follow. Duetzia, spiræa and double flowering almond will also be cutting, which shrubbery will be quite an important item. White and pink Dorothy Perkins rose sprays are good stock at this time. Then comes the hardy Delphinium Belladonna and others of its type.

The white Hydrangea arborescens is ready the last of June, and is very useful. Some of the varieties of the herbaceous phlox are splendid for cutting. Gaillardias, with their gay orange and red colored flowers, are very showy.

Shasta daisies are also one of the best sellers. Several rows of selected stock zinnias will add a much needed variety. The annual larkspur, which flowers from the middle of July, on, is a good addition.

All during August, the Hydrangea paniculata, is one of the best things in its season. By pinching some of its first flower buds, its period of bloom is prolonged. Clematis paniculata, with its lovely lace-like sprays, is sure to find purchasers at this time. Gypsophila paniculata flowers in July and August, and easily finds a place for itself, as it is a good mixer for everything.

Many of the stocks mentioned will take on a second growth and flower during September. Early in October, the first of the hardy pompon chrysanthemums will be in, and from then on until frost, will furnish one of the most prifitable crops of this outdoor garden. Success with all this class of flowers is best secured by intensive culture, disbudding, careful trimming out of superfluous shoots, etc. Mulching with straw or salt hay at times, prevents heavy rains from soiling the flowers. There are many other good selling stocks that could be added to this list, such as snapdragons, salpiglossis, pyrethrums, etc., all of which would find a ready sale.

It is especially necessary that the greatest care be exercised in the cutting, bunching and preparing the stock for market. There is as much skill in marketing flowers, as in growing them. Cut right, properly bunched, cured and placed on the market in time to meet the early morning demand, adds greatly to their selling value. More growers fall down in this respect than in any other, as they do not seem to appreciate the value of neatness and finish in their bunches, which are just as easy to put up, as when done carelessly. The topped off strawberry box looks inviting, and is quickly sold, while others of the same lot, just as good, are passed over.

Half an acre to an acre, or two acres or more of garden planted with the varieties of stock above mentioned, will keep the mill going during the dull summer season when the revenue from the houses is at its lowest ebb.

Why He Struck Out.

In the good old days, months ago, a baseball player turned up at the game with a load on. When he went to bat, he said to the umpire with a silly smile: "I see three bats and three balls. What am I—hic—to do?"

"Hit the middle ball," said the umpire. But the boozy batter struck out.

"Hang it, Bill," said the captain, "why didn't you hit the middle ball, as the umpire told you?"

"I did," replied Bill with an injured air, "only I hit it with the—hic—outside bat."—Boston Transcript.

BARABOO, WIS.—Timely discovery of a fire at the range of E. T. Ross, prevented serious damage, the result of spontaneous combustion in soft coal screenings. The loss amounted to about $1,000, confined principally to the office.

EVANSTON, ILL.—The flower shop of John M. Weiland was entered recently by burglars who secured a small amount of cash.

American Ass'n of Park Superintendents.

The opening session of the American Association of Park Superintendents' twentieth annual convention, as briefly outlined in last week's issue, page 356, was held at Hartford, Conn. After the preliminary business had been disposed of, George A. Parker, superintendent of the Hartford park system, made an extended address on the beginning of the parks in that city. He said that the site of Bushnell park, the first established, was bought with money raised by taxation. He mentioned Frederick Law Olmstead, former superintendent of Central park, New York, who was a member of a firm that laid out the Hartford parks. He also spoke highly of Theodore Wirth, former superintendent of Elizabeth park, and now head of the park system of Minneapolis, Minn.

After the meeting, the delegates were taken in automobiles through Pope park, and then to Goodwin park, where they were served with a sheep bake. Further trips were taken to Colt and Keney parks. Of the latter alone, any city might well be proud. The wide extent, and its beautiful areas of forest and meadow, cannot fail to create admiration. After leaving Keney park, the party visited the gardens of the Goodwin estate, which are under the supervision of John F. Huss. Among the many good features of this estate, the finest, that is privately owned, in Hartford, is a rare collection of hardy ferns. Elizabeth park was next visited. The leading feature of this park is its rose garden, and though the rose season is about ended, quite a number of the last roses of summer were found, not "blooming forlorn," but quite attractive. A bountiful supper was served in the pavilion, after which there were addresses by Acting Mayor Alton, Hon. Charles E. Gross and H. H. Goodwin. Mr. Gross gave an extended statement of the labors and difficulties encountered in perfecting the park system.

Croix de Guerre.

Presented by Members of the Society of American Florists to Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., at the Detroit Convention, Aug. 19-21, 1919.

On the morning of the second day, an early start was made from Hartford for New Britain, where Walnut Hill park was visited, and later the state park on West Peak, where luncheon was served. Other parks and points of interest in Wallingford and North Haven were included in the itinerary, the party reaching the Hotel Garde, New Haven, in the evening. Here a business session was held after supper had been served and the following officers were elected: J. W. Thompson, Seattle, Wash., president; H. W. Busch, Detroit, Mich., vice-president; Emmett P. Griffin, East St. Louis, Ill., secretary-treasurer. Directors: George H. Hollister, Hartford, Conn.; L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo.; George W. Hess, Washington, D. C.; C. A. Bossen, Minneapolis, Minn.; Lionel Evans, Youngstown, O.; E. R. Mack, Wilmington, Del.; Louisville, Ky., was selected as the meeting place in 1920. The affairs of the association were shown to be in an encouraging condition. Twenty new members were added to the roll at the convention.

A short session was held in the chamber of commerce, New Haven, on the morning of the third day of the convention, George H. Hollister, of Hartford, again presiding. There were addresses by A. D. Fitzgerald, mayor of New Haven, Theodore S. Woolsley, president of the park board, and Colonel N. G. Osborne. There was also a discussion of Plant Quarantine No. 37. Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., spoke in favor of the embargo and for co-operation with the federal horticultural board. John W. Duncan, of Spokane, Wash., spoke in opposition to the measure. There was no test vote, but it is believed that the majority of those present are not in favor of plant exclusion.

After the morning session, the visitors, as the guests of Park Superintendent Amrhyn and other business men of New Haven, took automobiles for a tour of the parks and other points of interest. An important work is being carried forward in the park system, by the construction of locks that will keep back the tide-water, and thus reclaim a large area of land that has been periodically flooded. This work was visited. Then, by what to some of the old landscapers used to call a "serpentine" road, the party was taken to East Rock park, far above the city. Here there is an imposing monument, erected in honor of the soldiers that fell in the wars of 1812 and 1861-65. An ample luncheon was served in the pavilion. West Rock park was also visited, where there is a natural curiosity in the shape of a great mass of rock, different from the surrounding strata, that must have been carried there by an iceberg, some time before Connecticut was discovered and settled. The famous "Yale Bowl" was visited. To regular football fans, it is doubtless familiar, but to most of us, it was something new. An amphitheater that can seat over 75,000 people is not an ordinary sight.

CONVENTION NOTES.

Lovers of rugged scenery visiting East Rock park and West Rock park, New Haven, might sing with Lord Byron:

"Away, ye gay landscapes, ye gardens of roses;
In you let the minions of luxury rove;
Restore me the rocks where the snowflake reposes,
For still they are sacred to freedom and love."

Among so many good men, it was easy to find a good one for president, and the convention made an excellent choice, and a worthy one. As secretary-treasurer, President-elect Thompson has been a clever and efficient officer, and his journey all the way from Seattle, shows his interest in the association.

One of the interesting delegates was John Henderson, superintendent of Mount Royal park, Montreal, Canada. He was accompanied by Mrs. Henderson. They are in mourning for a son, killed in the late war. They state that there are but few families in Montreal that have not had similar affliction.

When Harry G. Evans, secretary to the board of park commissioners of Louisville, Kentucky, gets back home, the citizens should give him a banquet and a medal. "The next convention at Louisville" was his slogan, and he never wearied; so at Louisville it will be.

New York was well represented by J. V. Burgevin, E. A. Miller and Herman Merkel and others. E. A. Miller can talk well, so can Herman Merkel, and in addition, it is said that he knows the languages of all the the animals in Bronx park.

Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., attended the session held at New Haven, August 28. Whether or not one agrees with him, it must be acknowledged that he always has something interesting to say, and this occasion was no exception.

Hartford and New Haven vied with each other, in a friendly way, in showing the visiting delegates a good time. Both cities were favored by excellent weather, and both made a great success of their entertainments.

At Hartford, Superintendents Parker and Hollister were indefatigable entertainers and they kept right on to New Haven. At New Haven, Superintendent Amrhyn and his staff were none the less active.

A feature of Hartford, not previously mentioned in these notes, is the beautiful state capitol, and surrounding lawn, trees and shrubbery. All are object lessons for building and landscape architects.

Alexander Cumming, formerly of Elizabeth park, Hartford, now with the Cromwell Gardens, attended both the Hartford and New Haven meetings.

J. F. Foster, Chicago.
Pres. American Ass'n of Park Superintendents.

Secretary-treasurer-elect Griffin has had experience as a director of the association, and will doubtless make good, as he is quick and clever.

We were glad to meet an old friend in the person of J. W. Duncan, formerly of Boston, now superintendent of parks, Spokane, Wash.

Many friends would have been glad to have seen the genial Theodore Wirth, but he was ably represented by his assistant, C. A. Bossen.

Vice-president-elect Busch was literally a noteworthy figure, for he is tall and well proportioned, has a fine face and a level head.

If you have never seen the famous "Yale Bowl" at New Haven, you have missed something worth seeing. It is a work of art.

At the New Haven meeting, Quarantine No. 37 came in for some hot shot; it also had some defenders.

National Association of Gardeners.

As announced in our issue of last week, page 325, the National Association of Gardeners met in annual convention in the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, O., the opening session as previously reported being called to order at 2 p. m., August 26. In the evening J. Otto Thilow, Philadelphia, Pa., gave his beautiful and entertaining illustrated lecture on the "Flora of Hawaii" in the large ball room of the hotel, which proved an interesting feature of the convention.

At the morning session of the second day, the principal speaker was Sydney B. Wilson, vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and he ably presented an interesting and difficult topic, "How Can Gardeners Best Advertise Their Profession." The practical suggestions offered will no doubt be acted upon. Then followed the nominations for officers for ensuing year as follows: President, L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo.; vice-president, "Booster" McIntosh, of Minnesota; P. W. Bopp, New York, and J. H. Francis, Ohio; treasurer, Thomas W. Head, Illinois; secretary, M. H. Ebel, New Jersey. Trustees: Peter Duff, W. H. Waite and Arthur Smith, New Jersey; Robert Weeks, Ohio; Wm. H. Griffiths, Michigan, and Ernedt Guter, Pennsylvania. The morning session closed with a general discussion on proposed co-operation between country estate owners and the association. This, however was finally postponed to be taken up the following day.

At 1 p. m. luncheon was tendered the delegates by the Cleveland committee and was served on the same floor as the ball room. The visiting ladies, some fifteen in number, were entertained at a theatre party at the Hippodrome, while the men were taken on a tour of the parks, stopping at the country estates of F. F. Prentiss, where R. P. Brydon is superintendent, and at S. L. Severance's. Arthur Brown is in charge here and he was pleased with the many complimentary remarks made. There are 90 acres of lawn to be kept in condition, and it was in condition, too. There was a very large kitchen garden, a large and beautiful flower garden, terraces, sunken parterre, Shakesperian garden and six greenhouses in excellent order. H. V. Horwath, landscape architect, was on hand to receive the guests, and the rare trees and shrubs elicited very favorable remarks by the experts present. Mr. Prentiss's estate came in for its share of favorable comment, also.

The banquet was held at the Hollenden at 8 p. m. About 150 were at the tables. Philip Foley, of Chicago, acted as toastmaster and failed not with his usual assortment of bon mots. Congressman M. L. Davey gave a lengthy talk on the beauty of flowers, and especially on the patriotic duty that today faces the gardeners of America. A musical program of popular airs, jass music, and old time songs was rendered while the banquet was in progress.

The principal feature of the session Thursday morning, was in the election of officers, which resulted as follows: L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo., president; M. McIntosh, Minnesota, vice-president; Thomas W. Head, Lake Forest, Ill., treasurer; M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., secretary. Trustees: Peter Duff, Wm. H. Waite, Arthur Smith, Robert Weeks, and Wm. H. Griffiths.

Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson then offered the association a slogan which she supported with a short talk. Her idea was that "Make America Beautiful" said for the gardeners what the florists' slogan, "Say it with Flowers," represented to the latter. The whole essence of the life work of the National Association of Gardeners is to "beautify America," so make it assertive. Make it emphatic. "Make America Beutiful." Use it as a trade mark. Use it in all correspondence. She hoped it would prove as great a boon to the gardeners as "Say It With Flowers" has been to the florists.

After a discussion of Quarantine No. 37, the association adopted the same recommendations as the Society of American Florists did last week in Detroit. It was referred to the service bureau for action.

Mr. Preston of the federal board for the vocational training of disabled soldiers spoke at the session. He made a plea for the gardeners to use as many of these boys as they could, stating that the government would stand the expense of training and equiping them to enable them to do the work. M. C. Ebel, P. W. Popp, and W. J. Sealey were appointed a committee to work in conjunction with the government in carrying out this matter as far as practical.

A general discussion took place about financing of the project. It was sug-the proposed service bureau, and the gested that employers be asked to take out sustaining memberships as they could easily secure gardeners by belonging to the association. M. C. Ebel urged co-operation between landscape architects and gardeners, and said it would work for the betterment of both.

The convention then adjourned and luncheon was served in the Lounge. Congressman M. L. Davey here gave his address on "The Future of Horticulture." Among other things, Mr. Davey spoke on Quarantine 37. After giving a clear insight into the workings of a congressman's heart, he said that the thing to do to get impartial and just action on Quarantine 37 was for each man to write to his congressman, asking for a hearing before the agricultural committee before congress.

The bowling contest took place at the Calumet alleys and resulted in the Lake Forest team coming in first, New York second and Cleveland third.

The local committees in charge of arrangements were:

R. P. Brydon, general chairman; J. H. Francis, secretary.

Entertainment—W. E. Cock, T. M. Rowe, H. P. Rapley, R. Poole.

Finance—J. Fisher, L. Webb, T. M. Rowe.

Hotel Reservation and Registration—J. Fisher, P. Longland, H. Rapley.

Banquet—W. E. Cook, J. Hamilton, A. Brown.

CONVENTION NOTES.

Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O., decorated the stage with palms, ferns and cherries. He also had a fine display of the Cleveland cherry and Oregon Queen. A beautiful specimen of Rhapsis flabelliformis, which was 11 to 12 feet high and in a 24-inch tub, was placed in the center of the lobby of the hotel and was greatly admired for its perfection. This was also exhibited by Carl Hagenburger.

The only woman delegate present—in fact, the only woman member of the association—was Mrs. J. MacMahan of Tuxedo Park, N. Y. She is the only superintendent of an estate, and has charge of the Geo. F. Baker property, containing some 40 acres, and manages not only the kitchen garden, but some 7,000 feet of glass. When her husband died, she took his place and has conducted it to the satisfaction of Mr. Baker ever since. She has two daughters, one a high school teacher and the other still in school. Mrs. MacMahan specializes in orchid growing.

An interesting display was the I. J. Grullemans Co., exhibit of Gladiolus primulinus. The exhibit contained pure yellow as well as pure white, and a large collection of other shades. They have some 40 acres devoted to gladioli and expect some good results from hybridizing that is now going forward on the farm. Their nurseries are located at Avon-on-the-Lake, O.

The exhibit of John Davey, the tree doctor, of bugs and insects, both live and dead, proved to be of great interest to all the gardeners and elicited much comment. Cross sections and pieces of bark showed the deadly result of insect work. Professor Sharer and Mr. Hollister were in charge of the exhibit.

Dahlia Show at San Francisco.

The chief attraction in floral circles in San Francisco, Calif., during the week of August 17 was the dahlia exhibition of the Park Presidio Dahlia Society of that city, which attracted large numbers of dahlia enthusiasts. The show was officially endorsed by the Dahlia Society of California. F. C. Burns and A. Twitchett acted as judges and their decisions were received with general satisfaction. Golden Gate park staged a very creditable display of all the standard varieties. Many of the new sorts were also on exhibition. R. C. McWhirter, proprietor of the Star Dahlia Gardens, made a very large and varied showing. Probably the best in his exhibit was his new seedling, Princess Pat. The flowers shown were of great size and substance. It looks like a good commercial variety. The Steinway Terrace Dahlia Gardens, of Oakland, staged another interesting group. Jean C. Hill, the owner, is deserving of much praise for the fine quality of the stock shown. The exhibit of the Sea Cliff Dahlia Gardens was very extensive and was staged in excellent shape. J. W. Davis also made a splendid showing, his flowers being unusually good. A. Twitchett staged some good stock not for competition. Mrs. Edna Spence, of Oakland, made an interesting display of many of her own varieties. A. Hodgkins' exhibit was of the highest quality and tastily arranged. Much credit is due Philip Werner for his untiring efforts to make the show the great success it proved to be. Due to other business cares, his usual fine exhibit was missing this year, but he will double his efforts next season. The awards were as follows:

Best collection—Alexander Simpson, first; H. T. Hennig, second.

Best window display—A. McCormick.

Best collection cactus varieties—H. T. Hennig, first; H. M. Smith, second.

Best collection, decorative—H. T. Hennig, first; A. McCormick, second.

Best collection, peony varieties—A. Simpson, first; H. T. Hennig, second.

Best collection pompon varieties—H. T. Hennig, first.

Best collection collarette varieties—H. M. Smith, first; A. Simpson, second.

Best vase, singles—H. T. Hennig, first.

Best three red—H. T. Hennig, first; H. M. Smith, second.

Best three yellow—H. T. Hennig, first; H. M. Smith, second.

Best three pink—H. T. Hennig, first.

Best three cactus—Ernest Westerlins, first; H. T. Hennig, second; A. Simpson, third.

Best collection originated in California—A. Simpson, first; H. T. Hennig, second.

Included in the prizes were a number of handsome silver cups, among the donors being C. C. Morse & Co., the Hallowell Seed Co., the Dahlia Society of California, Frank D. Pelicano and Cypress Lawn cemetery.

After inspecting all of the new varieties, it was the opinion of the most critical enthusiasts that Dr. Frank Tevis, Frank Pelicano's seedling, was by far the best dahlia shown in the exhibition.

National Publicity for Flowers.

With the enthusiasm expressed at the Detroit convention of the society over the very excellent results forthcoming from the publicity campaign, the promotion of the fund of $100,000 should take on new life. Nobody now has any doubt as to the efficiency of the campaign, and the collection of the fund simmers down to the florist's own conscientious thought as to how much he shall give. Our workers fully believe that every florist intends to pay his way into this marvelous project for the stimulation of his business, and if you, Mr. Reader, have not already subscribed, rest assured that your subscription is expected.

Your secretary was delighted a day or two after his return to New York from the convention, to receive the following letter from one of the "bright lights" in the trade: "Making good my promise of a year or so ago, of contributing to the publicity campaign, I am sending you a check for $500 for the publicity committee. You are surely doing good work, and I admire your zeal. Cordially yours, H. H. Battles, Philadelphia, Pa."

The florist who is wondering what amount he should subscribe need not hesitate. If he thinks later that he has "under-subscribed," he can very easily make an additional subscription. Such additional aid is weekly to be noted in the list which our good friends, the trade papers, publish in practically every one of their issues.

We have more than once called attention to the value of community effort in raising subscriptions to the fund. It is only fitting that we should give an instance of what a little effort can produce in this direction: J. W. Grandy, the Norfolk, Va., retail florist, was a little piqued over the small showing made in our published subscription list by the florists of his state, and made it his duty to stir things up a bit, with the result that he increased the four year subscriptions about one thousand dollars. There are many of us in other communities who could do the same. No longer need there be the feeling that our money is buying "a pig in a poke," for we are overwhelmed with assurances that the campaign benefits are directly felt.

The publicity committees are now called upon to vote large appropriations for publicity which will be greatly needed in the coming season. It is to the best interests of the trade to see that the money for all this is forthcoming.

Your promotion bureau would like to hear from florists having sites where could be located big bill board signs carrying the slogan "Say it with Flowers." Many florists are located along railroads and much travelled highways where such signs could be advantageously displayed. Arrangements have been made whereby such a sign can be provided for about $50, made of metal, in knock-down form, and as handsome as a skilled artist can make it. It is 7½ feet high by 20 feet in length, and decidedly ornamental. Your committees will furnish one for the price named, but, of course, cannot father any other expense attaching to it. Quite a few have already made request for a sign, and our committees have felt warranted in entering into a contract which will allow of the supply of signs at the low price mentioned. The secretary will be pleased to furnish any further information on this subject which may be desired.

FLORISTS in Germany are quite prosperous according to soldiers recently returned.

EXPRESS shipments, that formerly required two days between New York and Chicago, now take five days.

THE Ladies Society of American Florists scored four life members and 40 new annual members at the Detroit convention.

Personal.

The steam yacht, United States, of Col. H. R. Green, son of the late Mrs. Hetty Green, has been sunk off New Bedford, Mass. The ship cost from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 and will be floated.

C. B. Whitnall, Milwaukee, Wis., is on an inspection tour of bathing beaches at Chicago and Detroit in the interest of his home city.

McCallum Exhibit at S. A. F. Convention.

Through oversight, the excellent exhibit of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., in the trade section at the recent Detroit convention, was omitted from the list of exhibitors appearing in our issue of August 23, page 264. This attractively arranged display contained a most complete showing of holiday novelties in great variety, ribbons, chiffons, baskets, artificial flowers, evergreens and florists' supplies in general, with George McCallum, E. J. McCallum, H. L. Blend, Ross E. Adgate, Ralph E. Gay and Earl C. Tipton on hand to greet old friends and welcome new ones.

Parcel Post Educational Campaign.

Postmaster William B. Carlile at Chicago, has announced that a campaign has been started to interest the "occasional mailer" in the proper preparation and addressing of parcels, and to this end a pamphlet has been issued, entitled, "Thrift in Mailing," containing many practical hints, the observance of which will reduce the number of badly packed and addressed parcels and aid in greater efficiency in the handling of more than a million packages a day by the Chicago postal authorities. Attention is directed to proper methods of packing, wrapping and tying, the necessity of a full and legible address, what articles are liable to be crushed or broken, containers for liquids or shipments that will rot, and the domestic parcel post rates for postage and insurance.

Irrigation Land in Wyoming Open.

The Secretary of the Interior will on October 9, open for entry a tract of land containing 79 farm units at Powell, Wyo., in the Shoshone irrigation project. The irrigation system has been constructed and water will be available for preparing the land this fall. About 150,000 acres are embraced in the Shoshone project located in northwestern Wyoming. More than 33,000 acres included in 624 farms are now in cultivation and in 1918 produced crops valued at $1,370,000. Numerous transfers of improved ranches have been made at prices ranging from $200 to $300 per acre.

In order to file on one of these farms, it is necessary to execute a water right application upon a form provided for that purpose, and to deposit therewith five per cent of the construction charge, which has been fixed at $90 per irrigable acre. Applications may be filed with the project manager of the United States reclamation service in person, by mail, or otherwise, within a period of five days ending October 9, 1919.

Fire Destroys Westcott Farm Buildings.

A bad fire occurred, August 23, at Commodore John Westcott's farm, Waretown, N. J., resulting in the loss of the cow and horse stables, the barn, the wagon sheds, and other outbuildings and their contents, including wagons, harness, farming implements, etc., and 25 tons of newly stored hay. The gray mare, so familiar to Mr. Westcott's summer visitors, lost her life, but the bay horse was rescued. The other live stock fortunately happened to be out in the fields when the fire started. The loss on the buildings and contents is estimated at $5,000. The place carried no insurance. The sympathy of the trade is freely extended to Commodore Westcott in his misfortune. The dwelling house and its surroundings on the farm escaped injury as the wind was from the northwest. This was fortunate as if it had been from from the southeast everything would have gone. Origin of the fire is unknown, but supposed to be from the accidental dropping of a match in the horse stable. Of course the bungalow also escaped, it being about a half mile nearer the shore.

Trade Exhibition Report.

The report of the judges of Sections C and D of the trade exhibition, boilers, heating apparatus and greenhouse structures, at the Detroit convention, August 19-21, which failed to reach us in time for publication in connection with other reports in our issue of August 30, page 316, is as follows:

Plant Quarantine Amendments.

Attention is called by C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, to amendments of the regulations supplemental to Plant Quarantine No. 37:

Amendment No. 1 applies to regulation No. 3, and provides that the requirement as to freedom from sand, soil, or earth shall not apply to sand, soil, or earth used for packing the articles enumerated in item No. 1 of this regulation when such sand, soil or earth has been previously sterilized in accordance with methods prescribed by the federal horticultural board under the supervision of a duly authorized inspector of the country of origin. Such sterilization shall be certified to by the duly authorized inspector of the country of origin.

Amendment No. 2 applies to regulation No. 14, and provides for special permits for the importation, in limited quantities, of prohibited stock, under safeguards to be prescribed in such permits, of nursery stock and other plants and seeds not covered by the preceding regulations, for the purpose of keeping the country supplied with new varieties and necessary propagating stock; provided that this shall not apply to nursery stock and other plants and seeds covered by special quarantines and other restrictive orders now in force, nor to such as may hereafter be made the subject of special quarantines.

BIG SUPPLY MEETS WITH SLOW DEMAND.

This has been a rather dull week among all the stores, and as a consequence, there has been a great congestion of flowers in the wholesale market. Asters have probably suffered more than any other flower, great quantities of which have had a ride in the garbage wagon. It is only the very finest stock that receives any consideration by the buyer at all. Any price offered is eagerly accepted. Some of the early chrysanthemums, such as Golden Glow and Monrovia, have also had a hard time of it. The supply was so heavy that it was impossible to dispose of all arrivals. The above named varieties are now about over for the season, and we have instead Chrysolora, Unaka and and fine incurved bronze. All these varieties are of the largest size and command good prizes. These are all good shipping sorts and large quantities are moved out of the city every day. Very few white chrysanthemums are to be had as yet, but they are not missed, owing to the large supply of other stock. Roses are very plentiful, every variety being represented with large arrivals. Russell is rapidly improving in quality and is much sought for by the buying public. The supply of Hadley and Hoosier Beauty is quite heavy. Ophelia can be had in any quantity. Some extra good Brunners are also coming in. Irish Elegance is being largely used for basket work. Baby roses are about equal to the demand. Gladioli are holding up wonderfully well after a long season. The stock coming in is of the finest quality. Nearly every color is represented. Sweet peas are about over for the period, and very few good ones are now being offered in any quantity. There is a large supply of dahlias, but this stock is not being handled in any quantity by the stores. Carnations are on the short side, and probably will continue so until the new crop appears. Good prices are being received for first-class stock. Quite a few water lilies are noticed, and help greatly in window arrangements. Tritomas are being freely offered, and may be seen everywhere. Zinnias are not so much in evidence as in former years. The early chrysanthemums seem to have crowded them out of the market this season. Gardenias and orchids are completely out of the market. Some very good Pandanus pandurata have been coming in, and are quickly bought up. There are a few begonias and cyclamens. French hybrid hydrangeas in pots are much in favor. The supply of Bostons keeps up steadily. There is always a firm demand for this fern and its sports. The fern growers have plenty of stock, but the supply of asparagus is shortening up considerably.

NOTES.

Mrs. E. W. Lymberry, of San Mateo, reports the Bessie Boston Dahlia Gardens are getting plenty of publicity through the country. The interview with her in the San Francisco News was syndicated and is appearing in over 100 newspapers scattered throughout the United States. She disclaims much of the interview, however. The Prizma, a New York moving picture company, which has a new color process, has released a film of the Bessie Boston Gardens which was taken two summers ago. The pictures are, on a whole, most beautiful. They are being shown at the present time at most of the large eastern cities. The first exhibition in California was at Burlingame, and in the near future, will be shown at some of the largest theatres in this city.

The annual picnic of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will be held at Madrome park in Alameda county, Sunday, September 7. Many of the stores will close on that day to give their employes and their families an opportunity to attend the annual reunion. Fine music has been engaged, and an excellent prize list has been decided upon for the games. Boats will leave the foot of Market street every half hour, and the committee in charge is doing everything in its power to make it a great success.

With the arrival of Chrysolora, chrysanthemum shipping may be fairly said to be started for the season. This sterling variety has, since its introduction, been the leading shipping variety we have and its appearance is always hailed with delight by both wholesaler and retailer. There is no better keeper or shipper handled here. A large quantity will be available for shipping this season.

The Oakland dahlia show will be held in that city September 21-23. The committee in charge is working diligently to make it a great success, and is having the assistance of all the leading dahlia specialists. All the leading growers in this section have applied for space, and there is no question but that it will be a wonderful show.

Podesta & Baldocchi lost one of their automobile delivery wagons last Sunday, when it was struck and practically demolished by a street car. Two employes, who were in the auto at the time of the collision were seriously injured and are in local hospitals. Late reports have it that they are out of danger and will soon be about again.

The store of the Nelligan Sisters, on Sutter street, has been transformed by the decorators into one of the very attractive ones in this city. These young ladies are making a wonderful success since acquiring the business of the Shibley Floral Co. and are sparing no expense in fitting up the establishment.

The Largest Growers of Flowers in the World.

Albert O. Stein has been showing a lot of finely berried cratægus this week. The beautiful colored orange berries liberally cover the plant. They are immensely popular and are being generously used in his decorative work. Some fine vases of tritomas are also being shown at this store.

Chas. Staffenback, on Polk street, has added a handsome new closed car to his delivery service. This store is radiant with chrysanthemums. He says he expects a record breaking demand this fall and is preparing to handle the business in the most up to date manner.

Edgar McLellan, son of E. W. McLellan, of Burlingame, had the misfortune to strike a bicyclist, while driving his father's automobile, and fatally injure him. The accident was unavoidable and much sympathy is being extended to the young man over the affair.

The Art Floral Company has a large number of painters and decorators at work on the interior of their store. All the painting is being done in white and gold. This firm reports a steady trade right along, particularly in funeral work.

Joseph Scatena, of the Art Floral Co., brought down a fine buck during a hunt in the Morin county hills last Sunday. Joe is an enthusiastic hunter, and will try his luck in the mountains of San Mateo county next Sunday.

On September 9, the city of Santa Rosa will hold its annual dahlia show. The same people who have made the chrysanthemum shows so popular here are planning this exhibition. The large entry list assures success.

SUPPLY SHOWS GENERAL IMPROVEMENT.

The stock on the local market is more plentiful and of improved quality. Gladioli are numerous, and the same is true of asters, both showing good form. Russell and Ophelia roses, while in fair supply, are not sufficient to meet the demand. Business in general is on the up grade and all florists are looking forward to a good season.

NOTES.

Fred Fromhold, formerly in the Muehlebach hotel, is now located in the Arglye building, 12th and McGee streets. The stand in the hotel is now being conducted by Wm. Nehf, formerly with W. L. Rock Flower Co.

A. Mohr has his poinsettias and Cincinnati begonias coming on in excellent shape. He has graduated from driver of a Ford to a nice Buick Six.

A. Newell says everything at his establishment is moving satisfactorily. Both funeral and hospital orders are heavy.

The Pinehurst Gardens report stock better and business steadily improving, especially the shipping demand.

H. Kusik & Co. are handling good stocks of gladioli, roses and asters. The demand is reported excellent.

GLADIOLI ARE IN HEAVY SUPPLY.

Gladioli are in heavy supply and are being sold in large lots at lower prices than they have been the early part of this season. Most of the local stock is showing the effects of the past hot weather, but the bulk of the Michigan cut is arriving in good condition and is disposed of much quicker. Asters are in good supply and are moving well considering the large quantity of other stock offered. Carnations are gradually becoming a factor in the market again and there is a good offering of stock of fine quality available in this line for so early in the season. American Beauty roses are a trifle more plentiful, but the demand appears to keep pace with the supply, for they continue to clean up regularly at very satisfactory figures. Mrs. Chas. Russell are moving nicely and so is Columbia. Premier is included in the shipments in fair sized quantities and is in good demand. Milady, Sunburst, Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant and several of the other varieties grown for this market are more plentiful and are improving steadily in quality. Orchids are none too numerous and the supply of lily of the valley is limited. Calendulas are to be had and a few snapdragons are seen. Lilies are in short supply taking the market as a whole and clean up early. Colored pond lilies, statice and other miscellaneous stock are offered but in limited quantities. Greens are plentiful. The dealers are all looking forward to a busy fall season and are wondering if the demand will be equal to the supply. There has been considerable new glass put up the past season and with the houses all operating that were closed down last year, it means that a large quantity of stock will have to be marketed. Judging from the preparations that are being made on all sides by the retailers and the amount of supplies they are buying it appears that every one is anticipating a big season. Business has taken a decided change for the better at this writing, September 3, consequently stock is not as plentiful as it has been.

NOTES.

There are twenty-nine firms in the trade advertising in the latest classified telephone directory and only one, John A. Michal, 7045 Stony Island avenue, is using the national slogan, "Say it with Flowers." The firms represented are large ones, most of whom have contributed to the national publicity fund but for some reason or other have overlooked the opportunity to link their names to the already famous slogan.

It is rumored that one of the old established retail concerns in this city will change hands in the near future. Particulars later. There are several other changes pending, which will be ready for publication soon.

Miss Zandra Anderson has returned from a visit in the east and is again attending to her duties at the John Kruchten Co.'s store. The Kruchten store looks quite classy in its new dress of paint.

The Joseph Foerster Co.'s store is in the hands of the decorators this week. L. L. Loeser is back on the job at this establishment after enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., and family are back from a 3,200 mile auto trip through the northwest which included a visit with relatives in North Dakota.

Morris Grossberg, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co., returned last week from a trip through Wisconsin, and is now calling on the trade in Missouri.

Andrew Chronis, of the Alpha Floral Co., is back from a pleasant vacation in Michigan which included a visit to the S. A. F. convention at Detroit.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report a great improvement in trade the past week. Gladioli and asters are plentiful here, but clean up nicely each day.

GENERAL DEMAND EXTREMELY QUIET.

Market conditions the past week were at low ebb. The supply of roses, gladioli and asters were very heavy, and the demand in general quiet, this no doubt being caused by so many taking advantage of the end of the months for vacation, for with school time rapidly approaching, most of the summer resorters will return, which means the opening of the season 1919-20 for the florists. We honestly believe what has been printed and said so often of late; namely, that it will be good policy to produce as much high grade stock, either in cut flowers or as pot plants, as possible, for prospects look good for the future.

NOTES.

The state fair will be held in this city, September 8-12. A bigger and better fair is promised than ever before. Art. Leidiger, of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., has again been named assistant superintendent in the horticultural class, while James Mathewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; A. Martini, Lake Geneva, Wis.; Nic. Zweifel and James Livingstone, local, will officiate as judges.

On Friday, September 12, the first annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association will be held in this city. As it is state fair week, the attendance ought to include nearly every member, and applications for membership from as many more.

A. Reinhardt, of North Milwaukee, is about the only carnation grower who has field grown plants to offer for sale in quantity, and it is needless to say that they have been booked up and over for some time past.

A. F. Kellner, who reports having had a fine time at the Detroit convention, is busy planning decorations for the coming fall openings at all the greater downtown department stores.

Outdoor vegetation is again showing the effects of the long drought. While it has threatened rain often, we are shy the moisture.

Louis Otto, of Oshkosh, Wis., has been in town trying to pick up a quantity of field grown carnation plants.

Visitors: Mrs. McGovern, Winnipeg, Canada; C. Loveridge, Peoria, Ill.; M. Kettenbeil, of the Ingot Flower Shop, Calumet, Mich.

E. O.

New Haven, Conn.

The event of the past week in horticultural circles, which broke the monotony of "summer dullness," was the visit, August 27-28, of the park superintendents. One not a resident of New Haven, can hope that the visitors favorably impressed the citizens; the citizens were most hospitable and painstaking for the welfare of the visitors.

NOTES.

With attending to his store and range in this city, and his recently acquired range at Westerly, R. I., Charles Munro is a busy man. The Westerly range, formerly conducted by S. J. Reuter & Son, contains over 200,000 square feet of glass. It is now conducted as Munro, Incorporated. A large stock of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums is being grown, and it is aimed to produce everything in cut flowers. The name of the New Haven business has not been changed, and will remain as heretofore, Charles Munro.

At the Meyers Flower Shop, we found activity and evidence of prosperity. Mr. Meyers is an optimist, and has recently purchased a new automobile and is looking forward to good business for the coming season.

Andrew McCrea, 221 Meadow street, is yet a comparatively young man, but he has been in business for quite a number of years, and has a good store. In addition to cut flowers, he keeps a stock of seeds.

Henry Kelsey now conducts the Sherman avenue range, formerly occupied by the Doolittle Floral Co.

At the store of the S. H. Moore Co., fine stock was noticed and conditions spoke of prosperity.

J. J. McQuiggan has an excellent location at 123 Church street, and seems prosperous.

John N. Champion and wife are spending their vacation in Maine.

DEMAND POOREST DURING SEASON.

Market conditions showed an improvement last week in regard to the supply, but the demand has never been poorer through the present season than it was during the last week of August. Counter trade was very slack, and there were only a few weddings to break the monotony, while funeral work, the mainstay of the florist in the summer season, was not heavy enough to keep the stock on the move that arrived each day. There was a great improvement noted in the quality of the roses from the young stock last week, and there was also a very noticeable increase in the quantity of blooms arriving on the market. The quality and length of stem in the asters is superior to anything that had been offered on the market up to this time. There are a few carnations offered, but they are hardly to be reckoned with, as yet. There are some gladioli of excellent quality that command good prices, but they do not seem to be as popular as asters. A large variety of outdoor flowers include principally larkspur, verbenas, marigolds, zinnias, golden glow, and hydrangeas. A large number of weddings are booked for September, especially for the first part of the month, and a good business is expected by all the florists during the busy fall season.

NOTES.

Miss Flick, of the Flick Floral Co., returned to her duties at the store September 1, after a two months' vacation, which she spent in Toledo, O., and on a lake trip to the Thousand Islands. The Flick Floral Co. had a heavy call for funeral work on Labor day and was also busy with weddings which kept the store force working on that holiday.

The W. J. & M. S. Vesey greenhouses are cutting some fine cattleyas, oncidiums and vandas. This firm has several houses of the new rose, Premier, which is coming along in fine shape.

H. K

Hartford, Conn.

One of the interesting florists of Hartford is Robert Marchant, born in England 85 years ago, and who has been a resident of Hartford for 70 years. He is yet active for a man of his age and has a fund of information concerning the early years of his residence here. One son, Robert W., returned in May from France, after a year's service in the American army. He was on the fighting front for 141 days and came out unhurt. Another son, George B., is now on vacation, visiting Chicago and other western points. Mrs. Marchant, who is some years younger than her husband, is also taking a vacation.

David Spear, of Spear & McManus, is spending his vacation at Gloucester, Mass. In his absence, his partner Joseph McManus is busy with the regular business and at the same time keeping an eye on the painters and decorators that are making the interior of the store look as good as new. On Mr. Spear's return Mac will take his vacation.

Calling on a number of commercial florists we found them prosperous. At both John Coombs' stores, business seemed active for the summer season. At the range, we found Mr. Coombs somewhat under the weather, so to speak, with rheumatism, but he keeps about. The retail business is ably managed by his son.

In West Hartford, at the Whiting greenhouses, now conducted by Carl Peterson, we found good stock. Mr. Peterson is cutting Columbia roses and is well pleased with the variety.

The American Association of Park Superintendents, as elsewhere noted, opened their convention in this city and were given a cordial reception.

Albert J. Brodrib has an attractive store at 639 Main street, and seems up to date.

DULLEST MONTH OF SEASON ENDS.

The week just ended has seen the close of the dullest month of the year. Several things having contributed to the same. The principal reason was the street car strike just ended when not a car moved for two weeks, paralyzing business in the downtown section. American Beauties are arriving in large quantity, and at times are hard to move. Frances Scott Key, Russell and Columbia proved the favorites, and are of mixed season quality. Ophelia, Sunburst and Hilda remained a drug on the market. A few of the new crop of carnations are beginning to arrive and clean up daily. This market was flooded with asters the past week, good, bad and indifferent. It was no trouble to dispose of the best of them, but it was impossible to move the shorts and cripples. Gladioli still remain strong, with a fairly good sale. Greens are arriving in better shape, with supply and demand about equal.

NOTES.

With prospects bright for clearing up of the labor situation in the railroad and steel industries, everything points to the most prosperous season in the history of the business in this district, and all the trade, both wholesale and retail, are preparing to handle same.

Randolph & McClements report having booked several large out-of-town weddings for the month of September and are predicting the largest season in their history.

E. C. Ludwig is very chesty these days, as his gladioli exhibit took second prize at the Detroit exhibition.

Mrs. A. Briggs, of the North Side, is spending her vacation getting close to nature down on the farm.

J. W. Glenn of Kittanning, Pa., opened his new store September 1.

TRADE CONTINUES DULL.

Business during the past two weeks has been very dull with little activity in funeral work. Gladioli are plentiful, with Schwaben the prime favorite this summer due to fine quality and color. Roses are plentiful, but there is no oversupply. Reds are very scarce. Asters are being received in great numbers and are useful in clusters and design work. Few garden flowers are now available.

NOTES.

Charles Gow is spending a short time with the Canadian troops at Niagara-on-the-Lake, the division being the same with which he fought two years in France, participating in several important battles. He will also visit Toronto.

George T. Boucher is back after attending the Detroit convention and a trip to Chicago. He has installed some new office fixtures at his establishment.

Felix Alberts had an excellent display of gladioli in long hanging containers which attracted favorable comment.

Horace J. Head, after attending trade conventions in Toronto, Ont., and Detroit, Mich., has returned to this city.

FLORISTS' CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

The club meeting at Hotel Statler, August 29, brought out a good attendance of the members. The annual election of officers and the adjustment of affairs in connection with the S. A. F. convention were the main features of the proceedings. The officers elected for the following year are: J. F. Sullivan, president; M. Bloy, vice-president; Harry Taylor, secretary; J. K. Stock, treasurer.

Many letters were read from visitors who attended the convention, praising the hospitality and perfected local arrangements made by the Detroit florists for the multitude of visitors, all of whom apparently enjoyed their stay in our beautiful city and highly appreciated the value of what has been generally designated the most successful convention in the society's history. E. A. Fetters, J. K. Stock, M. Bloy, and Robert Rahaley were appointed a committee to audit and pay all bills incurred by the club in the local management of the convention.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted, conveying to the Hotel Statler the club's thanks and appreciation for the admirable way the hotel management cared for the great throng of florists and their families who favored this popular place with their patronage during convention week. Letters of acknowledgment were also ordered sent to many firms whose generosity helped to make the work of the local boys easier of accomplishment. J. F. S.

GLADIOLI AND ASTERS LEAD GOOD SUPPLY.

The market is well supplied with a good assortment of stock, gladioli and asters holding the lead in the outdoor varieties, other offerings including sweet peas, gypsophilas, phlox, hydrangeas, snapdragons, water lilies, zinnias, coxcombs and spiraeas. Carnations are beginning to arrive, but are still short stemmed, although the flowers are excellent. Roses have been plentiful the past week with demand good. American Beauty in all grades are excellent. Lily of the valley is the scarce item, swainsona being used as a substitute.

NOTES.

The funeral of Col. Weybrecht, "food poison" victim of Alliance, O., a brother of L. L. Lamborn, of the Lamborn Floral Co., that city, was the occasion for an excellent call for American Beauty roses.

T. B. Stroup, of New Philadelphia, O., has been notified that his automobile, stolen some time ago, has been recovered at Detroit, Mich.

Clarence McFarland, 7030 Lawrence avenue, is to be married in the near future. The trade extends congratulations.

Fred A. Zenke, of the Excell Laboratories, Chicago, was a visitor this week, attending the gardeners' convention.

James McLaughlin and Edgar Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., are at present enjoying vacations. C. F. B.

Louisville, Ky.

STREET CAR STRIKE HURTS TRADE.

The street car strike in this city is having a serious effect on business. There is no settlement in sight after a tie-up of two weeks. Dahlias have made their appearance. The stems are rather short, but the flowers are good. There is a shortage of carnation plants, and many of the florists are buying to supply their needs.

NOTES.

E. G. Reimers & Son met with a serious loss recently when 1,500 feet of glass was broken by hail.

The F. Walker Co. has finished planting carnations in the benches.

Anders Rasmussen is cutting excellent Premier and Columbia roses at his range in New Albany. H. G. W.

AUGUST HAS DULL ENDING.

Not much is expected of the business of the last week in August, and while few were agreeably disappointed, there was nothing to cause price inflation. It is agreed that the demand was better than for the same period a year ago; also, that the supply was considerably larger and of higher grade stock. Asters are now leading, they being at their height. Stock in the higher grades was never finer at this season. Both greenhouse and outdoor flowers appear to be at their very best. There is, as usual, a lot of mediocre stock, mostly field grown, which goes to street men at very low prices. Gladioli are still seen in quantity, some of them very fine. The choicer varieties are in demand at fair prices, the balance is joblotted out at week ends to clean up. Summer cosmos is plentiful and in fair demand. Delphinium Bella Donna is surprisingly good for the season. Tritomas are in fair demand. Columbia is the best rose. Mrs. Russell seems a close second. Premier looks very good so far, and is improving each week. White roses are scarce American Beauties are gaining, some very fair stock with 36-inch stems now being offered. There are really good Easter lilies from the few bulbs that came over last spring. Japanese rubrum and album are quite plentiful. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are offered of good quality, all of which find buyers.

CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held at the Adelphia hotel, September 2, and proved one of the best attended and most interesting of any at this season of the year. Different angles of the Detroit convention were touched on by Arthur Niessen, Charles Grakelow and President Harvey, all of whom were unanimous as to the great work accomplished. The first week in October was decided upon as the time when a "Say it With Flowers" campaign and other important publicity work will be taken up by a committee. Fifteen new names were presented for membership.

PACKING STANDARDS.

It would seem as if there should be one best way of packing gladioli for shipment to the market. Each grower appears to have a method of his own. Some pack in peach baskets, the flower spikes packed closely in one basket with the others inverted over top to protect them. Others use the ordinary corrugated pasteboard box, in which the sprays are laid close together. A crated wooden box, in which the flowers, wrapped in paper in bundles of one dozen, are stood up, appears to carry them very well, as they do not crush one another with their weight and the box always stands upright. Another good package that seems to work well, is a ventilated barrel, in which the dozens, wrapped in paper, are stood up until the space is compactly filled. Burlap is then tied over the top. Of the above plans, the crated box or burlapped barrel appears to be the best, as in both, the bundles stand upright and do not, by their weight, crush others, as is the case when they are packed laid down. It would seem that a matter so important to the growers would receive their best consideration, but while each season shows some improvement, many of them go on, year after year, in the way to which they are accustomed, while a study of the situation, and the adoption of the best system, would add from 10 to 20 per cent to their receipts.

HANDLING THE SURPLUS.

Why do not the growers, the wholesalers and retailers get together at periods of the year when there is an apparent surplus due? Most of the periods of overproduction can be marked now on the calendar of the coming year. Why not turn these opportunities to good account? Sell the flowers when they are fresh, daily as they come in, and not hoard until the end of the week and dump them faded as they then are, at any old price to the street men, to work off and disgust the people who buy them? There is no demand on the street for these flowers. They are sold simply because placed before the people who are induced to buy because they see them and the price is low. Intelligently laid and carried out plans to handle this stock, while fresh, through all the stores, methods that would insure more business to the retailers and better prices to the growers, are surely within the bounds of reasonable possibility. All that is necessary is intelligent co-operation of the various branches of the trade. It requires initiative and energy. It will not come of itself, or stay without the hustle to keep it going. It is possible to sell twice the quantity of plants and cut flowers that are now handled annually in this country. It is to be done by each individual retailer being on the job, not just when the work is forced on him, but ever ready by the inviting appearance of his store and stock to take advantage of every opportunity.

NOTES.

The big 600-foot house of the Jos. Heacock Co., at Roelfs, is well under way, half of the iron work being now up. It is the intention to complete one half as soon as possible. So that propagation of young roses may be going on and enough stock on hand to plant the whole house as soon as completed. A catch crop of sweet peas will also be grown.

Edward Reid believes that all cut flowers could be handled with profit, and the supply kept below the demand, with a proper co-operation of all lines in the trade. Right you are, Edward. Go to it!

John Berger, of Berger Bros., in displaying a vase of zinnias, said they are one of the finest of the summer cut flowers, but do not seem to be appreciated as they should by the average retailer.

C. U. Liggit declares that the demand for all kinds of florists' plant stock is much greater than the supply, field grown carnations being almost out of the market.

Wm. Gibson, with Mills, the Florist, Jacksonville, Fla., was a visitor last week. He looks well and reports business "O. K." in that land of palms and oranges.

Carl Ribsam, Trenton, N. J., in town last week, declares the past summer the best his firm ever experienced. Stanley Giles, Reading, Pa., was also a visitor.

DULL SEPTEMBER OPENING EXPECTED.

Business was dull during the past week, and the outlook for the first week of September is dark. It seems that about all the people that could get away, left the city August 30-31. Big "Bill" Egan, station master at the Pennsylvania Terminal, has been railroading for many years, and knows a lot about crowds, but the one August 30 came near "getting his goat." They went to Atlantic City, Norfolk, Washington and the Long Island resorts, most everywhere in fact, the leading idea being to go some place. At the Grand Central the rush over the New York Central and the New Haven was enormous. The D. L. & W., Erie, Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley roads also transported their thousands. Taking into consideration that many of these people will remain away for a week or more, their trade, for the time, is lost to all lines of business in this city, and people that can afford to travel, can afford to buy flowers. The rose supply for the past week was not heavy, as the weather turned quite cool on the evening of August 25 and so continued until the 30th., when there was heavy rain. But in the light of our previous statement, there was but little doing in roses or other flowers on that day. Throughout the week, it was very hard to move American Beauties, even at low figures. A few of the best teas, such as Scott Key, Columbia and Ophelia brought fair prices for the season, but there was always a surplus. The same can be said of the best dahlias and gladioli. Asters were so plentiful that even the best went cheap. Quantities of tritomas (red hot pokers), have been arriving. This season, they are miserably poor. When good, if not particularly useful, they serve as an attraction in the show windows, but this year the tips are a sickly green. The natural conclusion is that the furnace was not hot enough. There is little change in the orchid situation, prices on cattleyas keeping at $1 per flower, and upward. Quantities of cosmos and various other outdoor stock are seen and some of them sell.

September 1.—For obvious reasons, there is little doing this morning that can be called business. A few buyers were around in the early hours, but their purchases were very little. New crop carnations are appearing on the market—probably from field stock—but they attract but little attention. The weather is dark and cool, with occasional showers.

NOTES.

C. Lecakes & Co. have bought the evergreen and florist supply business formerly conducted by J. J. Fellouris at 116 West 28th street. Costas Lecakes, the head of the firm, has led an active life. Though only 30 years old, he has spent 15 of them in the evergreen business. As a diversion, he returned to Europe and served in the Balkan war of 1912-'13. In the late war, he was in the American army for seven months. His brother, George, who is associated with him in the business, also served seven months under the stars and stripes.

There is much dissatisfaction among growers and retailers over the high that when the flowers come on the marprices for lily bulbs, and it is predicted ket—supposing that the bulbs live and grow—that prices will be so high that many people will not buy. As one retailer has naively remarked: "It will make it good for the growers of roses and other plants." Heretofore, the churches have been good buyers of Easter lilies, but it is an established fact that the churches will not pay extravagant prices.

Detectives from this and other large cities from Maine to California are engaged in a search for William Beresford Stevenson, nine-year-old son of the late William J. Stevenson, who was engaged in the florist business at Savannah, Ga. Executors are trying to find the boy to settle up the estate, there being $10,000 held in trust for the son under his father's will. "Billy," as he is sometimes called, disappeared from Savannah with his mother, Mrs. Jean Stevenson, two years ago.

Marshall Clarke, of David Clarke's Sons, went to Norwalk, Conn., August 31, to superintend an elaborate wedding decoration. His firm also made up a number of fine designs for the funeral of Charles Frederick Hoffman, a prominent citizen, who died at Newport, R. I., August 28. The funeral was held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, this city, September 1.

Horace E. Froment, the wholesaler of 148 West 28th street, who had planned to take a rest and vacation, has been detained by the serious illness of Miss Froment, his sister, who shares his home. She is now believed to be improving. As misfortunes seldom come singly, Miss Mabel Conkling, his bookkeeper, recently fell and fractured a limb.

Celestine Bourque, buyer, and Miss Mary Bowen, bookkeeper, of the Dards store, are now taking well earned vacations.

Manager Perry, of the Dard's store, has returned with his family from a vacation spent in the White Mountains.

William P. Ford has just returned from a short vacation, spent on his farm at Chaddsford, Pa.

AUGUST TRADE BETTER THAN USUAL.

August showed fair business somewhat ahead of that month in previous years. Outdoor stock was, and continues to be, very scarce and is now practically at an end for the season. The summer's drought was broken August 29 by a severe storm with a wind of 67 miles per hour velocity and a rain of over an inch in one hour. There was also considerable hail, which fortunately was too small to break glass although some loss resulted to growing crops outdoors.

IMPROVED TRADE CONDITIONS EXPECTED.

Market conditions continue unchanged. The supply of roses is somewhat improved, although still limited. Asters and gladioli are plentiful. With the arrival of September, many vacationists are returning, and this should stimulate an early fall demand for flowers for the home. The absence of good flowering plants has been keenly felt all summer, many buyers refusing cut flowers as a substitute. The matter of taking what is available must satisfy, but a little good pot stock would have proved a boon during August. With the approach of the Hebrew holidays, many of the shops will have the pleasure of supplying the means of brightening the lives of many of the elderly ladies of that faith at this time, and it is hoped that dahlias will be plentiful.

NOTES.

Sieck & Glick are now located in permanent quarters at 602 North Calvert street, and have made a fine start in developing their wholesale trade. Business on this thoroughfare is fast extending north, and as Mr. Glick says: "It does not make any difference whether you are next door to another wholesaler or not. If you have good stock at right prices, you will get customers."

M. Schumacher has been sending in a few of his finest asters. Whether they pay or not is not a question, but the excellent quality is certainly a reward for the time spent on them.

Robert Halliday was somewhat improved last week and able to sit up for an hour or so each day.

G., JR.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A dahlia exhibition will be held September 20-21, in the Museum building, New York botanical garden. Schedules are now ready for distribution, and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York botanical garden, Bronx park, New York City.

In this connection, attention is called to the large collection of dahlias, located along the west border, just north of the Harlem railroad plaza, New York botanical garden. A space over 400 feet long and 12 feet wide is devoted to this collection, which comprises about 360 kinds and something over 600 plants, representing all the types of this increasingly popular flower. A visit will well repay either the amateur or professional gardener. The plants of each type are grouped together, so a comparative study is readily made.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-e ghth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

NORTH DAKOTA is by far the greatest rye growing state.

THE price of bags at Chicago, September 3, was $65.00.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. Cesbron, Angers, France, enroute to the Pacific coast.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Ohio Valley Seed Co. has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $100,000.

BELGIUM is negotiating in Chili for the purchase of 100,000 tons of nitrate for agricultural purposes.

THE CROP of garden beans at Twin Falls, Idaho, shows not only a good acreage, but a large yield.

SALT BUSH, pushed by the late E. V. Hallock as a dry land forage plant, is again mentioned favorably as a sheep feed.

ONION SETS.—Independent growers in the Chicago district are materially firmer in their asking prices. There is but little doing in a jobbing way thus far.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The A. J. Brown Seed Co. has purchased 75 feet of ground on Campau street, on which it is planned to erect an office and warehouse.

TECHNICAL Bulletin No. 38, issued by the Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, covers experiments on the control of bean anthracnose and bean blight.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade September 3, were as follows: Timothy $10.25 to $11.50 per 100 pounds. September, $12.75 sellers.

IT is stated that during the war and again this year, the packers endeavored to get hold of a supply of rice, beans, canned fruits, and canned vegetables. To this end they bid up prices.

STURGEON BAY, WIS.—The Door County Seed Co. has purchased land at Menasha and will move its business to that city. A new building 48x100 feet offering increased shipping advantages will be built at any early date.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December were steady, September 2, with cash offered at $29.75. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.30, September $5.70, October $5.55, December $5.70 and March $5.82½.

WEB WORM DAMAGE.—This pest has played havoc with growing crops of sugar beets in Colorado, causing a reduction of 25 per cent. One concern expressed from the east 100 tons of Paris Green, which kills this worm, special Iron Age sprayers being used to apply the poison, the equipment arranged to spray 12 rows at a time and the machines working day and night, lanterns being used on tongue and body after dark.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Small grain crops on the model farm conducted by the Pudue University experiment station are said to be disappointing this year, due to hot weather. The yield is the smallest in years, but the quality is good.

Roman Hyacinth Bulb Embargo.

Replying to an inquiry as to the French Roman hyacinths refused certification by French inspectors at Marseilles, Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, Washington, D. C., writes as follows:

"The board is advised by the experts of this department, that there are a number of diseases of varying severity of such French hyacinths, and several of these diseases, but not all of them, have been introduced sparingly into the United States. Since the French inspectors have seen fit to refuse to certify the shipment, it is probable that the shipment as a whole must be in rather serious condition, and in view of the absence of exact information as to the identity of the disease, it would seem undesirable, if not improper, for the board to take action to over-rule the French inspectors. Any such action on the part of the board would detract from the morale of the French inspection service and make it less dependable in the future. Furthermore, the regulations permitting the importation of plants from countries maintaining inspection service, clearly place the responsibility on the inspection officials of such country for determining the suitability for shipment to this country of the plants offered for export.

"With respect to this or future shipments of hyacinths, the board will be very glad to have specimens of these diseased hyacinths sent directly to the office of foreign seed and plant introduction of this department for examination and determination as to the identity and character of the disease. The board regrets that the information is not such that it can act more favorably."

Dutch and French Bulbs in England.

The attempts of certain Dutch firms who are seeking to do a direct retail trade with this country, give the British trader something to think about. It must, in the first place, be borne in mind that in Holland, as in England, there are some firms who will not belong to the trades' association. There are also some firms who would not be accepted as members, even if they wanted to join the association, but so far as we are concerned, having asked our government to permit the importation of bulbs, we cannot expect to prevent any particular firm sending bulbs over here. What we have a right to ask is, that as a trader is compelled to secure a license before he can import bulbs, so a private individual shall also be bound by the same rule, and I think, few amateurs indeed will care to bother about importing a small parcel of hyacinths, tulips, or crocuses if they have to apply for licenses to get them in. I call to mind the time when importation was first prohibited. The order went forth that small parcels by post would be admitted. I had some hand in convincing the authorities of the injustice of that order, and it was annulled. I believe it will be possible again to show the import restrictions department that it will be grossly unfair to permit even small post parcels to come in without a license, but the matter needs tackling at once.

There are also one or two points connected with French bulbs that call for rather more than momentary thought. For the simple reason that sources of supply are somewhat limited, there was a keenness shown at an early stage on the part of British buyers as to what French bulbs would be available. We were soon informed that harvests were very poor, and those who placed the earliest orders were informed, in some cases, that they could only be allocated about 25 to 30 per cent of their desired quantities. Then followed a few offers for immediate acceptance at advanced prices, but just recently there seems to be a marked change of front, and not only are some firms being informed that their original orders can be executed in full, but offers of bulbs have reached London for double and treble the quantities ordered at the outset. It is scarcely surprising that such vascillations are viewed with some suspicion by the trade here.—Onlooker in the British Horticultural Trade Journal.

Bean Standardization.

The California Bean Growers' Association has announced that in order to improve conditions, meet the complaints of many buyers and as far as possible standardize the grades of California beans to equitably meet the varying conditions of climate that exist from year to year, the following definite standards have been established:

Choice recleaned.—To contain not less than 98 per cent of choice merchantable beans and not over two per cent damaged, discolored or other beans, splits, adobe or other foreign matter, and in no case more than one per cent damaged beans. (This standard shall be permanent and in no way altered from year to year.)

No. 1 recleaned.—To be equal to or better than the average of the grade for the current season at time of shipment. Such standards to be jointly established annually by the California Bean Dealers' Association and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

All beans not conforming to above standards will be bought and sold on sample or description. Each season's crop will be handled in accordance with the above standards. If "choice recleaned" cannot be fully and fairly met, such fact will be announced by the association so that buyers may be fully informed as to this condition.

Pea Industry Depends on Seed Buying.

The possibility of reviving a profitable crop in Wisconsin is largely in the hands of the farmers who intend to buy seed peas. If they buy this fall, seed of improved strains will be available, says R. A. Moore, agronomist at the Wisconsin experiment station. If they wait until next spring most of the seed peas will be of the unimproved strains, and the industry will stand just where it has before. That the failure of Wisconsin growers to maintain their reputation for good peas was largely due to the poor quality of their product is the opinion of Wisconsin agronomists. For that reason, E. J. Delwiche has bred at the Ashland experiment station for eight years pedigreed strains of field peas. These have been developed from the standard Wisconsin varieties, such as Scotch, Green and Golden Vine. The new strains of peas have been placed largely in the hands of farmers in the upper counties, and many are unable to hold over their seed crop for next year's selling. Unless the seed is bought this fall much of it will go on the market for food, since there is a considerable demand. To avoid this waste of improved seed the office of the Wisconsin experiment station at Madison has collected the names of the growers of improved seed peas so that farmers may easily get in touch with the growers.

Haven Seed Co. Santa Ana, Calif.

The Santa Ana, Calif., Register, in its issue of August 14, devoted two-thirds of the first page of its "prosperity section" to an interesting story of the Haven Seed Co., of that city, with portraits of its founder, the late E. M. Haven, and the present officers, A. B. Haven, president and general manager and L. S. Haven, secretary, also illustrations of its plant which produces annually more than four billion seeds. The company, now in its forty-fifth year, was established in Bloomingdale, Mich., but was removed to California in 1904 and at present has under cultivation 600 acres, 400 of which are devoted to tomato and the balance to lima beans, egg plant, pepper, cucumber and other crops. Upon the death of E. M. Haven two years ago, the company was reorganized with a capitalization of $100,000. Its plant is one of the most complete in the country, with modern office building and warehouses equipped with up-to-date machinery electrically driven.

New York, Sept. 2.—Celery, per doz. roots, 20 to 75 cents; cucumbers, 40 to 60 cents per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 4 to 10 cents; lettuce, per package, 35 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Vegetable Storage Space.

The general principles of vegetable storage, applicable to practically every crop which is likely to be stored, are stated by J. T. Rosa, Jr., in Extension Circular 53 of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia. They are: First, store only vegetables in good condition, matured but not stale, free from disease and bruises, and which have not been exposed to heating or wilting. Second, store vegetables before they have been severely frosted. The storage conditions must be right. The temperature should be steady, and for most vegetables it should remain below 50 degrees. From 36 to 40 degrees gives best results, especially with the root crops other than sweet potatoes. Ventilation must be provided, yet the atmosphere of the storage place should be kept rather moist to prevent shriveling or wilting. The various means of storage and the methods to be followed with the more common garden crops are reported in this circular, which may be had free.

Market Gardeners Trials in New Brunswick

In an article in a recent issue of the Fredericton Gleaner, J. Bebbington, Sr., the well-known florist and market gardener of that city, calls attention to the fact that the marketing of vegetables in that New Brunswick section is very much overdone, the supply far exceeding the demand. If early crops could be produced, which could be marketed in July instead of August, the conditions would be nearer a balance. At present, it is not an unusual occurrence for a grower in that locality after making a canvass of the hotels and grocery stores to return home with half of his load. About July 10, home-grown cucumbers had not developed, but stores near his establishment had them, shipped in stock, about five inches long at 18 cents. At the end of the month local stock was offered at three for 25 cents, ten days ago at five cents each, and now every grocer has a bushel of them at his door at three to five cents and cannot dispose of them. After a week at the beginning of the season the market is overdone with an accumulation of cabbages, beets, onions, carrots and cucumbers. Mr. Bebbington, in closing, calls attention to the need in that vicinity of a canning factory.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period, August 26-September 2, showed that after a month of general decline in market values, prices showed a general tendency to recover. Potatoes are slightly higher with supply moderate for the season. Shipments have been restricted because of recent decline in price. The situation is complicated by complaints of rot in some eastern potato sections. Eastern markets and shipping points advanced 10 to 25 cents per 100 pounds from last week's low points. Western markets were irregular, but closed at $3.30-$3.35 per 100 pounds f. o. b. shipping points, compared with $3.10 last week. Jersey Giants sacked ranged $2.50-$2.60 f. o. b. Consuming markets quoted sacked New Jersey Giants $2.60-$3.35, and Cobblers $3-$3.65. Maine Cobblers sacked ranged $2.50-$3 per 100 pounds in New York and Boston. Minnesota early Ohios advanced 15 cents at shipping points, ranging $2.45-$2.65 f. o. b. and carlots ranged fairly steady at $2.35-$2.50. Idaho rurals were quoted at $3.50 in Chicago. California white stock weakened $2.25-$2.40 f. o. b. and closed at $4-$4.50 in Denver for sales in small lots. Best Connecticut Valley sacked yellow onions averaged 25 cents higher in eastern consuming markets, ranging $3.50-$4 per 100 pounds. Other eastern and middlewestern yellow stock was quoted about steady at $3-$3.50. California yellow onions were firm at shipping points and demand improved at $2 f. o. b., while consuming markets were nearly steady, Chicago closing at $2.75-$3. Washington yellow stock was steady at the prevailing jobbing range of $3-$3.50.

Exchanging Seeds.

With reference to recent inquiry, this subject of exchanging seeds, etc., was discussed some time ago in a letter of the Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Calif., to its employes, as follows:

"I want to call your attention to the habit some of you have in referring people to me that desire to return or exchange seed which they previously purchased from us. It is wholly unnecessary to refer anyone to Mr. Musser or myself in reference to exchanging seed; it only uses up our time and encourages the party that is sent to us in the belief that there might be a possibility of getting the seed exchanged. You might just as well tell them to commence with that this house absolutely will not exchange or take back seeds of any kind after they have once left our possession. With the exception of some varieties of peas and beans, we might consent to exchange, providing that they are varieties that we could be able to be sure of the variety from inspection without any label. The board of directors of the Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., years ago, passed a resolution absolutely prohibiting the taking back or exchanging of any seed after leaving our possession. This was done for the protection of our customers' interests as well as our reputation as seedsmen. Mr. Musser and I are bound by this rule and can not, and will not, allow it to be violated, no matter what excuse the customer gives, not even if he purchased the seed and took it from our possession but a few hours before.

"We want you to be courteous with the customers and explain to them the reasons why we can not exchange seeds after they leave our possession. These reasons are as follows: No matter how careful people are in the handling of their seeds, they are liable to get the seeds or labels mixed. And there are also many people these days, I am sorry to say, so dishonest that they would deliberately transfer seed into our packages that they had grown themselves or that they bought from someone else, and bring them to us for exchange. Think what a mess we would have in a few months if we exchanged seeds. You can easily understand that no person with good sense would take a chance of buying seeds from a seed house that exchanged or took back seeds, or even bought seeds from anyone excepting reliable seed growers. This rule applies just the same to the dealers as to the retail trade.

"Absolutely refusing to exchange seeds under any and all circumstances may in some instances work a hardship to a customer, but it is the only way we can protect our customers and our business. Anyone violating these instructions will be immediately dismissed."

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

BRITISH growers have fixed minimum prices for forest trees and hardy herbaceous perennials.

DURING the past year, nearly 1,000,000 acres of woods in England were felled for war purposes.

BOSTON, MASS.—The will of the late Arthur Estabrook leaves $50,000 to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

AN apple tree with which a Missouri nursery firm is experimenting, is valuable enough to be enclosed in a wire cage, protected by a burglar alarm.

ENNIS, TEX.—T. B. Truitt & Sons have filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $100,000 and will engage in the nursery business.

BOSTON, MASS.—James B. Shea has been re-appointed chairman of the park and recreation committee for a three-year term at a salary of $5,000 per annum.

President J. Edward Moon.

J. Edward Moon, the newly elected president of the American Association of Nurserymen, was born March 22, 1883, second son of Wm. H. Moon, founder of the nurseries of the Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa., and grandson of Mahlon Moon, who started the nursery business in Bucks County, Pa., in 1849. For three generations before this, the Moon family had dealt in trees, many old records of these early transactions being in the possession of their descendents.

J. Edward Moon, after his early schooling, attended Westtown boarding school, Westtown, Pa., from which he graduated in 1902. He was prominent in all the athletic sports and games of the school. After a course in a business college at Trenton, N. J., he took up the nursery business with the Moon Co., with which he had become familiar, having spent his vacation periods with the company, studying trees and shrubs and their culture. The sales end of the business early claimed his special attention, he finally attaining to the position of sales manager. Upon the death of Wm. H. Moon in 1911, he was made secretary of the Wm. H. Moon Co. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and one of the board of managers of the Friends hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

Indigofera.

Five species of this genus of the pea family are now blooming in the Arboretum. They are small plants with handsome flowers in terminal racemes, well suited to decorate a garden border. The three species with pink flowers, I. Kirilowii, a native of northern China, Manchuria and Korea, I. Potaninii and I. amblyantha are perfectly hardy and the last will continue to open its small flowers on the lengthening racemes until October. The other species, I. Gerardiana and I. decora, are killed to the ground every winter, but like herbaceous plants produce new stems in the spring which never fail to flower during the summer. I. decora is a native of southern China, and in the Arboretum the flowers are pure white. I. Gerardiana, which is a native of the northwestern Himalayas, has gray-green foliage and rose purple flowers. This is the least beautiful of the five species now growing in the Arboretum. The collection still needs I. hebepetala, another Himalayan plant which is rarely seen in English gardens. It has red flowers, in elongated racemes, and, judging by the picture of it which has been published, is a handsome plant. This and another red-flowered Himalayan species, I. atropurpurea, are desired by the Arboretum.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 26, 1919.

Hydrangea American Everblooming.

The late E. Y. Teas wrote several years ago regarding this plant:

"Several years ago, an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad was transferred from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Piqua, O. Removing to the latter locality, his wife took with her plants of the native Hydrangea arborescens, and in due time plants of it were distributed over the town. At the time I heard of the new candidate, there were nearly 100 specimens growing about the residences there. As the Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora blooms only during August, the citizens called the new plant Ever-Blooming, as this begins to bloom in early June, and continues almost uninterruptedly until frost, if weather conditions are favorable. This plant has been called Hills of Snow, and Snowball. Hydrangea American in these strenuous times should patriotically enjoy the appropriate name, "American Ever-Blooming" hydrangea.

"Before interest was attracted commercially to this hydrangea, the lady who introduced it at Piqua died, and its earlier history will never be known. The native Hydrangea arborescens is found in most ravines from Pennsylvania to the Mississippi and beyond, and from New York to Florida. A few break from the normal single to the more showy grandiflora type, but these freaks are very rare. The Richmond florist who discovered this plant in Piqua told me, June 30, 1904, of his discovery, describing it as five or six feet high, of about the same breadth, with large flower trusses of snowy whiteness, blooming continuously from June till frost, and the plant as hardy as an oak, a combination of good points not before found in any shrub.

"The experiences of growers the last 12 to 15 years have demonstrated the general reasonableness of this claim. The plant is not intended to form a woody shrub as much as the better known H. paniculata.

"As grown at Eaton, O., where we have hundreds of plants of it three to six years old, the custom is to cut the plants down to near the ground in February, leaving two or three shoots full length to give early fine bloom. The new shoots from the ground begin to flower the latter part of June and bloom fairly continuously until frost unless checked by intense heat and drought in late summer."

All hydrangeas, as far as I know, enjoy a cool moist atmosphere. The plant is as easily grown from eight-inch cuttings of ripe wood as currants or privets.

PLANT QUARANTINE NO. 37.

Discussed by Dr. C. L. Marlatt, Chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., and Members of the Society of American Florists at the Detroit Meeting, August 21.

Dr. C. L. Marlatt's Address.

It gives me a great deal of pleasure to be here and make the personal acquaintance of the members of the Society of American Florists, and to present, if I can, somewhat from your standpoint, the action of the federal horticultural board as it affects your interests and business. I have already spoken before a similar body on this subject. I was invited to address the American Association of Nurserymen in Chicago two or three months ago. It is quite possible that some of the persons present, heard me there, in which case they may hear a little repetition. I spoke extemporaneously in Chicago, and I shall do so here. I intend to cover the subject in a somewhat different way, to make it of more direct application to the interests that are here represented. I hope that I will be able to make myself heard throughout this audience; I noticed a moment ago, when sitting in the back part of the room myself, I had great difficulty in hearing what was being said; but if I do not make myself heard, I hope you will excuse it, on the ground that I am not a public speaker. This is about the second or third offense in my life.

Object of Quarantine No. 37.

The Quarantine Act and Quarantine Ruling No. 37 has been discussed so much in your papers, that I am a little afraid that you may have heard about as much of it as you care to hear, but inasmuch as I have never addressed directly the class of people you represent, it seems to me desirable to go over the subject in a rather complete way, so that you will understand our powers what we are trying to do, and what we are trying to do in this special Quarantine Ruling No. 37. The Quarantine Act, briefly, is intended to protect the United States from the entry of new plant enemies. It provides for the establishment of a quarantine which prohibits their entry from foreign countries; it provides for the establishment of orders which regulate the entry from foreign countries, and it provides for domestic quarantines within the United States to stamp out, control, and prevent the distribution of newly established pests. It also provides for an absolute quarantine of the United States, as well as a regulated one. Congress has appropriated, from time to time, large sums of money to be expended in the work of this board for the extermination of the great pests of agriculture and horticulture in the United States. That, in a general brief way, is the field we cover.

Result of Many Years' Effort.

This act is the result of some 14 years effort to get legislation of this kind. This legislation began 20 odd years ago, and is the result of the old San Jose scale scare of that period. There was a big convention in Washington, at which all the states of the United States were represented, and a bill was drafted and presented to congress, to give quarantine powers against various things and to control domestic intercourse and traffic in plants. That bill hung fire, never got anywhere. It was re-introduced in congress perhaps six or eight times during the next six or eight years, and finally failed. There was no united effort behind it; there was no particularly strong effort to put it through, and it failed to become a law. Some eight years after that start, this country was again alarmed over a new subject. It was found that certain stock coming from France, Belgium and Holland, was carrying with it, a large number of nests of brown tail moths, well known in New England, and also nests of the gypsy moth. These were introduced in such large numbers that thousands were found in New York state alone; yet there was no law to prevent that sort of pests coming in; we had no law to correct or control it. There was a risk of their being distributed broadcast over the United States. Without a law, the department of agriculture made a record of the importations, and followed them up and inspected them, and thus thousands of nests were detected and destroyed, but perhaps others escaped. That led to an effort to get a law which would control that situation. I was, unfortunately, the person who started that work, and hence all my troubles since. I drafted the bill, and presented it to congress, and it did go through the house in a few minutes. I mean in a few days or weeks perhaps, and would probably have gone through the senate, and would have become a law in 1909, but the nurserymen of the country heard of it, and they came to Washington to oppose it, in the sense that they wanted it held up and redrafted to meet their needs and conditions. The statements they made were perfectly reasonable and good, and we, on our own motion, withdrew the act from congress at that stage and held it up for discussion. The nurserymen were difficult to please. The foresters were not represented regarding the act at that time; they did not know of it, or were not interested; at any rate, they were probably not represented. The nurserymen then fought it for a considerable period. We introduced into congress from time to time, a dozen different bills as the result of the discussions with the nurserymen, and the matter went on from one session to another. Opposition continued more or less, as the result of which there was great difficulty in getting legislation. You may not know as much about congress as we do in Washington, but today, in congress, it is possible for one man to rise and say, "I object," to any new legislation, and that throws it out. That happened to this legislation. Finally, it came to the point that I thought it was going through very well, but to my astonishment three men got up on the floor of the house and antagonized it, men that I had never heard before had any interest in the matter. They were quite violent in their remarks about it, and about me. I was then more thin-skinned than I am now. I am getting used to it. Among these men was a Representative Mann, of Illinois, who was an eminent florist and gardener. Then there was a representative from South Carolina, who had for many years been chairman of the agricultural committee, and Representative Rucker, who was one of the prominent democrats in the house, then, as he is today. Yet I remember that Mr. Rucker said he hoped this bill would be snowed under in such a manner that the author of it would never dare to show his head around congress again. It did not have that effect. The next day, there was another bill introduced in congress.

I concluded that if Mr. Mann, and these other gentlemen, were the men who were opposing the bill, I had better see them. I did not know any of them. I went into Mr. Mann's office. He was then floor leader on the republican side. Mr. Cannon was chairman, a very gruff and positive individual, the terror of the young congressmen. He had a large office. I went in. He met me and very gruffly said, "I don't want to have anything to do with it. I never look at legislation until it comes to me on the floor of the house." But I was not frightened. I did not run away. I stayed with him, and he finally listened to me, and in the course of a little while he became interested, and we talked about an hour. He said, "I will do something for you that I have never done for any man in my life. If you will leave that bill with me, I will write you what I think about it." Inside of three or four days I received a letter from him of 12 pages, in which he had analyzed the bill from top to bottom. We had a number of conferences, as the result of which the bill was enacted into law. A year later, I saw those other two men who had opposed it, Representatives Lever, of South Carolina, and Rucker, of Missouri, and they told me they had no objection to the bill, now that they understood it. They said they had received word from some ious measure, and to oppose it, but they said those constituents did not own them, and now that they understood the bill, they would work for it, and when that bill was passed, it was passed by the efforts of the three men who killed it upon its first introduction, and one of whom had said he hoped I would be so intimidated that I would never appear again before congress with a measure of that kind. The bill became law in 1912, seven years ago.

Federal Board Acts as Executive.

There has been a great deal of criticism of the enforcement of that act; you have heard a great deal about "one man power," and about "five men power," and all that sort of business. This bill provides for its enforcement, through a board of five men, appointed by the secretary of agriculture from existing officers in the department of agriculture. This board is simply the executive agency of the bill; it does not decide any of these quarantine measures, except as to their final decision; that is next to the final; the secretary of agriculture, himself, passes on every measure that is recommended by the board, and approves it before it goes out. That board obtains from the secretary of agriculture, and from his hundreds of experts in different lines of floriculture and horticulture, and from its expert pathologist and entomologist, full information on every subject. There is also provided for under the terms of the act, public hearings which the board itself must conduct. The board, therefore, simply becomes the executive and administrative office of the department in the enforcement of that act. It is not a "one man power," or a "five men power," but it represents the judgment of the whole department of agriculture, including the secretary of agriculture. Moreover, that board has its relations with every state of the United States, with every entomologist and every pathologist of every state in the United States, all of whom are collaborators with the board, and have an interest in the enforcement of the quarantines. We have representatives in every state in the United States, and each state probably from one to 25 or 30. It, therefore, is a representative body that covers the whole United States; it is not alone the department of agriculture in Washington. These representatives are your technical men in your universities, experiment stations and agricultural colleges, and are the men in charge of the local quarantine work.

Further than that, it has caused the enactment of legislation in practically all of the countries of the world which do business with us in plants, I do not remember the number; about 20, perhaps 30 foreign countries have passed legislation to meet the requirements of our plant quarantine act, and have appointed central officers of inspection and local officers of inspection to examine the plant products exported from those countries, so that the effect of the quarantine act of the United States is world-wide through the co-operation of other countries.

Great Loss Through Foreign Pests.

You have heard a great deal about foreign pests. What are these foreign pests against which we are concerned, and which we are trying to keep out of this country? I am not going to dwell very long on this topic, because I think you know a great deal about it from personal experience. Several years ago, we made very careful estimates of the losses occasioned by insect pests in the United States, showing that they ran upwards of $1,000,000,000 a year. That was under the old prices of crops; under the present prices it would have run above $2,000,000,000 a year. That represents a loss of about 10 per cent of the crops. In many instances, the loss would run up to 25 or 30, yes, 50 per cent. Occasionally, our wheat crop has a reduction of over 35 per cent.

These losses are occasioned by pests that affect all sorts of plants, fruits and farm crops, and more than 50 per cent of these insects and diseases have come to us from foreign lands. Practically all of our worst plant diseases are of foreign origin. About 50 per cent of the insects are of foreign origin. Such old-timers as the hessian fly and the boll weevil affect our big crops. Then we have the alfalfa weevil, the clover weevil, the Japanese beetle, and diseases like potato wart, wheat smut and many others. There are hundreds of them altogether, all of them of foreign origin. Blister rust, citrous canker, all these things are familiar to you, perhaps. Many of these, affect farm crops; they do not affect nurserymen, or florists or horticulturists. I do not know of any very prominent injurious insects which affect the florists. Most of these are enemies to the big crops of the country, and therefore you can see the relation they have to us and to our business. Probably one-half, certainly a considerable percentage, have come in with living plant stock. But quite a number have been introduced with florists' stock, and with what you call ornamental horticulturists' stock.

For example, the alfalfa weevil which is now largely reducing the growth and the output of alfalfa over half a dozen states in the middle west, Utah and the surrounding states, was introduced with soil about plants, presumably. We cannot prove it, but that is the only way it could come in. It lives in the soil, and can only come in with soil that has come into Utah—soil about plants, which is the only soil which has come in. The clover weevil came in with soil about plants. The Japanese beetle was recently introduced from Japan in the soil about roots. The European ear wig made its appearance in Newport; our understanding is that it has recently come in with plants. The Oriental fruit worm, which promises to be a most disastrously destructive insect to our fruit, peaches, apples, plums and pears and all of our deciduous fruits, was introduced with ornamental cherry trees from Japan. It started at Washington and New York with importations about the same time—1911.

I could mention many others, but these are sufficient to illustrate the fact that a great many of these destructive pests have been brought in with ornamental plants. There are a great many other means of their entry other than plants, but as we look over the record, and we have a record from way back in the early colonial times to the present, we find that practically 90 per cent of them have come in with living plants. The hessian fly came in with straw, which was plant material, but was not living. The great mass of them arrive with living plants. A few may come in with soil that is introduced with things other than plants. A great deal has been said in the florists' papers about soil that comes in in other ways than on plants, in ballast in steel ships, etc. We have investigated that very fully. We have had men in the principal export cities, such as New York, Philadelphia, Boston and New Orleans, to examine that soil, and we have found that the risk from that is almost negligible. Most of that soil or ballast material is sand, and the soil that comes in is practically all excavation soil from digging the cellars of new buildings; it is not garden soil. There is some risk, I admit, but most of this material does not get into the agriculture and horticulture of this country. There are many risks that we cannot exclude. Pests are bound to come in. The statement has been made in some of your journals, that unless we build a wall as high as Heaven around the United States, some will come in. That is true; pests will come in from time to time; but the records show that the great majority come in with living plants, hence, the desirability of ultimate control in that field. We have all of these hundreds of foreign pests. We ought to have crushed them out in all of this time, but we have not. Fortunately our records show that there are a great many more known ones that have not come in, than we have already obtained. We have been lucky in that; in fact, more so than we deserve.

Insects and Diseases Classified.

We have recently compiled and published a catalogue of the dangerous enemies in foreign countries which should be looked out for, a hand book showing 3,000 different insects. A catalogue is being compiled of the fungus diseases of plants of foreign countries, and I am told that the number of those will be even larger than the insects catalogued. Thousands have not been introduced that we know of. We do not know of one-half of the things in the Old World. Enormous areas there have never been explored; all of China and much of the rest of the world is comparatively unexplored, Africa and much of Europe, even, is comparatively new ground. We do not know how many of these unknown insects there are, any one of which may mean a source of great danger. The greatest danger, of course, is often from something that you do not know about. The Oriental fruit worm, which came to us from Japan, we did not know of. Now that we know it, we can more closely inspect the Japanese cherry trees. Even our best investigators can examine 100 of these trees and not find it, the insect can so conceal itself. Our men have split open the scions and found masses of eggs. It is the unknown things that you cannot find that we have to protect this country from. We cannot do it by inspection; that is impossible. These things are coming in all the time. I have mentioned many of them that have come in recently, such as the Japanese beetle and the European corn worm that we only heard of a year ago. There are also corn mildews, which have been so destructive in Australia, New Zealand and the Phillipines, and we have had one or two wheat diseases that were very serious, one of them called "take-all," properly so named, which has secured a big hold in southern Illinois, and congress will be asked to appropriate hundreds of thousands of dollars to attempt to stamp it out. Very likely they will not succeed. The Oriental fruit worm is another new one. There are many others that I could mention. They are coming in all the time.

There has been a feeling that this act is a measure which bears heavily on floriculture and horticulture. That is practically all we hear about. I made the point in Chicago, and I would like to repeat it very briefly, that it should be borne in mind that this act is very broad-reaching, and that after all, floriculture and horticulture are some of the smaller matters of control being undertaken under it.

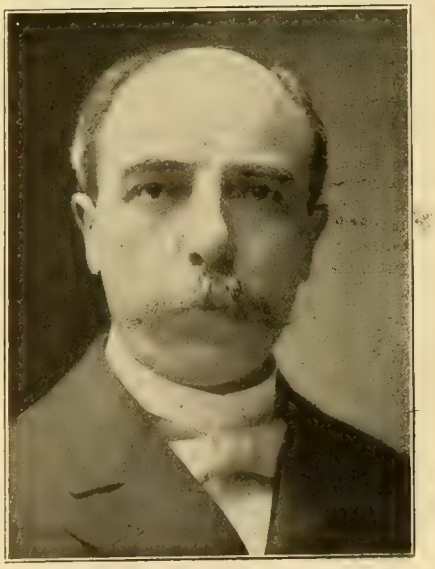
Congressional Appropriations.

Congress is now appropriating for expenditure by the federal horticultural board, nearly $1,000,000 annually. It is appropriating through other branches of the department, to be spent under the direction of the board, and in co-operation with it, perhaps another million dollars. Altogether, congress will probably appropriate this year, to be spent in work under the board, over $2,000,000, and of that sum I do not suppose that more than $15,000 is being spent to persecute and impede the business of the florists and nurserymen. That does not mean that we are not bearing rather heavily on those classes, but it just happens that you do not cost us very much money; some of the others cost us a whole lot. For instance, we are controlling cotton. We received an appropriation this year of $600,000 to fight the pink boll worm, which has a big hold in Mexico, and in some territory in Texas. We are spending that money to stamp that out in Texas. We have 60 men down there.



K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.

We sometimes have 2,000 men cleaning the ground, burning it off until we have cleared off every vestige of vegetation. We control, under that appropriation, every bit of cotton imported into the United States. Fifty thousand bales are imported; $50,000,000 worth of cotton is imported every year, in spite of the fact that we raise a lot ourselves, but this is long staple Egyptian cotton, and the cheap cottons from China and South America. Every bit of that cotton is handled by the federal horticultural board. We have huge disinfecting plants in Boston, Seattle, etc. We have devised a new system of disinfection, so that we can put the disinfectant into the center of the bales, at a cost of $3 a bale. We control every cotton mill in the United States that uses foreign cotton. We interfere a great deal more with the business of the cotton men and the cotton manufacturers in this country than we do with the nurserymen and florists, and we have not had a complaint from any of them. They have paid the bills; they have realized the danger, and have been very willing to have all these measures enforced.

I suppose congress will appropriate at this session, $500,000 to control the European corn borer. It cost during the last season $250,000, which was all that was available, but they are asking now for $500,000 more.

There is going to be a convention in Albany next week of all the secretaries of agriculture of the different states. When they get together, and get excited, I do not know what they will ask for. I am going to try to keep them down. I do not think we should squander any more money than necessary. We have had an appropriation for years of over $300,000 to control the gypsy brown-tail moths in Massachusetts, which were introduced from Holland or Belgium with roses. The gypsy moth was introduced by a professor of entomology at Harvard, through his lack of scientific knowledge, which caused him to introduce it with the silk worm. He thought that he could introduce the silk worm and grow silk out-doors. Many other big subjects of appropriation are in contemplation under the federal horticultural board. The work of the board has developed into a whole lot of big enterprises, and it takes a lot of hard work to carry them out. I wish to say also in relation to the board's work, that the men on it are working without one cent of pay for all this part of horticultural work, due to the fact that in the law itself, congress provided that the men appointed should serve without pay in that capacity. It does not mean one cent to us; it simply means a prodigious amount of work. I am very glad to give you this little bit broader view, because I think this may have some effect in giving you a knowledge of the scientific work, and the problems which we have to meet.

State Inspection Fails.

Now as to Quarantine Ruling No. 37, the bone of contention with which you are especially interested. I have already told you that the Quarantine Act brings under its range all of these foreign countries, and has resulted in the establishment of a system of inspection officers in all these exporting countries. We hoped that this would be a sufficient protection, that by demanding foreign inspection and certification, and by continuing the inspection on this side, we could eliminate the danger and allow business and trade with foreign countries in plants to continue. We have tried that out now for seven years, and it has not worked out as well as we had hoped. But it has done a tremendous amount of good; instead of thousands of gypsy brown-tail moths coming in in a single year, we have not over 150 or so in seven years, but there has been that 150. I do not know how those were discovered by state inspectors nor how many others were undiscovered by them. The system requires that imported stock coming here, be certified and inspected abroad, and then the state examiner inspects it, and after he has passed it, he reports to that effect to us in Washington. If we have not the system, we have not the money to do all that inspection ourselves; to find the check is on the state man. We know enough about state men to know that it is not a very safe check. Some of the states have practically no service at all, and write us that they cannot inspect it. We pay the traveling expense necessary to inspect the material, but we cannot get enough trained men in this country to do the work. I confess that the material that comes to Washington, D. C., is checked by our own men, and we find as much in the small quantity that comes into the District of Columbia as is reported from the whole United States. That is a sufficient indication of the value of state inspection. It is perfectly plain, then, to any reasonable man, that the inspection system falls down. It will not work. We are sorry that this state of affairs should have developed, because we had hoped that the system would be sufficient. This knowledge has led to an effort to have excluded all foreign stock. The board has been bombarded for three or four years with requests to put on an absolute exclusion of foreign plants. We have resisted these and have demanded that the subject be investigated, and that the state inspectors and entomologists and other technical men should make a thorough investigation before they advised us. That investigation has been going on for two years. Finally, they made their recommendations, which you all know about, and which I shall not go into; but which were very closely along the lines that are now recognized in this quarantine. On the basis of those recommendations, we made our own investigations, which had been going on all the time contemporaneously. Finally, we called for a hearing. That hearing was held in Washington. After that, we took up the matter again, and investigated it for some eight months before taking action. Men went through the country, visiting various floral establishments, and we were in correspondence with florists and sought to investigate the subject from every angle so far as we could. Then, we provided a provisional quarantine, and sent that broad-cast through the country, had it published, and asked for a conference with the trade. Unfortunately, influenza came about that time, and comparatively few men were in attendance, but the florists were represented.

Order Result of Long Investigation.

Finally, the quarantine order was promulgated. It was the result of long preparation, long investigation, it was not done in a hurry. There has been some criticism that the programme and announcement for these various hearings and conferences did not represent the quarantine as it was ultimately promulgated. I think that is more of a theoretical than a practical objection. The programme that we presented was merely a tentative one with the statement that the board and the department would not necessarily be held to that recommendation, which was simply presenting the idea for discussion. During the discussion at the time of the hearing, we covered the entire subject. However, this particular programme provided for the exclusion of everything after 1925, but it provided immediately for the exclusion of most of the things which are now excluded, and which were excluded the first of June of this year. It provided for a graduated exclusion of the rest.

What have we done? We have excluded June 1, the following year, the things that were provided for immediately. The great bulk of the ornamental stock, all that which comes in with earth about the roots. We have provided for entry, and perpetuity so far as I know, of a great deal of what we saw no necessity for the exclusion of, such as rose and fruit stocks, certain bulbs, seeds, etc. I think, if you will balance the two things, you will find you are better off now than you were under the original programme. I think you will find that there is no material difference, and if there is any advantage, the advantage is on the side of the men who wish to import classes of things that may now be imported.

Of course, any quarantine action must hit somebody, and it hits importers. I am very sorry that it does affect them injuriously. I do not blame them for criticising the board; that is an American's privilege. I have no doubt that if I were an importer, and my business was being affected, I would be probably as boisterous as any of the importers, and as bitterly opposed to it. That cannot be helped, that is part of the business. If we were only to do the things that would hurt nobody, very little would be done in this world.

Risk in all Imports.

I do not wish to go into an elaborate discussion on Quarantine Ruling No. 37. I think you know the principle on which it was based, simply this, that everything that comes in from abroad, has a risk attached to it. I do not suppose that there has been a single importation of any sort, which if examined by competent inspectors, such as we have in Washington, would not have been found to contain something that we do not want, some insect or disease. Therefore, the object of the quarantine was to recognize that fact and exclude everything that was not necessary. In determining what was necessary, it was based on the question of whether it was available in this country, or could be made available. Our information on that was obtained from our experts. We may have received wrong information; they may have advised us wrongly. If that is the case, the quarantine will be corrected in those lines, it is not the final word, and to that extent, it is subject to correction. But, we base the thing upon that principle that we would admit only those things that are believed to be essential to the floriculture and horticulture of this country, and exclude all the rest. Now the things that are abundantly available in this country do not need to be imported, and things that we can get along without, do not need to be imported.

S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y.

Disinfection of Earth Not Effective.

The great bulk of the things that are excluded, the great value of which I have no doubt, are things that come in with earth about the roots. I do not care to go into a discussion on that: it has been discussed in your papers. There is no human means of disinfecting the earth about roots, and earth is one of the principal things in bringing in pests, such as the clover weevil, the Japanese beetle, the European earwig, and soil diseases. You may bring in the potato wart in earth, and it may remain there forever. If you bring in earth from England, you may bring in the potato wart and other diseases. There is no means of finding them, no means of disinfecting and killing them, except absolutely exclude all earth from entering. That affects most of the things that you need, azaleas, boxwoods, etc. The other things excluded are on the general principle that I have mentioned, those things that are not absolutely necessary, that we can get along without.

Ruling Not Prohibitive.

Now I wish to say, what you all probably know, that under this quarantine, no plants are absolutely barred from the United States. The great point has been made in the criticisms on the quarantine, that America had isolated herself from Europe and the Old World, and would never again get any of the floricultural and horticultural productions of the experimentors and specialists there. That is not true. No plants are barred by this quarantine. Provision is made for the entry of any foreign plant that is desirable or necessary; any new thing that is discovered or created by foreign plant men, can be brought into the United States in sufficient quantities, not necessarily limited. Fifty thousand may be brought in if necessary, or in sufficient quantities to establish that plant on a production basis in the United States. Nothing on the face of the earth is excluded by this quarantine except those things that are barred by special quarantine. Even those can be brought in under such safeguards as the department may place about them, when it is necessary to bring them in.

This importation can be made by any person. It involves a little trouble and explanation. Most of such importations have been published and described by the department of agriculture, and it would take some time to explain them here. But many new things can be brought in. It will not cost much more, and there will not be any more delay than can be possibly helped. We are perfecting plans for the handling of this material, by which it can be brought in promptly by the hands of expert gardeners, who will be gathered from the interior. We are getting a number of requests for these special permits to introduce new things or stock not available in this country to establish production enterprises in the United States. We hope by this means to safeguard the entry of the necessary things, and yet to make them available to any grower who wishes to go into the business.

I wish to speak of another phase of that matter in a few moments, as to the future of your business. In all these particulars, we are much more liberal than Europe. For many years,

Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.

Europe has had an absolute embargo against all American plants. If you have succeeded in getting any plants into France, Holland and Belgium in the last 20 years, you have smuggled them in. Some florists have told me that they got them in. I asked them how, and they did not tell me. But we are much more liberal than are the European countries in regard to American plants.

Bulb Ruling Doubtful.

Now one subject, in regard to which the board is somewhat in doubt at present, as to the legitimacy of the quarantine, is the subject of bulbs. I wish merely to say now that we are looking into the matter of bulbs, and we will be glad to have your bulb men come in committee or conference at any time at Washington. We would like to go over the whole subject of bulbs, because if there is any weak spot in the quarantine, it is in the matter of bulbs. As I said before, the board does not know one bulb from another. I scarcely know a gladiolus. I would hardly recognize it if I were to see it while walking down the street. We take an interest in horticulture; we are not specialists by any means. This bulb matter was discussed by our bulb specialists for weeks and months before they finally submitted lists to us. We have had information from the outside, and we are somewhat in doubt as to whether our specialists may not have been too strict and gone wrong. We are perfectly willing to correct anything in the quarantine that is unnecessary, and the bulb matter may be one of those. The department permits the entry of 88 per cent of the bulbs that were formerly admitted in bulk and value; it excludes about 12 per cent, if my informant is right, and I think he is about right. The bulbs excluded are bulbs that are supposed to be ordinary and available in this country. I think those bulbs are abundantly available in the United States. It excludes also a large variety of bulbs that were supposed to be little commercial importations that came from out of the way places where we know nothing of the enemies or diseases of the countries, or which, from their very nature, were such as could not be properly cleaned and disinfected. If there has been an error in that respect, we would be very glad to correct it. This quarantine is not necessarily final; but it is final, in my judgment, as to the main lines or recommendations in regard to bulbs. We cannot take further action until we get final and full information.

Desires to Co-operate.

I wish to say, that as a board, we do not resent criticism; we welcome it. If any of you have been rather strong in your criticisms, it has not hurt us a bit. We are getting no money out of it. You cannot cost us anything. If we lost our heads, we would be happier; we would have a great deal less to do; we could take some summer vacations; but I think we are all friends in this matter, that we all have a common purpose, and that is, the benefit to and improvement of American floriculture and horticulture. The department of agriculture is an agency established by the government for the benefit of the people of the United States who are engaged in cultivating anything that comes from the ground, and we want to work together, we want to co-operate, we want to work for the benefit of all America. We have found that spirit of co-operation often. I gave several instances of it at Chicago before the nurserymen. We have had occasions where dangers have arisen, and where immediate action was necessary, and we could not take quarantine action in time to do the work. It takes time. We require notice of a hearing promulgated and other details which we cannot do in a minute; it may take weeks, and months. In one instance, we had occasion to appeal to the horticulturists and nurserymen throughout the country, and we had thousands of replies, endorsing the thing, and agreeing not to make shipments, especially of plants, throughout the country. Thus the nurserymen and horticulturists practically applied a quarantine to themselves in co-operation with the board, which we appreciated.

Research Appropriation Asked for.

The nurserymen opposed the enactment of this legislation for a number of years, but when it came down to getting the law, they joined us in putting that law through congress, and withdrew their opposition. The department of agriculture has promised to establish a research office if an appropriation can be secured from congress for that purpose. I hope you gentlemen will back that idea in order to determine the best methods and the best situations of soil and climate in this country for the production in the United States of all those things that are now excluded. This big research proposition is of great interest to you, and to the whole country. I hope you will join the department in that.

Not Tariff Measure.

Criticism has been made that this measure is a tariff measure; that it has been drawn for the purpose of protecting certain persons who are engaged in raising home products. I think from what I have said, that you will know, without my adding anything further, that the protection side of it is accidental and incidental. The idea was to protect from pests. If you gentlemen, and others, get protection in your local production business enterprises, that is something that we could not help, but at the same time we are glad you are getting it. We have cut off by this action, a lot of material which was formerly obtained from Europe. Where are we going to get it? We expect you men to produce it. I have been advised from one end of the country to the other, that it can be produced in this country. I have had endorsements from Maine to California. I was in California a few months ago. I have seen in that state a magnificent horticultural development on the Huntington estate of hundreds of acres. The superintendent in charge is one of the leaders in his craft in this country. I have seen there the most magnificent production of plants that I ever saw in my life, including one of the finest collections of cacti in the world, certainly in the United States. He showed me azaleas the finest I had ever seen. I should have said rhododendrons; he showed me them as high as your head, and he said they could be produced in unlimited quantities, but it takes time.

Put America in Independent Position.

I believe the United States can be sufficient for itself; that is my personal opinion from what I have seen in going about the country, and what I have been told. It may take a little time but I believe we can make this country independent of foreign countries. If we have to give up a few things for a little while, we can make good on other things. I got something out of the paper this noon, and some of your members were making statements similar to that, that this country can be made sufficient unto itself.

Gentlemen, I have given you a very crude and hasty—I do not know how hasty—a discussion of the Federal Plant Quarantine Act and Quarantine Ruling No. 37. I wish to say that I am very much obliged to you for the attention you have given me. I wish you to feel that the department of agriculture wants to help you. We do not want to feel that you are antagonistic to us, and that you feel that we are trying to hurt you, but we want to appeal again to you for American horticulture and American floriculture.

Gentlemen, I thank you.

THE DISCUSSION.

C. L. Washburn, Chicago.

"Let me tell you our experience in importing seeds. We are growers of palm seeds and palms at Sierra Madre, in southern California, a little town between Los Angeles and Riverside. When Quarantine No. 37 was passed and went into effect, we had orders for a large quantity of palm seeds to be imported from Australia. I wish to give you some idea of our business dealings with the federal horticultural board. We wrote immediately to the board and asked, in case we could not get our seeds in before June 1, what instructions we would have to send to Australia in order to bring them in? We received a prompt reply saying that our letter had been referred to the gentleman who was the chairman of the restricted importations, and in a few days we received a letter from him, telling us how to have the material in which the seeds would be packed, sterilized by heat, and stating that we would be required to get a permit. We were uncertain whether to get the permit in Portland, by way of San Francisco, or Los Angeles, so we asked for two permits, and received them both. Our business dealings with the board have always been very prompt. They have answered our letters without delay. Their restrictions were very simple. We ordered about $2,000 worth of seed that we were unable to get in until after June 1 and the cost of sterilizing the packing material was less than $30, which is a very small amount.

"Regarding the growing of palms, the present price is very high due to the shortage, but southern California is an ideal place to grow them and this business is increasing wonderfully there. As soon as the production is such that growers can provide palms to sell, prices are going to drop, and they will be lower than they have ever been before. Southern California can produce palms and turn them out cheaper than Belgium, and climatic conditions there are such that they grow very rapidly.

"There is no question but what this new industry is greatly encouraged by this quarantine, and the quality of the palms which will be turned out from California should be very much superior in the way of scale to those that have been imported from Belgium. There is very litttle scale on the plants in California; you can almost say that there is no scale. Our firm has probably between 300,000 and 400,000 palms there, and I do not think we have 25 that have scale on them, which is a neglible quantity.

"As regards transporting palms from California to the east, this will have to be done in carlots, and the freight does not cut much of a figure; it only amounts to 25 to 30 cents per plant, so that California will eventually be the place that will produce the palms in this country. The Japs there have embarked in the palm business, and when they start at anything, they can grow cheaper than anybody else, and they are going to push their product along.

"I think Quarantine No. 37 is one of the best things we have. We all know what it is to try to grow sick plants and get them well. It is the most expensive thing that a grower can indulge in. It eats a hole in your pocketbook quicker than anything else, trying to cure diseased plants. The importations we received after the quarantine was in effect, showed much better quality than anything we imported during the last five years. It would seem as though the exporters of these palm seeds were getting a training, you might say. They have to give a better grade of seed; otherwise they are afraid that the custom-house will not permit entry under the horticultural board's ruling, so they gave us a very much better class of seed after the quarantine was enforced than we received before. I think that this quarantine is going to be the best thing that the florists have ever had. I think that we should co-operate with the board, and do all in our power to help. It is going to put big money in our pockets by giving us good, strong, healthy seeds, which is the greatest asset that we can have. I am a grower, and have been a grower for the last 27 years, and in this business I know what it is to try to grow poor stock—you cannot make it pay. You need the very best stock to start with that is available, and the board is helping us to get good stock. That is the main point. We should recognize them, assist them, and co-operate with them all we can."

Prof. H. B. Dorner, Univ. of Illinois.

"I am here as a representative of the University of Illinois. I wish on this occasion to go on record as expressing personal views, and not those held by the institution from which I come. I was very much interested in hearing Dr. Marlatt on this subject. I wish to say that I am also in favor of quarantine, but I am in favor of a sane quarantine. There are two or three points he brought up that were very much against him. The speaker said that the board consulted people all over the country, in all our states, and he mentioned the entomologists, but I have not, as yet, been able to find one case where a man in the horticultural department, who was not an entomologist, has been consulted. He says that they consulted the entomologists, and later on, he told us that they were so incompetent, that in the District of Columbia, they could find as many insects on the importations coming in there, as was done by all the rest of the country put together.

Chas H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa.

"There has been published, as the speaker said, a list of all the insects that have been found on the importations that have come into this country. There is one peculiar thing about that list, however; if there is a horticulturist connected with our experiment stations, who wants to secure that list, he cannot do it. I have seen the list, because we happened to get hold of it through the entomologists' library. We could not get it into our own college library."

Dr. Marlatt: "They have been given to everybody who applied for them regardless of who they were."

Prof. Dorner: "We have not been able to get it so far."

Dr. Marlatt: "Then you have not applied."

Prof. Dorner: "I have not, but others have. The statement was made also that a copy of the quarantine was sent broadcast throughout the country to everybody that was interested. The University of Illinois has 28,000 square feet of glass; we have the largest horticultural equipment or floricultural equipment in the country for experimental and teaching work. When we wanted a copy of that, we had to write to Washington for it. No members of the department, at least I nor any of my associates in floriculture, received copies of that quarantine.

"The speaker also says that he receives no pay. He may have had those duties thrust upon him, but he is being paid no doubt by the government just the same; if not, from the same fund. If I am sent out to a certain piece of work that is not directly connected with mine, I am still being paid by the fund as usual, but perhaps not from the new funds.

"The speaker also says that the cotton men are very well satisfied with the way that the cotton quarantine is handled. We also would be very well satisfied if we could get into the country, and get into our trade, the material that we want. The cotton manufacturer may have had to pay for the inspection of that cotton, but when he got through he did not have to grow the cotton. He had it. The two cases are not the same.

"Another point. He says that they had to determine what we can get along without. I want to say something here, not for the florists, but I want to say it for the people who enjoy these things, the millions of people in the country who are directly interested, perhaps. The speaker says that he does not know the difference between a gladiolus bulb and other plants, and he is not sure whether those are gladioli on the desk there, He also says that the other members of the board knew very little about it; yet here are five men—five—who are telling the millions of people in this country what they have to get along without, and without giving them any voice in the matter. I thank you."

J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.

"I have been living with this quarantine question ever since it started. I should not have come to this convention, because I was not feeling as I should, and I was also very busy, but I did not want to let the people in the section of the country east of us, go by default as the nurserymen did. We expected to get, as our president told us at the beginning, a good deal of enlightment from this talk. Most unfortunately, the enlightenment does not go very far. We did not get enough enlightenment to see how to arrange the conduct of our business, 12 months hence. We are groping. So far as I know, the federal horticultural board, or perhaps I should say the federal anti-horticultural board, is groping just as much as we are; but we are groping as the result of their groping. Groping with them—well, according to how things are done evidently does not seem very much; it is a matter of no pay, no loss. It seems to be all very well, but that, is not our case by a long way. The cotton men paid probably two or three dollars on a bale of cotton worth $100 or more; two or three per cent. If we could get our plants, we would gladly pay a much larger percentage than that. I went to that meeting on the 28th day of May, 1918, and it was fairly well understood, given out and acquiesced in by the board at that meeting, that we should have a number of years in which to adapt ourselves to this severe measure. What did we get? Some high officials in the department of agriculture advised us that this board meant to do on the 28th of May just what it said it would do, but that they got the war fever, if you please, to do things in a sweeping manner, and they took the advice of those entomologists that are associated with them, and are a part of their organization, and they practically laid it down and finished it.

Jos. Manda, West Orange, N. J.

"Dr. Marlatt told us today they would permit entry of a certain number of plants. They let in hyacinths, which are the most dangerous thing, and which are more likely to carry infestation than snowdrops, scillas, chionodoxas, bulbous irises and 40 or more other bulbs and tubers heretofore imported, which are now excluded. All tubers cannot come in. Who ever found anything in the scillas? The irises are not infested, but they cannot come in. They are just as clean as the tulip. The Spanish iris, the New Holland iris and the irises from Levant are all as clean as the tulips. They say we get in so many plants. Gentlemen, we receive hyacinhts, tulips, daffodils and lilies; we get in one crocus, while all the other corms are shut out. The freesias, ixias, sparaxis, cyclobothra, bessera, gladiolus, watsonia and other corms are shut out, from which there would be no more danger than in admitting crocuses. We import lily of the valley, which is a fibrous rooted plant. They say we get in other plants, such as roses and fruit stocks. Why, those are not plants, they are the roots—they are only the roots of things that we are going to grow.

"Then look at the price since this went into effect. The price next year will be six and a half cents apiece, and before they were about half a cent. It does not seem to me that there is any good reason for these officials in Washington excluding bulbs by wholesale. If they had been reasonable, or as our friend, Mr. Dorner, from Urbana, says, 'sane' in their action, we might have obtained all the bulbs, tubers and fleshy roots that are free from soil. They object to the soil, but they say that we can get in almost anything that we want to. What is the matter with getting in azaleas with the soil washed out? What is the matter with getting in small conifers with the soil washed out? There is plenty of sterile material; there is plenty of peat moss which is dug out from 40 to 50 feet below the surface of the soil, and I do not believe there are any insects down there, Mr. Chairman. I do not believe there is any fungus down there. I believe, that is the very material that will preserve azaleas and plants of that kind by which they can be safely brought here.

"I am not going to talk long, but I understand these people tell us that this quarantine may be amended. We have had different statements from the department of agriculture as to that. A high official of the department was in Boston last spring, and he told us that this quarantine had come to stay, and stay forever. We are told today, in principal, that it will stay forever, and then we are told that it is subject to amendment. We have been told that by the gentleman today, and I have been so informed by other officials of the department, but we get no intimation as to the character of the amendment. There are many amendments necessary, it would seem to any reasonable horticulturist with any kind of sane views; there are innumerable things that may be safely admitted, and which would be of great value to horticulture here. It is said that they are permitting entry of 88 per cent in bulk, or in value of the bulbs. That might have been so at the time that computation was made, but I question if such a statement would apply now.

"We know that a great advance in horticultural interest is due to the garden clubs of America, and to the ladies who have organized to conduct them. Their interest is not largely in greenhouse plants, because they go to their estates in the spring, and they remain there during the summer, and they want all the little bulbs that the florist perhaps does not want. They want 40 odd varieties that we used to catalogue, that we now have to eliminate, little things such as the Spanish iris that comes first in the spring, and a number of other irises. They want them because of their beauty.

"I would say, Dr. Marlatt, that unwittingly, perhaps, you have struck the science and the art of horticulture the hardest blow that it has ever received. Horticulture has begun to take hold of the people all over the wolrd. You can see even in their little windows in Switzerland, where there are so many rocks that they cannot grow anything but in window-boxes, what an interest they are taking in flowers. If the interest in horticulture, due to the vicissitudes of war, is to continue in this world, America must take it up. America must carry it forward. We have the organization, we have the amateur interest in gardens, in horticulture, and in civic beauty, all of which have tended to improve our national character, and to elevate the desires, the tastes and the morals of our people through the flowers they plant in their gardens and which beautify their homes. But you, Sir, have struck this the hardest blow that has ever been struck since the Pilgrims landed 300 years ago on Plymouth Rock.

"I would like to talk for about half a day on this subject, but I am not going to. But I do say that this board, whether intentionally or not, has seemed autocratic in its action in cutting off everything and disrupting our business which we have spent our lives in building up. The manner in which this has been done seems to me very cold-blooded, and if amendments are coming, as some of the officials in the department of agriculture suggest to us, and lead us to hope, we trust that such amendments will be sufficiently comprehensive. We cannot ask these men to repeal or rescind what they have done, because gentlemen that would show them up as foolish. The trouble is, in considering an amendment, they look upon the amendment that they will give us as in a degree an admission of error in their judgment in applying this quarantine; and if the amendment balances the degree of error in judgment, it will have to be enormous. I agree with Mr. Dorner, that if they did consult, they have not followed the advice given as the result of the consultation. One of the ablest horticulturists who has been maligned by this board is J. D. Eisele. He is a good fellow.

"There is no use in my continuing. I have no feeling nor a word to say against the personnel of this board; but as an administrative body, I must say that I must severely criticise the whole conduct of the federal horticultural board; and this is not propaganda. I have done no propaganda. Mr. Eisele has tried to do it, but with me, this is not due to Mr. Eisele's propaganda. I think one of the unfairest statements ever made was the circular of the federal horticultural board regarding J. D. Eisele. To my mind, it amounted to almost percecution. What we want are amendments, substantial amendments, that will help us in our business, and we want to know something about them soon, so that we may not get relegated out of business before them come."

Chas. H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa.

"At a meeting of retailers, I was asked to speak on this subject, if I thought it advisable. Talking of bugology, reminds me of a family in the central portion of Pennsylvania, who entertained an entomologist for a three or four weeks' vacation. When he went home, the farmer was heard to exclaim, "Thank God he went! He showed us bugs in the vinegar, and in the water, and he took half the pleasure out of life on the farm." I am afraid that the entomologist who is dealing with one subject continuously, is very much like the surgeon, who, after he has operated along surgical lines for a number of years, reaches the definite and positive conclusion, in his own mind, that it is impossible to cure or rectify any physical ills without the aid of the knife and the ether cone.

"The retailers, in their conference, asked me if I deemed it advisable to submit two questions that they would like to have answered. The first one was if the bugs that come in on plant importations are so destructive as they are pictured to be, how does the board explain the luxuriant condition of the vegetation in the countries from which importations are made? The second point that they wanted to know is this: Why, on the board, there is not a fair representation of the growers who have spent a lifetime in their endeavors? Why are they not represented there, and given the opportunity to give the board the benefit of their practical experience? Is it possible to conceive that you men, and those whom you represent in the organization, have accumulated the money that you have and built up the business you have, as the result just luck and ignorance? Should you not by this time know something about growing plants; and if legislation is to be promulgated and put into effect, which is as drastic as this, should you not, at the time, be consulted, instead of allowing it to be left entirely in the hands of a man, or a committee, who in turn, designate one man—with all due respect to the Doctor—to present their side of the case, who says that he hardly knows one bulb from another? I want to say in conclusion, that if you want a suit of clothes, you do not go to a tinsmith, for if you did you would have to use a can-opener to get in and out of it."

President Ammann: "Gentlemen, let us confine our remarks, and make them as short as possible, because we want to get through this afternoon."

Dr. Marlatt: "I have to catch the 6:20 train, and if I am to answer any of these remarks, I must do so soon."

President Ammann: "Make it brief. We want to give the Doctor an opportunity to be heard."

John E. Lager, Summit, N. J.

"Some time ago, I had an interview with the federal horticultural board in Washington, in regard to orchids. The board was very courteous to me, so far as that is concerned, and I asked several questions as to the reasons for the total exclusion of orchids, and also asked if the board knew of, or had ever found any dangerous insect pests being introduced on orchids? To that I obtained no reply. It finally came out at the end of the conference, that the little red ant was being introduced into the United States. It is quite possible that some of those red ants would come in on orchids, but it is also possible that they come in on everything that comes from the tropics, and so far as I am concerned, that is of very little significance. That was one reason given. The most important reason, so far as I could make out at that time, and also from what I gather here from the Doctor, they considered in making up this Quarantine No. 37, what was essential, and what was non-essential to horticulture, and unfortunately for me, orchids, in general, with their hundreds of thousands of ramifications and species, were classed just in one lump as non-essential. I do not know what led the board to take such a view, that orchids more than anything else were non-essential. Who is going to tell what is essential and what is non-essential? We are free men, and we demand that we be allowed to exercise our rights. Who is going to tell us what we are going to grow, or are not going to grow? This the board has done. The Doctor has said that the reason why orchids, or anything else, were excluded, was because they were not essential. Now assuming that all these things that they have said are non-essential, have never brought any insect pests into the country, would that be a good reason to exclude them because they are non-essential, when they have never found a dangerous insect pest on the same? Apparently, that is where the orchids are placed. They cannot prove that any insect pests have been spread by them, and it is not likely, because they are purely tropical plants, and such insects would not live in our climate. If we were to take up this whole matter seriatim, item by item, we might possibly put things in this quarantine that it is perfectly justifiable to put there, and which if the members of this society, or the country at large, want excluded, by all means do so; but to arbitrarily cut out everything because these five members of this board say they are non-essential, when they do not know whether they are so or not, is not right. In talking to the board, I asked them not to be offended with what I was going to tell them, because I was going to speak to them very frankly, and one member of that board said at that time, as the Doctor said here, that he welcomed criticism. I said very nearly everything I had to say. I told them I would not speak behind their backs. Two days after, I received a circular from the secretary of agriculture stating that the thing had been put through. Why did they grant me an interview at all two days before? It was cut and dried beforehand.

"Now, another matter in regard to these non-essentials. They excluded orchids from all the central South American and East Indian ports because they are non-essential; then they admit from all South American ports, bananas by the ship-loads, not even fumigated. They come in by the cargo, at least hundreds of thousands of them every year. How can you reconcile these things? Bananas are taken from the plantation and carried right to the steamer and shipped to New York without being either inspected or fumigated; but the poor orchids that come from the healthiest regions, where they grow, are put in boxes and fumigated until 50 per cent of them are killed, and the other things come in without any fumigation whatever, although they come from the same parts of the world. Is there not something there that is worth taking up and doing right?

"I was told by the federal horticultural board, that orchids can be raised from the seed. This is true to a certain extent, but it takes too long, and the board apparently thinks that cattleyas are the only orchids there are, or hardly any others have been or are being raised. Where or how are we going to get such species as vandas, oncidiums, dendrobiums and many more for which we have a market? I also told the board that our stock of cattleyas for cut flowers was depleted, and that it would be impossible to replenish them in the short time allowed by the board. To this statement the board asked why we could not propagate from the old stock on hand and thus fill our houses? This suggestion being so absurd, I did not attempt to answer it, and I am not going to attempt to do so now. Therefore, I believe this body should have representatives on that board who would understand the different branches of the trade. I do not say the board acted with any bad intentions; probably their intentions were good, but they made a mess of it, and as for my business, they have created havoc."

President Ammann: "I think we ought to give the Doctor an opportunity to answer a few of these questions that have been asked. We ought to have both sides of this. The Doctor wants to make his train. We want to cut our remarks short."

Dr. Marlatt: "If I can get hold of a telephone, I will have my transportation countermanded. I want to hear all of this. I do not want to cut it short."

President Ammann: "There is a great deal of repetition which I do not think is necessary. We can get through here very readily so that the Doctor can make his train."

Dr. Marlatt: "I think I will give up my train, Mr. Chairman, with your permission."

Jos. A. Manda, West Orange, N. J.

"I will be as brief as possible. My subject covers the same ground as Mr. Lager's, namely, orchids. During the great war that we have gone through during the last two years, there was not an orchid imported into this country; an embargo was put on their importation, which we were willing to suffer under the circumstances. After the war was ended, and the armistice was declared, then we had a perfect right to import plants again into the country. We could not import orchids, of course, except during two months in the year. I wrote to Washington and asked them what their ruling would be in case orchids, then ordered, did not come through by June 1. I received a very short reply from them saying: 'If you want to import nursery stock, and get it in before June 1, you must get it by June 1.' I got back at them. I wrote to that gentleman: 'Do you not know the difference between nursery stock and orchids?' But, as was admitted here by the Doctor, they did not know.

"I have spent considerable time in studying this quarantine law. I want to say, like my friend, Mr. Dorner, that I believe we can grow the greater part of the excluded stock in this country, but, for heaven's sake, give us a chance to get ready for it. They told us orchid men, we could raise them from the seed. Doctor, do you know how long it would take an orchid to produce a flower? If I would start to try to do that after I arrive home, do you know how long it would take?"

Dr. Marlatt: "Five years, I guess."

Mr. Manda: "Well, you can just double that, and then I will not guarantee one flower on five per cent of them. I think a great injustice has been done to the orchid men especially, because absolutely no avenue has been left open for us. They say, 'Raise orchids.' What are you going to raise them from if you do not have the species? What are you going to raise them from —cucumbers, or watermelons? With the condition that existed during the war, we are in bad shape. How many plants are in flower today? At one time, I had the largest lot of them in the country. Now I have just 16 plants. Fortunately, one of them is coming into flower. The injustice to us is in the fact that we have absolutely no avenue left to get on our feet after living through this terrible war. I am speaking for myself. My line of business is to cater to private estates, and during the war, 90 per cent of them were closed down, and the other 10 per cent were not in the market for anything. I said: 'I am willing to sacrifice everything if I can get my good boys back from the war. I can get on my feet again as soon as the country gets normal.' I was just beginning to get on my feet, when this quarantine came along and killed all but five per cent of my business.

"They tell us we can grow hybrids. We cannot grow hybrids unless we have the species. I will guarantee if you have 100 plants, you cannot figure on getting 200 blooms from them at Christmas. I will guarantee there is not a man in the country that can produce 25 blooms from 25 hybrids of any given variety. I quite agree with Doctor Marlatt that there are certain things that can be grown, if they would give us time, say two or three years; but they should give us a chance in this reconstruction period to get upon our feet after we have gone down. There is not an industry in this whole country that suffered as much as the florist industry during the war. I will defy anybody to name one. I think that justice should have been done to us; we should have had an opportunity to get upon our feet. As I said, it is all right to put an embargo on anything that we can produce, but there are certain things we cannot produce in this country, and orchids are one of them. I thank you."

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.

"I want to say that I went to Washington, and was in favor of combatting the department, and opposed to the enforcement of this prohibition against the importation of plants, but after I had listened to the arguments, I was convinced that there were two sides to this question. I weighed the matter, and while I do not endorse all the provisions of Quarantine No. 37, I do say it has in it elements of good for the florist trade of this country. I have listened to the arguments put forth here, and many of them seem to be very childish and far-fetched. You have not met the propositions put forth by Dr. Marlatt. You have forgotten one great fact that he has put before you, namely, that the agricultural interests of corn and wheat and cotton in this country are far greater than our interests. Sometimes, as we had to do in the past war, we have to give up some of our interests that are very dear to us. Now I feel sorry for the orchid men. I think they have suffered great hardships. There is no question about that, but on the whole, a lot of this opposition that has been brought forward against this thing is foolish and childish. When I went to Washington, I heard a statement made there that we could not grow roses in this country, and I thought, "that is a strange statement to make." Furthermore, they said they could not grow palms in this country, but Mr. Washburn has told you how they are doing it. I know one man who has invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in the palm business. We are going to have palms. Another thing. If a quarantine law is good for France and Germany, it ought to be good for us. I have had a devil of a time getting a few roses into Germany. I had to smuggle them in; if that is good for those countries, why is not the same kind of a quarantine good for us over here? That is what I would like to know.

"In regard to Mr. Dorner's statement, I was amazed and surprised that he should get up here and talk as he did this afternoon. He had an opportunity to read that quarantine ruling a thousand times. It has been published in all our journals. Why did he not read it? He says it was not sent to him. He also said that he had not been consulted. I do not know whether he is piqued about it or not, but I know that our entomologist at Indianapolis knew all about it, and he knew about it intelligently. He is an intelligent man. He condemned a year or so ago some 20,000 roses for us, but he was right in a great majority of the cases. These entomologists are right; they are working for our best good.

"Speaking about corn borers, they affect all our western country. How does that immense corn crop, that great industry that extends all over the United States, measure up in importance as compared with Mr. Farquhar's business? We have to give up some things for the greatest good of the greatest number. I am sorry, as I said, for the orchid men, but we all have to submit to those things that are for the greatest good of the nation.

"I am amazed at another thing. That you have tried by sarcasm to discount what the Doctor has said to you. He has talked to you in a plain, straightforward manner. He has not varnished things over at all. How have you met him? You have not met him fairly, not a bit of it. Another thing I object to. It was stated in our horticultural publications that the officers of this society were to be condemned for inviting Doctor Marlatt here; that it indicated that the society did not have confidence in their case, and were trying to work up a prejudice against him. I want the Doctor to understand that the great majority of the florists in the west are with him in the enforcement of this ruling. I believe in it. It is going to win out. Some of these other fellows say that we cannot grow this, and we cannot grow that; they are either prevaricating, or they do not know what they are talking about. I want to bespeak for Dr. Marlatt a hearing. I think he will answer a whole lot of you fellows in a manner that you cannot gainsay."

J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J.

"Is it the corn borer that they are so afraid of; a worm that bores in the end of the ear of corn?"

Dr. Marlatt: "It is a worm that has come in from Europe where it has been known for perhaps six or eight years. It is little known here; this is the second year. It works in the corn from the root up to the tassel, and goes out into the ear. As many as 300 worms have been taken from a single stalk of corn, perhaps half a dozen in each ear. It works in the field corn. Fortunately, or unfortunately, it is in the sweet corn country now, and we do not know what it will do in field corn yet; it is too early to say. It may have no relation to horticulture, but it does feed on everything that has a stalk big enough for it to get into. It will get into every one of these flowers in front of me, which are evidently not all gladioli. I know enough to say that. It will affect any barnyard grass very quickly and florist or ornamental stock that you grow in your garden. It has been found in such stock. We have discovered it in Massachusetts in 48 different kinds of plants. It may have come from Europe in some of these importations that are named or in importations of other things. There is another corn worm that works in the way that you say and is widespread throughout the country."

Mr. Esler: "There are two kinds. One works up through the heart of the corn, the other bores in from the end and spoils the ear. What I want to get at is whether this is a new thing, or an old thing?"

Dr. Marlatt: "Brand-new."

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.

"Personally I want to thank Dr. Marlatt for coming here and being with us. The only thing I regret is that the Doctor, and his associates, have not done so during the many years they were contemplating putting this Quarantine No. 37 in force. I do not want to speak on any special subject, because I am interested in horticulture in general, but I cerainly would reverse myself if I should say that we could not grow most of the things in this country. I said we could before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and other bodies, and I repeat it today, but I certainly take exception to the statement that we can grow roses. We cannot grow enough roses, either greenhouse or out-door roses. We want time. My father was a florist; I was born on a farm, and brought up under those influences. I was never blessed with great learning, but I had some common sense. I used to watch the swallows looking after their young ones when I found a nest in the fence corner. They used to carefully feed them until their wings had grown and they could fly, and then they had to take care of themselves, and were ready for anything that came along. I agree with the Doctor that we can grow most of these things; we certainly can, but it takes time, and it takes capital. They talk about starting to grow palms in California, but how many years does it take to get a specimen plant that you are proud of? This country has grown by leaps and bounds, and horticulture is keeping pace with its other advancements, and we are eventually going to be able to produce the material that our patrons demand. We have had to get hemlock and a few spruce from Europe, some of which are even native to this country, but which we had no chance or time to grow in sufficient quantities to supply the demand. If this horticultural board had given us four or five years' time, with the restrictions such as they are, we would have no chance to complain. The Doctor admits that some of these insects presumably have been imported with the horticultural stock, but that does not say that we are criminals. There was other stock imported that would bring them into this country. They say that some of them come in with straw. The Doctor will admit that horticulture and floriculture are the most advanced part of agriculture. Why should we be singled out? Why should we suffer to save the main body? I will give you a little experience I had lately." (The speaker here told of the experience he had in sending an exhibit, similar to the one that he displayed at this convention over to Canada, and upon his desiring to bring the exhibit back into this country, he found it was necessary to get authority from the federal horticultural board, and they advised him that the board could not issue a permit for the re-entry into the United States of nursery stock, or any other plants or seeds shipped from New Jersey to the Canadian horticultural convention at Toronto).

Dr. Marlatt: "Who signed that letter?"

Mr. Manda: "It was signed by Mr. Palmer. Now gentlemen, here is the thing in a nut-shell. I was taking plants grown by me in the United States to exhibit in Canada, and why should I not have the right to bring back the same plants that were inspected in New Brunswick and stamped as O. K. on the side of the case? Yet I was not allowed to bring those plants back into the United States. How would the learned Doctor like it, if he had occasion to visit Canada and they permitted him to go in, but when he tried to come out, they would say: 'You are an American citizen, but you may have contracted some germs of small-pox on your trip through Canada and you cannot come back to the United States.' I do not wish to be harsh on the Doctor. I am a man of common sense, I work hard, and have done so for 46 years in this line of business. I fully agree with a good many of the things he said, but I certainly do hope that the Doctor will leave this body with the impression that we are hard-working men, the same as the farmers. We do not want any favors and have never asked for them.

"When I was in Canada, I was asked, 'How do you get on for coal?' I said, 'I have a lot of old mattresses and blankets in readiness so that I can save my stock of coal.' They said, 'How much did you get?' 'Fifty per cent.' 'Oh, we got 75 per cent of your own coal.' Now that does not make you feel good. So I hope when the Doctor leaves this meeting that he will realize that we are a lot of hard-working men, that we are good citizens, and that we do not want to antagonize the learned Doctor or his associates. All we want is fair play. We do not ask favors, we do not ask for discrimination. We want fair play and justice; and I know Uncle Sam will give it to us."

President Ammann: "I think that we might hear from the Doctor at this time."

Dr. Marlatt: "Give them all the chance they want."

President Ammann: "Is there anyone else that wants to make a few remarks in regard to what has been said? Wallace R. Pierson is always a brief talker."

Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.

"First of all, I am an American. I was born in the Connecticut hills. One of the first things that I was taught when I was a child was, that every man is innocent until he is proven guilty, and that American principle I wish you would carry out in your treatment of plants. I heard the plea of the orchid men. I have never heard anyone who could prove that orchids were guilty of bringing any contamination into the United States. I want to say for them, although I am not an orchid grower, that I ask for them the consideration of your board.

"I have heard it stated here that a certain gentleman, who ought to know better, made the statement in Washington that rose stocks could not be grown in the United States. If you remember, I talked with you after that meeting, and you asked me if I would be willing, and be anxious to use American-grown stocks? You remember, I told you, that with the assistance of your board, that we could show the American nurserymen how to grow American stock, and that I would use them in preference to any stocks grown in the world, because I am a thorough American. As to the azaleas, or snowdrops, or tulips, I am not a bulb man, I am as bad as you are. If those bulbs can be brought into the United States clean, and without contamination being proved against them, we, as American citizens, are entitled to them. But, if there is danger to the food crops or to the forest crops, if such danger is proven to exist, I am willing to sacrifice. I am also in addition to being a greenhouse man, a nurseryman to some extent, and I have always believed that we, as nurserymen, are entitled to raw material. I would dislike very much to see anything come into the United States that would carry any danger through soil on the roots. If there is danger to the forest crops, or to the fruit crops, again I am an American, and I am willing to relinquish any desire for that stock. Gentlemen, that is all I have to say. I thank you.'

President Ammann: "Does anyone else want to be heard? If not, we will hear from the Doctor."

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.: "I want to be heard, but I will give way to the Doctor for the present."

Rebuttal Remarks by Doctor Marlatt.

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I have been very much interested. It is manifest that I cannot cover the whole ground that has been covered in the last hour or hour and a half by the various speakers. I do not know that I am competent to cover the whole ground. I have been criticised as an ignoramus, but I venture to say that on this subject there are very few who have not their limitations. I doubt, even, if every man who is a florist and a member of this society, would be able to identify every plant in the world, but because of that, you would not wish to be shown up as an ignoramus. I know a great deal more about my own specialty than you do. I have spent 40 years studying plant pests and plant diseases, and I probably know something about them. Unfortunately, in this world, we cannot be everything, we cannot be jack-of-all-trades. I cannot know as much about your business as Mr. Farquhar, or Mr. Lager, or all the rest of you. I know my own subject; I do not know your subject, and I accept this criticism that I am an ignoramus in matters of flowers, as a compliment. Mr. Hill really hit the nail on the head. I presented to you our reasons for the quarantine, the necessity of protecting the United States as a whole, its big crops and its big industries from pests. I have spoken to you briefly. I could give you details by the hour. I showed very briefly how the things that you import have brought in these things, some of them, not all of them, a good percentage of them. They practically come in with living plants. That means that these several classes have been responsible for most of these things; they are responsible for the distribution of many of these pests in this country. We have to take the broader view; we have to take in the whole country, and the wealth of the country, its farms and farm products, as well as the wealth of pleasure and joy that comes in your special production. With the exception of a very few of the speakers, they have all dwelt on their personal interests. I do not blame them. That is a large element in any man's mind. I do not blame them at all. That sort of argument and criticism is perfectly natural, and we are glad to have it, because thereby we may be able to make arrangements that will lessen the blow, and we will be glad to do it where we do not increase or assume risk by such action.

"I omitted, I find, from my previous remarks, one little item which I wished to discuss, and that was the entering into new production enterprises in this country to make good, to make available things that are excluded. I want to discuss the possible future outlook for that sort of business. First, I might say that criticism has been made of the fact that the board might change its mind tomorrow, and that just as you had entered into the new industries, it may rescind the whole business and leave you in the lurch with your money thrown away or that there may be new officials in the agrciultural department. There may be a New Jerusalem some time. I believe that this quarantine is right in its fundamental lines, and that if you men want to get into new production enterprises, you can go in with safety, and with the feeling that the main line is going to stand where it is now.

"We are willing to consider the orchids again. I told an incident in Chicago which I might mention here. Mr. Mann, whom I mentioned, apparently when this campagn against the quarantine law was at its height and congress was being flooded with letters of protest from you gentlemen from all over the country, the matter became of such volume that it came up on the floor of the House, and several men arose and asked what this quarantine was, what it meant, and Mr. Mann, who is a practical grower and has a large garden, said: 'I do not know what it means, (I saw this in the Congressional Record afterward), but I know one of the men who is associated with that work, and I am going to see him tomorrow, find out about it, and let you know.' He came into my office in the very brusque manner that he always has, without saying a word of greeting, and said, 'I want to ask you two questions. One is, have you made provision in that bill for the entry of new things from Europe and foreign countries?' I said, 'We have.' He said, 'I take it for granted that you think that you are right in your grounds for quarantine. I want to know whether you have backbone enough to stand for it?' I said, 'I think we have.' He went on to explain that if many men made investments throughout the country, based on the passage of the bill, and it did not stick, there would be tremendous loss and suffering in consequence. That is the point of view of the board. We believe we are correct in the main lines in regard to this quarantine, and we wish to protect the men, who on the strength of it, go into production enterprises. We have made provision for the introduction from Europe of the necessary réproduction material. I think you all know that if you want to bring in any of the new orchids that are developed in England, you can bring them in for reproduction purposes.

"There has been a great deal of criticism of the board. I thought I explained, and I do not know whether it is worth while to try to do it again. A good deal of ridicule has been heaped on me. I have no hard feelings against any of you florists, because I am not a horticulturist. I was a professor once, but I have forgotten all I ever knew. The board is simply an administrative body. We get our information from the whole field of agriculture. We have in the bureau of plant industry approximately 100 different kinds of plant experts who are all interested in plant-growing. We have several hundred men who are interested in studying plant diseases. We have as many more who are interested in entomology; it is not a case of entomologists, it is a case of expert growers, men who know plants, plant insects, and who know plant diseases. We are in touch with all of the men in the whole United States in the universities and experiment stations. Ours is a board of five men, but we simply record the information and advice which comes from this vast body of men who are informed on the subject. We consulted the plant men. We had a hearing; we had two or three conferences with those men. If they were not there to speak for themselves, it was not our fault. Notices were sent out to the press, and to all the different associations, and publications were made in all the daily papers. Press notices and full information were sent to a very complete list of horticulturists and farm journals. We published many of these things in full. Many of the publications who did not print them in full, made notices of them. We cannot send these notices to every man who is interested, throughout the United States, but we do send the information to every man who applies for it. If you do not get it, let us know, and we will correct our list. We are glad to give everybody, every bit of information that is available and necessary, and to carry on correspondence.

"We would be glad to have all of the board practical floriculturists. The law provides that the board shall be appointed by the secretary of agriculture from inside the bureaus of the department; two men from the bureau of entomology, not more than two men from any one bureau. He appoints two men from the bureau of entomology, two men from the bureau of plant industry, the assistant chief and another, the former being a man without a superior in the plant line, the other man, the leading pathologist in the department. He appoints the fifth man from the bureau of forestry, who perhaps knows more about forest trees than any other man living. That is the board. Although it is a board that has some connection with horticulture, it does not rely on its own information. It gets it from all possible sources. This talk about 'five men'; I thought I had explained that, but apparently my explanation went for nothing.

"I am very sorry that a circular of this department cast any reflections upon Mr. Eisele. I do not know the circular in question, and I would be glad to see it. I am also sorry that the gentleman who took his plants into Canada, Mr. Manda, had difficulty in getting them back. The work of the board has become very heavy, and the chairman does not see all the letters that go through the board. A great deal has to be done by someone more or less blindly, and in this case, may have been done without sufficient thought, or otherwiso I do not think the gentleman would have had that experience, or if the matter had been brought to me, he would not have had that trouble.

"I cannot say anything about orchids. I have already discussed the matter of bulbs, and there is nothing more to be said about that. We will be glad to receive a delegation, with whom we will go over that matter. As to orchids, we acted on information from our expert advisers. If there has been a mistake there, it can be corrected. A number of insects have been found on orchids, and we have called attention to some of them. The little red ant is a very trivial thing and makes you laugh, but when you realize that that little red ant may be the Argentina ant, which is the greatest form of house pest of this country in California, and has already infested the citrus orchards there, that it encourages and harbors all the scale insects and little bugs, then that little ant is no longer trivial, it is a matter of very grave importance. When you know the facts about it, you realize that it is a very important thing. It is known as the Argentina ant, and it inhabits all Central American countries."

Joseph A. Manda: "Is not fumigation supposed to kill all those insects?"

Dr. Marlatt: "Fumigation is the best thing we know, but it is not perfect. I might say that the recommendation in the matter of orchids was simply on the general principle that governed in the establishment of a quarantine. Now, essential, or non-essential, orchids are produced in this country. I remember in the discussion of this quarantine in one of your journals, I saw an advertisement from one of your brilliant writers who waked up in the middle of the night in a cold sweat when he thought of what those radical men at Washington would do with our orchids, and he said, but just about that time, I thought about what my old father told me about raising orchids from seeds, and I got up and started to work, and now I have 30,000, and I can produce as the country needs. That was an advertisement. Whether it is true, or not, I do not know; it is on record and you can look it up. So you see there is some divided opinion on orchids. But we are ready to consider any of these special matters. I cannot make any promises as to what we will do, but I hope we will be fair. I know this, Mr. Farquhar, we are hard-headed men, and you can talk to us until Doomsday and we will not do anything, but we are ready to be shown. The bulb men, themselves, are undecided. We have to restrict these big things that are full of danger, but we will consult you on them. We want to get your views first, and then we want to act as wisely as we can on the recommendations that are made to us by men whom we trust, not on our own fool wooden heads. I hope I have made that clear; that it is not a federal board of five, but it is the department of agriculture, with over 25,000 men all over the United States who are back of us. If we have made a mistake, we want to correct it, but I want to say that we think on the main lines we are absolutely sound. The main trouble is with the great bulk of plants that are earth-carrying plants. If that earth can be removed, that will remove one element of the danger; but we have to consider the whole matter from every standpoint.

"Now, gentlemen, there was one personal matter that I mentioned. I was foolish enough to mention the matter of pay. I would like to withdraw those remarks, but since I mentioned it, I think the gentlemen will remember what I said. I think I said that the law provided for this board, no pay should come to this board for their services as members of the board. That is the meaning of the law; that is not the exact wording. Those men receive certain salaries for their work in the department, and they earn their salary and more too. Mr. Southworth is the head of the bureau of forestry. He certainly earns his salary, and so on with the other members. I will not refer to myself. I probably do not earn mine, but those salaries we had before we were members of the board. We have them still, thank God! but we do not get a cent additional for this work which represents more than one-half of the work that we do and the biggest part of our responsibility. It is provided for in the law. A friendly and generous congress provided that. I do not want any more money than I am getting. I want to do this work. I am sorry I mentioned the matter of salary because it has apparently been made a handle of, but I want you to understand, since it has come up, just what the facts are.

"Gentlemen, I do not want to get into a controversy; if I did, I would get the worst of it. You know more about the subject than I do. I do know more about my own line, and we could not get together on matters of controversy.

I think this discussion has been of use to all of us, and certainly has been of great use to me as chairman of the board. I wish to thank you again. I hope you will feel that you can go ahead and criticise the board in your journals, editorially or by letter, or personally, directly, or to the secretary of agriculture, or to representatives in congress. We give you carte blanche to do it all, and we will not feel any the worse toward you for doing it. It is one of the things that you get through being an American citizen, and we are not going to deprive you of it. If you can show us we are wrong, it will be thrown out, we will have done our damndest, and you will have done yours. I thank you."

Frank R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the convention, we could continue this argument indefinitely, but the hour is growing late. I do not want to reflect on any of the arguments that have already taken place. We are pretty well familiar with the facts. I want to assure the Doctor at this time that we hold him in the highest esteem personally. I want to give him the assurance that there is nothing personal in our difference of opinion; it is a question of the methods pursued by the horticultural board. We are glad to have him at this convention to put forth the department's side of the question, and I want to say again that we hold him personally in the highest regard. But it is the province of all men to differ. We hold that the board has exceeded its authority under the Act of 1912, which delegated to it specific powers by act of Congress, and that it had no right to read anything into that act. The board is an executive and not a legislative body. In all matters of quarantine, the burden is on the government to prove the necessity for such quarantine; that because they were afraid that injurious insects might be introduced into the country from some place at some time. They should be satisfied as to the necessity for quarantine of any given specific plant; they should not issue a blanket order which would practically keep out the bulk of our plant importations, and there is no proof before this society that any of the injurious insects, which the Doctor is so fearful of, have been imported throuhg our importations of greenhouse plants. The question is, whether their action will produce the results they claim in the way of protection to American products,—whether protection does protect? I know that if the members of this society felt that their importations jeopardized American agriculture, we would subordinate our personal interests to the good of the many, and to the interest of the country and the state. I think I have told the Doctor that already. Finding fault is not the way that this thing is going to be arrived at. The necessity of the quarantine should be proved, and it has not been proved or shown that our importations have been the means of introducing any of the pests complained of. The exclusion of greenhouse products will not accomplish the purpose intended. These insects more readily enter the country through lumber and packing material; bananas, cocoanuts and other tropical fruits, which are brought here by the shipload, are under no inspection, and are infinitely more dangerous as insect-carriers than plant imports from well-known countries like Belgium, England, France and Holland.

I wish to assure the Doctor that the action taken by the tariff and legislative committee was endorsed by the directors at a meeting held in Detroit in January last, and this report was signed by every member of the board of directors. I want the Doctor to understand, that in presenting this matter as we did, that we were accredited representatives of the executive board. A good deal of capital has been made of the fact that we were a luke-warm committee in coming before you at this time, and asking for instructions from this body. Your committee feels that its work in connection with this regulation has not been completed, but before taking further action we request further information. If it is your desire that your committee shall make a satisfactory adjustment, it will greatly strengthen us, and in that view the tariff committtee submit this matter for your instructions.

QUARANTINE RESOLUTIONS.

Following the discussion of Dr. Marlatt's address, S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y., moved the adoption of the following resolutions which were seconded by W. A. Manda, and duly carried:

"WHEREAS, on June 1, Quarantine No. 37 with regulations, became effective, prohibiting further importation of many plants and plant products and raw materials essential to the conduct and expansion of our business, and places burdensome, expensive, and unnecessary restrictions on the importation of other important classes of horticultural products and

"WHEREAS, the members of this society require, and consider themselves entitled to, real constructive regulation and efficient inspection, and are not satisfied with destructive business-wrecking regulations as a substitute, therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, that the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, at its annual meeting held in Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, attended by 1,500 delegates, unanimously protest against these drastic regulations; also the methods used by the federal horticultural board in promulgating them, and be it further

"RESOLVED, that this convention respectfully offers the following constructive suggestions:

"1. That Quarantine No. 37 with regulations be rescinded, and that in its place, such regulations be made as by correct methods of inspection will, within reason, properly safeguard the country against the invasion of foreign pests and diseases, but which will not unnecessarily interfere with the horticultural interests of the country.

"2. That at least two members of the present federal horticultural board of five bureau chiefs be replaced by practical horticulturists, who will not be entirely out of touch with the horticultural trade and its requirements.

"3. Or that three practical horticulturists be added to the board's present membership of five.

"4. That this reorganized board call hearings at a time when those interested can attend, giving separate hearings to each of these important classifications: (1) orchids; (2) bulbs and roots; (3) nursery stock; (4) roses; (5) dracæna canes and other similar raw materials. And be it further

"RESOLVED, that the secretary be requested to send a copy of this resolution to the members of the house committee on agriculture."

A Modest Request.

One young man who was highly sensitive about an impediment which he had in his speech went to a stammerers' institute and asked for a course of treatments. The professor asked him if he wanted a full or a partial course.

"A p-p-artial c-c-ourse."

"To what extent would you like a partial course?"

"Enough s-so that wh-when I go to a f-f-florist's and ask for a c-c-chrohry-s-s-anth (whistle) e-m-mum, the th-thing won't w-wilt b-before I g-get it!"

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

It is now time to rush the finishing touch on all work in the painting or other repairs at the store, or the decorative accessories that will soon be called into use. All such work should be finished and out of the way now while there is probably leisure time, which can be turned to much better account later.

From this time on, there should be a persistant bid for business; not just a passive, waiting attitude, with a "It will start after a while; no use to worry," but a determined, aggressive, forward movement, with all departments of the store alert, and ready to take advantage of every opportunity that presents itself. By keeping the best goods in every line to the front, arranging in one way today, and another tomorrow, so as to hold the eye of all who see them; new business may be obtained. Particular attention should be given to the outside front of the store. The pavement display has great possibilities. All kinds of house plants will soon be in demand, and while large purchases are not likely at this time, the well decorated front attracts attention, people stop, look and admire, and seed is sown that bears fruit later. Always have an interesting window. Change the stock frequently. Cosmos is now plentiful. Display a windowful for a day or two arranged in various receptacles to get a decorative effect; a card with the price per bunch will bring the people in. Golden rod is popular; a large basket or vase, filled artistically is sure to be admired. Bunches priced, and a card, "Take home a bunch for the table," is a suggestion that will often make a sale.

Dahlias are now about to have their inning. When at their best in about two weeks, they will occupy the center of the stage. They are a good flower to use in disposing of a lot of small vase baskets that have been left over. A dozen dahlias, a few autumn leaves, and a piece of narrow ribbon of the right color for the combination, will fill a small basket, and may be just what suits the undecided customer. Put pink in a blue and white basket, bronze or red in a green or dark brown. A dozen or two of these in the window, with a price card, will keep things moving.

A large wreath of white dahlias makes a good window piece. It must be nicely made, so as to bear close inspection, and stand as a specimen of the store's artistic work. It is not intended for sale, although such window designs are, at times, sold almost as soon as in place, being purchased by someone in a hurry, who left their ordering to the last minute.

Clematis paniculata is now at its best—a wonderfully beautiful flower, splendid for design, basket work or boxes of cut flowers. It will remain fresh several days, if the ends of the sprays are kept in water.

The new crop roses are now being offered in quantity, nice flowers, but many with short stems. Special sales of these, loose in boxes or in tumbler or small vase baskets, if well displayed and advertised, are good "opening of the season" leaders.

Make a feature of the earliest of the chrysanthemums as they appear. A vase filled artistically, with two dozen Smith's Advance, the first of the whites, now about due, is sure to attract attention.

A great help on a busy day is a prepared line of ribbon or chiffon bows. In every shop, there is generally some one who excels in this rather feminine specialty. Ribbons are now so expensive that they must be measured carefully, so as to eliminate all waste. Short ends may be used in the bows, and even the little matter of tapering the cuts will be found to effect a saving. Bows made in leisure moments, and packed carefully in boxes, will hold their form and be ready for instant use. A white tape or piece of narrow ribbon, the color of the bow, tied in with it, is used to attach it to spray or basket. Wires used in making the bow are also used, but are objected to by some customers. A set or two of shower ribbons and chiffon on hand for the bride's bunch, will make a quick finish when, as it sometimes happens, the work has fallen behind.

Moving the Surplus.

At various seasons of the year there are periods of overproduction when the supply is far in excess of the demand. In the early fall when the dahlias are at their height, the first full crops of roses arrive in quantities and are found difficult to handle. At this time, the fall cosmos, for about 10 days before frost, floods the market. These, together with the early chrysanthemums and other flowers of the season, tax the market facilities to the breaking point, and bring price levels so low that shipments at times do not return the costs of transportation.

In February, when the winter sweet peas are at their height, thousands of these lovely flowers coming in to an already full market, produces a congestion, resulting in the inevitable break in prices. There are then week end clean ups of passe stock to street men at low figures, who by displaying these damaged flowers on thronged streets, manage to get a profit for themselves. We wonder if the commission dealers and the large growers ever stop to think of the great damage that is done to the business by foisting on the public these stale flowers. The street man fixes his stock up to look its best and cries "Fresh Roses," "Fresh Carnations," and while they may look presentable, they are so old as to be almost sure to shrivel up or fall apart the next day. Many purchasers must feel that the amount, small as it seemed, was thrown away, and are not encouraged to buy flowers, as they last such a short time. The street men with permanent stands, situated in selected locations in the thronged retail centers of all our large cities, many having elaborate cases, as large or even larger than are found in quite pretentious retail stores, while always watchful in getting bottom prices, are just as particular in seeing that the stock is fresh. Their supply is kept up daily, and their prices are not much, it any, below those of the stores for the same grade of stock. Such dealers turn over quantities of flowers daily, and as all their transactions are for cash, they are valued customers of the commission houses.

The recognized avenues of the trade for the distribution of flowers are, however, the retail stores; depending on their capacity and business management, they handle in varying qantities, 90 per cent of the production of the growers. It is to them, therefore, in all periods of overproduction, that the market must look for relief. There is no other avenue. Flowers are very perishable; they must be sold within 24 hours, as by this time they begin to take on a passe appearance that greatly reduces their value.

There is but one way to meet increased production, and that is by creating or stimulating an extra demand. A number, but unfortunately comparatively few of the retailers of the country, take advantage of these periods of over production to notify their customers that choice flowers are now to be obtained at popular prices. By keeping a good lookout ahead, they anticipate and lay plans to push the sale and make quick and profitable turnovers of this extra stock.

In all large business enterprises, from three to five per cent of the gross sales, and at times much more, is appropriated annually for advertising. If the plant and cut flower business of the country was controlled by one firm, all productive seasons would be anticipated, and advertised to such an extent that the entire supply would be sold at prices that would leave a handsome margin over the cost of publicity. Large manufacturers of soaps, cosmetics, tobacco, and many other articles that are in common use, send out lithographs and articles planned for special window decorations to display their wares to the best advantage.

If this is found profitable for the sale of one article, why would not some such aid to be furnished at cost to the retail stores, available for use all over the country, help greatly in special drives in times of over production of sweet peas, roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, asters, gladioli, etc.? Window stickers, explanatory and price cards, etc., are useful features as they convey much necessary and essential information, as would also leaflets that could be mailed to customers and others.

There are many who carry on business in a humdrum manner, year after year, being satisfied to take what comes along, and to whom special sales, or any extra investment to stimulate trade, does not appeal. There is nothing like healthy competition to wake up these drowsy ones. With a live shop around the corner, and another further up the street, carrying on successful special sales of surplus stock, they are pretty sure to sit up and take notice, and finally see the necessity of adopting similar methods to hold old or obtain new customers.

Just One Thing After Another.

The J. H. Timm Co., coal dealers, Plymouth, Wis., is undoubtedly like many others these days—somewhat unsettled. A small card which this concern has had printed reads:

IN SYMPATHY.

We have been in this business a good many years. We have been pleasing and displeasing the public ever since. We have been cussed and discussed, boycotted, lied about, lied to, hung up and rubbed down.

The only reason we are staying in business now is to see "what the hell" is going to happen next.

ELYRIA, O.—Hody & Tuleo have opened a flower store at 378 Broad street. Stock is supplied by their range of 30,000 feet of glass.

ITHACA, N. Y.—A movement has been started to secure a new range of glass for the state college of agriculture here, the cost of which will be several thousand dollars.

BELLEFONTAINE, O.—The Stelzig Flower Shop recently arranged a very unique display of flowers in the window of the Western Union Telegraph Co.'s office, calling attention to the Florist's Telegraph Delivery service of the establishment.

CORNELIA, GA.—At the forty-third annual meeting of the Georgia State Horticultural Society, held in this city, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: R. C. Berckmans, Macon, president; B. W. Hunt, Eatonville, vice-president; T. H. McHatton, secretary; J. B. Wight, Cairo, treasurer.

FLORISTS' FERNS.

Seedlings.

That there is continued development in the fern business is patent to any competent observer, for not only do we see large blocks of the common ferns, such as the several trade varieties of the Boston, melt away in a few weeks, having been absorbed in the regular course of trade, but it is also evident that the public reaches out for the novelties, as they are presented, and cibotiums and Asplenium nidus in well-grown stock, are also rapidly taken up. Of course, there is, and doubtless will continue to be, a considerable demand for small ferns for table ferneries, and in this particular field, there is possibly less change than there is among the larger specimens, the list of varieties changing but little from year to year.

But the production of seedling ferns for florists' use, seems to be getting more and more into the hands of a few large growers, probably from the fact that these specialists have systematized this branch of the business to such a degree that they can produce the stock for a less cost than the small grower is able to do. The latter, therefore, finds it more satisfactory to buy his stock of small ferns in trays, having them delivered to him during the summer at such time as may be convenient for him to pot them off. There is much to be said in favor of this plan from the fact that some species of ferns are much slower than others in the seedling stage of growth, and when the purchaser of this stock gets them in the trays, the ferns are practically all ready for potting off, whether they be pteris or aspidiums.

The holly ferns, as the cyrtomiums are now commonly known, are also among the slow ones in the first stages of growth, and it hardly pays to force them by extra heat, for this fern rather resents too warm a house, and under such conditions, is very likely to develop a good crop of thrips and other insects. And speaking of holly ferns, reminds us that this is a modern trade name for the varieties of Cyrtomium falcatum, and as such has met with popular favor, but it is not quite a correct designation, from the fact that a European fern, Aspidium Lonchitis, was the original holly fern, and is still given this common name in most dictionaries. Anyway, the natural beauty of Cyrtomium Rochfordianum would sell it, but the name holly has a Christmas suggestion, and these things all help in an emergency.

The sportive character of the nephrolepis has been many times referred to in fern literature, and this peculiarity is still adding novelties to the florists' stock, one of the latest being Macaw's variety of this much varied fern, and known as Nephrolepis Macawii. This fern is of the dwarf and compact type, and might be briefly described as an improved form of N. Scottii, the fronds being comparatively narrow, much undulated on the margins, and of a very pleasing shade of dark green. N. Macawii makes a lovely little specimen in a 4, 5 or 6-inch pot, and it seems to be finding a goodly share of recognition in the market.

Seedling variations among ferns are an old story, although they are always of much interest to the cultivator, and as a fern becomes plentiful, there are sure to be found some that vary from the original type, and the glory fern, Adiantum gloriosum or "Glory of Moordrecht," proves to be no exception to the rule, for this fern produces variations that are sometimes quite marked, either in form of growth or in coloring, the latter being in the young fronds particularly, and usually taking the form of red or pink tips. Such coloring was not unknown in the parent of the glory fern, A. Farleyense, and depended in some measure on the conditions of growth, those plants that were given considerable sunlight, usually showing more color on the young tips.

The various Boston ferns that have been planted out on benches will now be growing rapidly, and should soon be lifted and potted up, thus giving the plants an opportunity to become established in the pots before selling time, for while a newly lifted Boston may make a brave showing in the greenhouse, yet it is in no condition to be turned over to the tender mercies of a confiding customer.

During the hot and frequently muggy weather of August, it is almost impossible to give the fern house too much ventilation, either day or night, and while a good spraying overhead is often very beneficial, yet as autumn approaches, it is better not to do the spraying too late in the day. Moderate fumigation with nicotine paper, or spraying with nicotine solution, will do much toward keeping the ferns free from insects, and if the Florida fern caterpillar appears, give frequent dustings with pyrethrum powder.

Philadelphia Florists' Club.

The September meeting of the Florists' club of Philadelphia was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held at this season. Nominations for officers to serve for the ensuing year, to be elected in October, resulted as follows: For President, E. A. Harvey; for vice-president, A. A. Niessen and Harry M. Betz; for treasurer, George Craig; for secretary, Robert Kift.

The features of the evening were the addresses of A. A. Niessen, President Harvey, and Charles Grakelow, on the work of the recent S. A. F. convention. Mr. Niessen said it was unquestionably better attended than any previous meeting. He liked the three day limit, and hoped that Philadelphia members would always vote for this period. He praised the hospitality of the Detroit florists, who had outdone themselves, particularly in their entertainment of the ladies. The speaker said he thought that the society's proceedings should be held in the large parlor or ballroom of the hotel headquarters, as the meeting rooms generally next to the exhibition halls, were always so noisy that it was very difficult to hear the speakers. He advocated the appointment of a committee of the local club to carry on its work and keep up the enthusiasm inspired at the local meetings. He thought that there should be formed an organization of associated florists, to push the sale of flowers and back up the national campaign locally. A contribution of only $1 a week from each of the over 300 retail florists in the city would provide a fund, which would give the flower business a great boost. He said he was in favor of inviting the national society to Philadelphia in 1921.

Chas. H. Grakelow spoke of the great hospitality of the Detroit club, and of the close relations that existed there among all members of the trade, and how, in case of any social event or funeral that meant a long delivery, they got their orders together and saved time and expense by making one delivery of the whole lot. There should, he felt, have been a much larger delegation to the convention from Philadelphia, as all would have been greatly benefited. There was a spirit of progressiveness among the florists in the western cities, he had visited recently, which he would like to see emulated in the "Quaker City." The local trade should get together to push and popularize flowers, as they did the great national show, the great success of which was an example of what can be done when all work in unison. There should be a welcome in flowers to every organization that as a body visited this city. It should take the shape of baskets or vases of flowers, accompanied by a card, "Welcome to the City of Philadelphia," signed, "The Associated Florists of Philadelphia," with "Say it With Flowers" on the reverse side. He would be willing to bear half of the expense to try it out. To get people interested in you and your business, you must interest yourself in their affairs, and they will reciprocate. He had found it a good business move to place a "Happy New Year" card in his window at the anniversary of the Jewish New Year. He believed a "Say It With Flowers" week in October would give the business a good impetus. It was about time that the trade got busy and boosted the business and the city. He added he would like to be able to give them some of the optimism he received at Detroit.

President Harvey also spoke along the same lines, emphasizing the great benefits to be received from such a gathering. He hoped to see a record breaking attendance from this city at next year's S. A. F. meeting in Cleveland. H. M. Betz also voiced his great pleasure at being at the convention.

A motion to appoint a publicity committee to push the sale of flowers locally, with Mr. Grakelow as chairman, was passed at which there was much favorable discussion by a number of the members. It now appears as if there was at last to be a real local publicity campaign to be backed by the local trade.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The fall campaign is now about opening and contracts are being placed with a number of magazines for the insertion of a series of advertisements upon which much thought has been bestowed. The Thanksgiving and Christmas advertisements will be particularly striking. Some of the page advertisements will be in color. The magazines selected are: Literary Digest, Collier's Weekly, Outlook, Independent, Life, Metropolitan, American Magazine, Red Book, Sunset Magazine, Everybody's, World's Work, Munsey's, Review of Review's, Scribners, Cosmopolitan and Hearst's, giving a single copy circulation of nearly 18,000,000 or an estimated readers' circulation of 90,000,000, all of the classes from which flower buyers are commonly drawn.

Contracts for some of this advertising are necessarily placed long in advance of the appearance of the magazines. The cost, of course, is heavy, and taxes the resources of our committee, but with what funds are in hand, and what is confidently believed will be forthcoming by the time it is required, the committee has felt justified in going ahead with an appropriation of $20,000.

When the number of florists who are to benefit from our publicity is considered, our fund to-day represents but a very small part. The campaign has been in operation now about 20 months, and have had excellent experience as to its efficacy. We know that we are getting the results expected, that our work has been most fruitful. Leaders in other lines of business have watched our progress and have adopted our methods—outside proof that we are working in the right direction, should such proof be needed.

The question now is: Will this large body of non-subscribers come over and help us? There are few who could not afford to subscribe a dollar a week, although we do not ask that much. Many of our subscribers have pledged themselves for yearly sums which scarcely approach 10 cents a week—less than the price of one good cigar nowadays. A subscription of a reasonable amount will not hurt anybody, and it will remove that feeling that something is accepted for nothing. It is not customary for florists to have that feeling; in fact, florists are looked upon as the most generous of tradesmen. Yet, are they generous to themselves, or their calling, when they hold aloof from a movement which is productive of nothing but good for their industry? If all these non-subscribers would wake up and do what their brethren in the trade expects of them, our efforts could be doubled, and with the increase would come the advantage of two-fold results. Now is the time for the awakening. Let us hear from you.

The following subscriptions have been received and are in addition to those previously announced, annually for four years unless otherwise stated:

Rochester Exposition Flower Show.

The hall which contained the flower show at the Rochester, N. Y. exposition, September 1-6, was decorated with hemlock branches throughout, which formed a background for walls and ceiling and the same material was used on the pillars. The Rochester Rose Society, recently organized, and of which John Dunbar is president, exhibited some excellent roses, among the varieties being Jessie, Baby Doll, Mrs. Waddell, Old Gold, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Alex Hill and Pink Radiance. The display was staged primarily to interest local gardeners and rose growers.

James Vick's Sons exhibit, in charge of Messrs. Webins and Case had for its principal features annuals and perennials such as phlox, cosmos, physostegia, salpiglossis, gladioli, hibiscus, hydrangeas, amaranthus, rudbeckia, etc. The mammoth aster display in large beds was the big attraction.

George T. Boucher's exhibit was staged on a long bench which extended the full length of the left side of the hall. Here were a fine collection of fancy crotons, adiantum, palms, vases of gladioli and laurel trees.

Arthur Newborn's display consisted of vases and baskets of various flowers and Chinese lanterns and birch bark boxes filled with dried flowers. Corsage novelties were also attractively displayed.

Hart & Vick had a fine bed of gladioli, 12 feet in diameter, edged with coleus. A rockery also attracted considerable attention here as did the excellent showing of annuals and perennials.

Chas. Schlegel & Son had porch boxes filled with Boston ferns and asters in addition to basket arrangements of helichrysums. James Sproat was in charge here.

W. A. Hallouer, Ontario, N. Y., had between 30 and 40 varieties of dahlias. Some of the new ones were Love Fire, Ashtabula, Grant, Martin and General Weitze.

N. Harold Cottam & Son, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., had a fine exhibit of named varieties of dahlias, both small and wonderfully large flowers.

The park department's display consisted of palms, ferns, Rex begonias, crotons and gladioli, the arrangement being as attractive as in former years.

Jacob Thomann & Sons arranged baskets of pure white gladioli, tritomas, ferns and Oriental grasses.

C. W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, showed many new varieties of gladioli and several vases of good asters.

Walter S. Wright, of Shortsville, had gladioli in baskets, Peace being the outstanding variety.

The Morristone Co. featured bird baths, sundials, benches, garden vases, etc.

J. S. Bryant, of Newark, N. Y., staged gladioli and dahlias.

Margaret Boucher showed gladioli in variety.

SEPTEMBER BRINGS IMPROVED BUSINESS.

There was a distinct change in the cut flower market last week, due to the very active demand that started with Labor day. The majority of the work was for weddings, although there was a large influx of funeral work the latter part of the week. There was also a good shipping trade. The supply has been excellent, with roses showing marked improvement each week. Asters are at the height of their season, and are bringing $2 and $3 per 100, with the fancy varieties still higher. Gladioli are holding up well in spite of the hot weather. Hydrangeas are utilized to a great extent in wedding decorations. Very few carnations are arriving, but there is practically no call for them, as long as asters hold the stage. The cool weather of the last two weeks of August changed to intensely hot temperatures with the heat very great at night, and these conditions are having a telling effect, especially on the outdoor flowers.

NOTES.

The first fall meeting of the florists' club was held September 8, at 130 West Wayne street, in the headquarters of the Peace Centennial Exposition. The question of having a booth to "Say It With Flowers" at the centennial was discussed and approved, and the matter of Sunday closing was also taken up, but no decision was reached in regard to this matter.

George W. Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., was on the sick list last week. Mrs. R. W. Doswell, who has been enjoying an eight-weeks' vacation, has returned to her position at the store. They are receiving some fine asters from their greenhouses, and enjoyed a brisk trade the first week of September.

Shawyer roses are being sent to this market in good shape from the young stock of the W. J. & M. S. Vesey greenhouses.

The Flick Floral Co. has received a large shipment of pottery and baskets, in preparation for the fall trade.

A fine wedding decoration recently was done by Ed Wenninghoff, including the boquets.

BIG IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE FELT.

Business improved wonderfully during the past week and all of the stores have taken on a fall appearance. Roses are arriving in much better condition and carnations are seen in good supply and excellent quality. Three days of heavy rains have ruined the outdoor stock for the present. Cosmos has had a good season and never sold better.

NOTES.

The retail florists' club held a meeting at the Hotel Bellevue, September 4, at which the principal speaker was Secretary Hicks, of the chamber of commerce. He spoke at length and submitted numerous suggestions which were of benefit to the trade. A committee was appointed consisting of H. R. Comley, William Penn, Harry Quint, Julius Zinn and Seymore K. Grose to meet with the governing board of the chamber of commerce at a later date, at which time it is hoped it will be able to formulate plans for the betterment of retail conditions.

W. W. Edgar reports a fine stock of begonias, cyclamens and chrysanthemums in his plant section making good progress for the fall trade.

John Eiseman, for many years with Penn, The Florist, is now with Gollup Brothers, in the Houghton & Dutton building.

H. S. Rogers, well known to the trade in this city, has opened the Hamlin Flower Shop at 78 Boylston street.

Wm. McAlpine is now spending his entire time at the range at Exeter, N. H., working up new stock.

Andrew Christensen has returned from a month's vacation, spent in Florida and the southern states.

Arthur Carr is spending a month with his family at Portland Harbor.

MODERATE DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

The past week has been a fairly active one in all quarters. It is expected that from this time forward, trade will gradually increase until it resumes its normal fall proportions. The most interesting event of the week was the apperance of the favorite chrysanthemum, Chrysolora. When this variety puts in its appearance, it may be fairly said that the chrysanthemum season has begun in earnest, and that the shipping period has opened up. The quality of the offerings of this chrysanthemum were never better, and as is always the case with it splendid prices are being received by both grower and retailer. A beautiful bronze incurved after the style of Clara Wells is sharing the public favor with Chrysolora. Crocus is another standard variety that is in great demand. There is a large supply of Monrovia and Unaka. Some very good Crystal Gem is to be had. It is practically the only white in the market. The out of town demand for the shipping varieties has the market cleaned up in good shape every day. In roses, Mrs. Charles Russell is arriving in larger quantities than for some time. It is improving in quality every day and good stock is bringing top-notch prices. There is a large cut of Ophelia and its sports. There is a great abundance of Hadley, Ulrich Brunner and other reds. Few if any white sorts are noted. Some Irish Elegance appeared during the week and closed out quickly. Cecile Brunner is not in over supply. The same is true of Mrs. Aaron Ward. The aster growers are having a hard time of it this season. Most of the stock arriving now does not pay for the expense of cutting and I am reliably informed that enormous quantities find their way to the garbage wagons every morning. Any old price is accepted for this stock. Gladioli are holding out in great shape and some splendid stock is being sold. All the light colored varieties are in great favor and are proving highly remunerative to the growers. Very few sweet peas are coming in now, their season being about over. There is an ample supply of zinnias although they are not nearly so plentiful as in former years. Good carnations are hard to get. The few offerings of first grade stock are quickly bought up at good prices. There is the usual fall cut of short-stemmed stock coming in, but it does not move at all. Delphiniums are quite popular and are much in demand for decorative work. There is a very heavy supply of dahlias to be seen everywhere. Dr. H. L. Tevis is eagerly taken by the stores as it is the best seller. Very few other sorts are in public favor now that the chrysanthemum is here. There is still a great scarcity of orchids of every variety. Gardenias, too, are hard to secure. Water lilies are to be had in limited quantities and are used only for decorative work. Pot grown celosias of excellent quality are about the only flowering plant offered. Cratægus pyracantha is being largely used and is very attractive, its branches being loaded with orange colored berries. Cratægus crenulata is also popular with its wealth of bright red berries. There are plenty of green goods.

NOTES.

The new wholesale florist establishment of J. A. Axell on Bush street opened for business on the first of the month. This up-to-the-minute store is right in the heart of the wholesale flower market and is well equipped to take care of a large trade. Mr. Axell, the proprietor, needs no introduction to the trade of the west and carries with him the best wishes of all in embarking in business on his own account. He is greatly pleased with the amount of business being done and is making heavy shipments of high-grade chrysanthemums and other seasonable stock to eastern and northern cities. He will also ship violets on a large scale to distant points when the season opens up.

The Lynch Nursery Company, of Menlo Park, reports that the chrysanthemum shipping trade has opened up in a brisk manner with them. They are daily making shipments to the northern cities of the leading early varieties. They have a large acreage planted to the best commercial varieties this season and expect to be very busy from now on. This firm is probably the largest grower of smilax in the country. They expect to ship over 35,000 strings this coming season.

The chief event of the coming week will be the fourth annual dahlia show of the Dahlia Society of California which will be held in the ball room of the Palace Hotel, September, 4-6. President F. C. Burns says it will be larger and finer than any of its predecessors. All available space has been applied for and every prominent grower in the state will participate. One of the interesting exhibits will be the one sent by the prisoners at the state penitentiary of San Quentin. It is said that some excellent results have been obtained there by the convicts in growing the dahlia. H. Hastings has been appointed publicity man for the show and Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano Rossi & Co., is manager.

The Blossom Shop on Devisadero street near Sutter has a very neat little store and are doing a substantial business in this neghborhood. They are receiving some splendid Chrysolora and Crocus which sell readily. Victor Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, says his firm has several large decorations this coming week which promise to keep the force very busy. Large quantities of gladioli and chrysanthemums will be used. They are receiving some very good Russells from their grower. They could handle many more if the supply was larger. They report a steady demand for cattleyas, but are unable to fill many orders for this flower just now.

Among the exhibitors from this city who will display at the flower show to be held in Oakland next month will be Frank Pelicano. He intends putting all his new varieties on show and will include a large exhibit of his Dr. Tevis. The Bessie Boston Dahlia Gardens, R. McWhirter and the Sea Cliff Dahlia Gardens will also make extensive displays. It is also expected that most of our leading chrysanthemum growers will be on hand with a fine lot of blooms. The committee in charge of the affair is working hard to make this a great success as it is the first flower show to be held in this city for years.

A heavy cut of roses is now being sent to the E. W. McLellan Co. store from their greenhouses at Burlingame. Manager Henry Avensino says the stock never looked better than it does at the present time and says there will be heavy cuts throughout the winter months. The Russell stock, which is a specialty with this firm, is particularly good for this season of the year. They have several larger houses devoted to gardenias which will shortly be producing heavily. Several houses are also filled with asparagus. The cut of this averages about 250 each day, all of which is used in their shipping trade.

George C. Roeding, owner of the Fancher Creek Nurseries and also the California Nursery Company, is at Sacramento this week directing the state fair. The different nurseries controlled by him all have very attractive displays of fruit and ornamental trees. Mr. Roeding is president of the state board of agriculture and is one of the most active business men in the trade.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Adam Graham.

Mrs. Graham, wife of Adam Graham, the well known florist of Cleveland, O., died September 5, at the advanced age of 80 years. She was born in Scotland and came to this country when about 16 years of age, marrying Mr. Graham in Philadelphia, Pa., where he was engaged in greenhouse work. Later they moved to Cleveland, where they prospered, Mr. Graham retiring from active work about 25 years ago, the business being now conducted by the sons, Adam, Jr., and Charles. Mr. Graham, during the past few years, has been quite successful in real estate transactions, and with Mrs. Graham, enjoyed a life of comfort. They traveled extensively in all parts of the world, and the winters during the past five years have been spent on the Graham ranch on the Isle of Pines.

Mrs. Graham's fine character attracted to her a host of friends to whom her passing will come as a great loss. She is survived by a sorrowing husband, three sons, Charles, Adam, Jr., and Edward, and two daughters, Mrs. Pettibone and Miss Effie Graham. The funeral, which was held September 8, from the family residence, with interment in Lake View cemetery, was largely attended. The floral tributes, numerous and beautiful, brought messages of sympathy and respect from many cities.

George Arnold.

George Arnold, well known in the florist trade of Rochester, N. Y., as well as to horticulturists generally throughout the country, passed away at his home at Ensenore, N. Y., September 2, age 62 years. For the past two years, Mr. Arnold had been in charge of the estate of Mrs. J. Letchworth at Ensenore, and formerly had been in the employ of James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for a period of 12 years, the greater part of which time was spent at the firm's trial grounds at Ogden, N. Y. He had also been in charge of the estate of H. H. Westinghouse. When Spencer sweet peas were introduced, he became much interested in them and grew many of the best known varieties for commercial purposes. A number of years ago, he introduced Primula Superba. Asters were among his greatest favorites and he introduced and improved many strains. It was through his efforts that the upright type was brought to its best.

Mr. Arnold was at one time president of the Rochester Florists' Association, was prominent in fraternal circles and his funeral was largely attended. He is survived by a widow and one son, Schuyler, recently returned from service overseas with the American army.

James C. Tait.

James C. Tait, president of George Tait & Sons, Inc., Norfolk, Va., one of the best known seedsmen in the south, died at his summer home at Montreat, N. C., August 29, age 60 years. He had been in failing health for some time and had been absent from business for several weeks in hopes that a change might benefit him. Mr. Tait was born in Bladenboro, N. C., but for more than 40 years had been one of Norfolk's best known business men, a highly respected citizen and prominent in church circles. Surviving are a widow and eight daughters.

August Jahn.

August Jahn, a retired retail florist of Brooklyn, N. Y., died at his home in that city, September 6, at an advanced age. He was born in Gotha, Germany, and came to this country when a boy. When a young man, he established a retail florist business on Broadway in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, and continued there until about 12 years ago, when he retired. He was a trustee of the Fulton Savings Bank of Brooklyn, and one of the founders of Wyckoff Heights hospital of that city. He was a member of the Masonic order and other organizations. Surviving him are his wife, one daughter and two sons. One son, Hugo, is a prominent Brooklyn retailer, with a store at 710 Nostrand avenue.

Personal.

E. G. Hill and wife, Richmond, Ind., are on a trip to the state of Washington and the Pacific coast.

Rasmussen-Voyles.

Anders Rasmussen, well known grower of New Albany, Ind., and state vice-president of the Society of American Florists, and Miss Elizabeth Voyles, daughter of the late Dr. David A. Voyles and Mrs. Susan A. Voyles of that city, were united in matrimony, September 6.

Society of Iowa Florists.

At the annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists, held at Des Moines, August 28, announcement of which, with programme, appeared in our issue of August 30, page 338, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: William Goos, Bettendorf, president; C. W. Davidson, Des Moines, vice-president; Wesley Greene, Des Moines, secretary-treasurer. Directors: James Denmead, Marshalltown; M. Rocklin, Sioux City; J. Aldous, Iowa City; Roy Holt, Des Moines. J. T. D. F.

Belgium Hardships of Plant Quarantine.

Sander & Sons, of St. Albans, Eng., and Bruges, Belgium, write as follows, August 4, to a well known American house:

"The plant prohibition does not seem to us to be for the benefit of large numbers in the United States, and it is certainly very hard on the Belgian nurserymen who have, in many cases, saved their bays, azaleas and palms, during the German occupation, at a very considerable sacrifice, with the idea of trading with America after the war.

"Had we ourselves known what was coming, we should without the slightest hesitation have thrown half or more of our bays away. The Germans commandeered all our bay sheds for their horses, and we, by the kind permission of the bishop of Bruges, carted our big ones to the town and housed them for many months in the Notre Dame cathedral. You can imagine the work and expense. It would give us much pleasure and satisfaction if you would be kind enough to let us know your ideas on this prohibition, and the prospects for the future."

American Dahlia Society Show.

The fall show of the American Dahlia Society will be held at the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, New York, September 23-25, in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York. A list of special premiums has been announced in 21 classes in addition to the prizes offered by the American Institute in 45 other classes. The schedule is general in range with classes for displays occupying 50 and 100 square feet of space, vases, baskets and hamper decorations, premiums for the best showings in the various types, with divisions for commercial growers only, gardeners and amateurs only and 33 classes for entries in vases open to all.

Among those who have offered prizes in the special premium classes are the following: Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. H. Langjahr, New York; A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; Peter Henderson & Co., New York; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Stumpp & Walter Co., New York; W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Richard Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.; Richard Appel, White Plains, N. Y.; Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.; American Dahlia Society; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Lord & Burnham Co., New York; W. E. Marshall & Co., New York; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn.; Bessie Boston Dahlia Farms, San Mateo, Calif.; Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. C. H. Stout, Short Hills, N. J.

Shipping Box Nailing Defects.

Observations of shipping packages and packing boxes which have failed in service and in the tests conducted by the forest products laboratory, Madison, Wis., have shown that the most common defect in box constructon is inadequate nailing. Attempts to strengthen boxes by the use of thicker lumber without regard to nailing often only wastes material. The extra wood may not be needed so much as a few more nails.

As an aid in determining whether a box is adequately nailed, the laboratory has drawn up a series of tables of woods commonly used in box construction grouped according to nail-holding ability, of the size of nails to be used with various species and thicknesses of wood, and of the spacing of nails for various uses, whether holding the end or side of grain.

These tests have also shown that cement coated nails have a holding power from 10 to 30 per cent greater than uncoated nails and that smooth nails are more effective than barbed nails. Even with proper nails and spacing, the nailing is still the weakest point of the ordinary box.

These tables may be secured by request from the laboratory.

IMPROVED SUPPLY MEETS READY SALE.

A few heavy rains have brought a decided improvement in market conditions. The supply of all kinds is more ample, but with a good demand from all parts of the state, stock not consumed locally is in demand by out-of-town buyers. Roses are becoming plentiful with quality much improved. Asters have been numerous the past week but the grade is not of the best. They are, however, in great demand for funeral work as carnations are still scarce. Gladioli are bringing excellent prices and clean up readily each day. This flower is growing in popularity each year and a number of local growers are planning to make double plantings next season. A few tritomas, a small quantity of cosmos and physostegias were also available last week. Greens are in limited supply and sell quickly.

NOTES.

Henley Bros., of Terre Haute, are getting their range, formerly known as the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co., in excellent shape. The houses have been completely remodeled and will be devoted to roses, carnations and a small percentage of chrysanthemums and miscellaneous stock for the local market. Henry B. Henley is in charge of the range. His brother, R. M. Henley, is conducting an establishment at Hartford City, Ind. Both, who were among the first graduates in the course in floriculture at the University of Illinois, are making a creditable showing in their profession.

Hartje & Elder, who have taken over the commission business known as the Florists' Supply Co., report trade very satisfactory. Henry Kiel, whose thorough knowledge of all branches of the business and courteous treatment and manner have won him many friends, is retained as manager.

The Pahud Floral Co. has opened a store in the new Lyric Theater building, a very good location. Extensive improvements are being made at the range. All plantings are to be increased 20 per cent in anticipation of a heavy fall demand from their retail stores.

Baur & Steinkamp, E. E. Temperly and the Roepke Floral Co. were among the principal exhibitors at the state fair. The honors were about evenly divided. The floricultural display was a creditable one and was staged under the direction of Adolph Baur.

Theodore Dorner, of the F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., is driving a new "Buick Six." The houses at this progressive establishment are in excellent condition for the coming season.

Bertermann Bros. Co. is much pleased with the new Foley house at their uptown establishment. The retail store is now being redecorated and will soon be in tip-top shape for the fall season.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, is making regular shipments of Columbia and Premier roses, exceptionally good for the season.

Len Elder is active in the management of the new wholesale establishment and is a familiar figure in the downtown district.

The Smith & Young Co. have begun to cut good stock at their Cumberland range and are making shipments to this city daily.

Morris & Son, of Bloomington, Ind., have been heavy shippers of gladioli to this market during the past three weeks.

STATE FLORISTS' ASS'N MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held at Crawfordsville, September 16. Members will assemble at the store of McDonald & Co., 126 West Main street, at 10:30 a. m. A. H. Nehrling will pilot the visitors to Turkey Run, one of the state's beauty spots. Frank Hasselman will have luncheon ready when the party arrives. All who have not visited this part of the state, should arrange to be present at this meeting. A cordial invitation is also extended to florists in neighboring states.

Rochester, N. Y.

IMPROVED TRADE AND COOLER WEATHER.

With the arrival of September and cooler days, business has brought some improvement in all branches. Roses and carnations show the effect of the better conditions. Asters are also much improved after the August dry period. Royal is showing excellent form and Schwaben and America are seen in good condition. Gladioli are arriving now in great quantities.

NOTES.

Frank J. Mahoney had charge of the decorative features in the paddock at the recent horse show. The jumps were made of gladioli in red and pink, arbor vitæ hedges being used for distance markers.

H. E. Wilson arranged an immense horseshoe of gladioli in his window during horse show week. This establishment has been quite busy with wedding orders.

Palmer Taylor, of Buffalo, N. Y., was a visitor at the flower show in connection with the exposition last week.

Edwin Wilson, Jr., and family have returned after a delightful stay of two weeks in the Adirondacks.

Tom Sullivan, of George B. Hart's staff, has returned from his outing.

DEMAND SHOWS SOME IMPROVEMENT.

While business is on the increase, it is not enough to absorb the great amount of flowers that are now flooding this market. Asters, especially, are in heavy supply, and while the best are sold at list prices, the balance find their way either to the street men or rubbish barrel. The American Beauty supply has been heavy, with very little demand. Roses move slowly with the exception of a few better varieties, such as Russell, Columbia, and Scott Key. The supply of gladioli still continues heavy, but it looks as though the season was nearly over for this popular summer flower. The first of the New Jersey dahlias have arrived, but the weather has been too warm for them to be at their best. Carnations and sweet peas are seen in small quantities, but there is no demand for them.

NOTES.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has been featuring water lilies and dahlias in her window displays, while the A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. are showing some fine gladioli from their farm in Ohio.

The McCallum Co. held its second annual corn roast at Riverview park Septemuber 2. A very enjoyable evening was spent. A dance was held after the roast.

Albert Brigg, of the North Side, has been kept on the go with several large wedding decorations, and reports four more booked for this month.

J. C. Wally, foreman of the McCallum Co.'s greenhouses, and family, have just returned from a two weeks' automobile trip through the east.

Gilbert Ludwig, of the Ludwig Floral Co., has been confined to his home with a bad cold for the past two weeks.

M. McMillan, of J. M. Johnston's Braddock store, has returned to work after three weeks' illness.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. reports a very heavy cut of roses at the present time. M.

MARSHALL, TEX. — George Witherspoon is building an extensive range here, which he will operate under the name of Beatrice Floral Co.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—H. L. Phelps, the veteran florist of this city, who was injured by being struck by an automobile two months ago, has sufficiently recovered to be removed to his home from the hospital.

STOCK IS VERY PLENTIFUL.

Stock is very plentiful at this writing, and has been moved in large lots at bargain prices the past week by some of the houses. Gladioli are in heavy supply, and considerable pushing is needed to move them at reduced prices, although some of the stock offered is of splendid quality. Asters are seen in quantity, but are moving slowly except in the fancier grades which command fairly good figures, considering the general market conditions. Carnations are more plentiful, but are cleaning up nicely every day at satisfactory figures. American Beauty roses are holding their own, and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell. Columbia is selling well and so is Premier. Some good Killarney Brilliant are attracting the attention of the buyers, and the same holds true of Sunburst. Ophelia, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Ward, My Maryland, Champ Weiland and some of the other varieties grown for the market are included in the shipments; also, a fair supply of Cecile Brunner. A few early white and yellow chrysanthemums are being offered. Lilies and callas do not appear to be any too plentiful. Snapdragons, calendulas, lily of the valley, dahlias, orchids, daisies, candytuft, gypsophilas, statice and other misellaneous seasonable stock offer the buyer a chance to make a fairly good selection for window display purposes. Business has been rather quiet this week, but the sales for September, so far, compare favorably with those of other seasons, although some of the retailers claim they are running a little better.

NOTES.

The baseball fans in the trade are taking it for granted that the White Sox will participate in the world series this year, and are already figuring out how they are going to cop the flag. Some of the boys are complaining of not feeling well, so they are liable to be quite sick about the time the contest starts.

Albany, N. Y.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WEEK PLANNED.

Discussion of a "Say It With Flowers" campaign to be conducted in October, and a club show to be held in November, were the principal subjects taken up at the September meeting of the Albany Florists' club, held at the establishment of F. A. Danker at 744 Central avenue. In regard to the "Say It With Flowers" campaign, the secretary read two letters from Z. D. Blackistone, president of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., in which President Blackistone called attention to the efforts being put forth by the florists' club of the nation's capital to institute a "Say It With Flowers" Week, October 5-11, in the principal cities of the country, and asked for the co-operation of the Albany club. President Blackistone said in part: "We in Washington are very much in earnest about this proposition, and feel that we are right in thinking it is a big thing. It will be a great deal more effective, however, if we can have all the leading cities of the country take it up and open their floral season with a 'Say It With Flowers' week. We believe that in starting this the first of October, we are going to give an early impetus to the business, and that we will begin to get our good business a month earlier than usual. If we can do this, it surely will be a big thing for the florists all over the country."

After discussion by the members, President William Newport named a committee to consider a "Say It With Flowers" week in Albany, made up of the following: Frederick A. Danker, chairman; Edward P. Tracey, Thomas F. Tracey, William Holmes, and William C. Gloeckner. The chairman was authorized to appoint other members on the committee as needed, and later announced that every grower and retailer in the city and vicinity would be added. The chairman called a meeting of his committee for organization on the night of September 8 at 611 Broadway, Albany.

The club decided to hold a flower show for the members on the night of November 20 and to invite the wives and women friends of the members. The entertainment committee will provide refreshments and a programme of some interest will be prepared. It was decided also to offer a few prizes to the private growers for exhibits of chrysanthemums and other seasonable plants and flowers.

Louis H. Schaefer, chairman of the entertainment committee, submitted a report on the club clambake held August 23, at Newtonville. There were 94 men, women, and children present. The receipts were $273.05; expenses, $247.47, leaving on hand $25.58, which was turned over to the club treasury.

Two new members were elected: John J. Jennings, of West Sand Lake, Rensselaer county, and William McGinn, of this city. William Christie, of Menands, who was discharged from the army last July, was present for the first time in over two years. Mr. Christie was drafted early in 1917, sent to Camp Devens, Mass., where he was trained with the 303rd Infantry, sent to France in July, 1918, and assigned to the hospital corps. He was stationed at Clermont, Puy-de-Done, France, nearly all the time he was abroad. He had excellent opportunities for observation, and some things struck him as unusual. For example, he saw azaleas growing in half barrel casks, sawed in two. The plants were the largest of the kind he had ever seen, and were covered with blossoms. Camelias were grown in the same way. Rhubarb was cultivated in the gardens, not for the stalks, but as a flowering plant. Cannas were seen growing in beds under glass. Mr. Christie said he was glad to return to the United States. After the meeting, the members enjoyed light refreshments served by the host. Among the visitors was Louis Hanfling, a New York dealer in florists supplies. Before he left the meeting, Mr. Hanfling handed to Chairman Danker a $10 bill to start the "Say It With Flowers" week in Albany.

NOTE.

In a recent letter to Fred A. Danker of 40 Maiden Lane, this city, H. H. Battles, florist, of Twelfth Street, Philadelphia, Pa., wrote that he had decided to discontinue the practice of accepting and allowing trade discounts to florists, as has been his custom in the past. "In the future," writes Mr. Battles, "our orders and deliveries will be strictly net. This will apply also to our Century Flower Shop, 112 South Twelfth street, Philadelphia."

SUPPLY SHORT IN MANY ITEMS.

With the weather dry and very warm, the demand has been fitful, the greatest call being for funeral work. Flowers have been scarce all summer and frequently the shops had to depend upon shipment from more fortunate localities to fill orders. Roses are beginning to arrive from the new stock of Columbia and Ophelia and some very creditable blooms are being shown. Carnations are also beginning to come in, but much dependance is still placed on the gladioli which are still plentiful. A number of funeral orders from out of town have helped to swell the demand. Schools have opened and numerous wedding announcements have been made which give encouragement. The visitors to the state fair, which opens September 15 will also add something to the sales total for the month, aided by the return of social activity.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. have some good roses and asters. They have had to rely upon outside stock for much of their supply, but conditions are now showing some improvement.

Louis Haury is alone among the stands at the market house, but he has excellent offerings in ferns, Lorraine begonias and geraniums.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM OVERSUPPLY.

There is an oversupply in the market, but the surplus consists only of short stock and the poorer grades. All choice offerings continue to sell readily. Prices are fair. The supply of roses is better than it has been for some time. The stems are longer, while the average quality is much higher than it was. Some carnations are coming into the wholesale houses. These are selling readily. The choice asters find a good market. Good gladioli prove good property. The receipts in dahlias are becoming large.

GROWTH

The Boston Floral Supply Co. is glad to greet you once more. We are glad to be able to sincerely thank our hundreds and hundreds of customers for their co-operation during the past season. It is only through the co-operation of our patrons that the Boston Floral Supply Co., has been able to increase its business more than 300 %. Our increased business has made it necessary to increase our facilities in manufacturing. Our new methods have taken the place of some of our older ones in the production of crepe flowers, wax flowers, baskets and in the preserving of cycas.

Why is it that so many florists are talking about the Boston Floral Supply Co? Because in a little over four years we have grown to be the largest producers of wax flowers for florists use in the world. Why is it that the demand for wax flowers, wreaths, sprays, etc., is greater today than ever? Because the Boston Floral Supply Co. has created this demand by manufacturing an article which is both practical and within the reach of the mass of the people.

Hundreds and hundreds of florists throughout the country have taken advantage of the popular demand for our artificial flowers, wreaths, sprays etc. It would surprise you if you knew how many florists have established themselves permanently in the artificial flower business together with their regular florist trade, and it is nothing but natural that this should be the outcome, as a combination of our artificial flowers with the natural flowers produces a pleasing and lasting effect.

Why can the Boston Floral Supply Co. save you from 25 to 33%. The Boston Floral Supply Co. has answered this question.

1st. We manufacture our own wax flowers, wax designs, baskets, boxes, wire frames and preserve our own cycas. We are large manufacturers and buy our raw material in large quantities.

2nd. Our main object is to manufacture on a large scale. This helps us to reduce the cost of production. We depen

We believe there is nothing that goes so far to encourge buying and stimulate trade as a display of merchandise. No matter whether you have a large business or a small business you should always have a display in your windows, on your wall or on your shelves. If we had no display, we could not sell much of our goods.

We believe there is nothing more beautiful than a display of a few of our magnolia wreaths, wax designs, sprays, etc., in your window. Do not you think you should look into the matter of giving us a trial order amounting to $25.00, more or less, and seure some of our wax flowers, foliage, ruscus, wire frames, moss, cycas, etc., and make up a display yourself in your own store? If you feel that you are not expert enough to make up a beautiful spray or wax design, such as a cross, anchor, star or wreath, we will gladly send you the designs already made up. Think it over, and see if this small investment is not a most appropriate one for you. We have suggested this to many florists and they have thanked us for doing so.

We also think you ought to have an assortment of our baskets amounting to $25.00.

HEAVY SUPPLY IN ALL LINES.

Market conditions, as to supply and demand for the past week, were no improvement over that a week previous. Asters, gladioli and other outdoor stock still continues in large supply. The same can be said of roses, which show the effects of the unusually hot weather the last few days. September 7, the official thermometer registered 90 in the shade, and with a hot south wind, it was indeed "good old summer time."

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

It certainly must have made a good impression on President Kennedy to greet nearly half of the total membership at the meeting, September 4. Some of the local boys who attended the Detroit convention were on hand, but left it to C. C. Pollworth to give the report of their trip; the very successful way the Detroit florists had of making this convention the most enjoyable and instructive one held for many years past, and that our bowling team was second best on the list (reading backward), undoubtedly due to the fact that some our best bowlers were not there. Due to the energetic and painstaking work of the club's state fair committee, the flower beds and numerous boxes are in fine shape at this time. In trying to boost the exhibition end, the chair appointed a committee of six to visit the trade, especially the retailers, in order to get this department to make a better showing than ever before. The fair dates are September 8-12. It might be added that the members of the florists' skat club are now numbered among the regulars.

NOTES.

The Holton & Hunkel Co., and the C. C. Pollworth Co. were busy staging their exhibits at the fair grounds, Sunday, Sept. 7.

Besides a good daily cut of Premier, Columbia and Ophelia roses, the Cudahy Floral Co. is consigning a heavy cut of American Beauties to Gust. Rusch & Co.

St. Louis.

TRADE CONDITIONS CONTINUE SLOW.

The market has been rather quiet during the past two weeks, with no unusual demand to strengthen the situation. Gladioli are arriving in good supply and the better grades bring fair returns. A few very fine asters are offered and meet with good sale. Roses have been arriving in good condition, but the demand has been nothing unusual. Russell and Premier are the leaders. Dahlias are beginning to make a showing, and a few weeks will see them in plentiful supply. Greens are sufficient to meet all needs.

NOTES.

L. P. Jensen received a surprise a few days ago when he was elected president of the National Association of Gardeners at the Cleveland convention of that organization. We congratulate him on the honor, and know he will make a good presiding officer. The post also carries with it a seat on the board of directors of the Society of American Florists.

The annual Veiled Prophets' ball, abandoned the last few years on account of war conditions, is scheduled for October 7. It will probably be a greater event than ever, and is always a source of good business to the florists. Thousands of corsages are used for this occasion.

The new home of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. is fast nearing completion. When finished, it will be one of the finest establishments of its kind in the country.

W. A. Rowe reports his foreman, Gerard Denys, on the sick list. That means more work for W. A., but he says he likes it. More power to him.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. reports a good call for asters. Al. Gumz, manager, has been on a short vacation, an auto trip to Kansas City, Mo.

Wm. C. Smith's rose growers are beginning to cut quite heavily. From the present outlook, stock should be both good and plentiful.

C. A. Kuehn has been receiving very good asters and liberal shipments of roses which are moving freely.

The visit of President Wilson used up vast quantities of roses and the downtown stores reaped a harvest.

J. J. W.

Kansas City, Mo.

LOCAL SUPPLY INCREASES SLIGHTLY.

There has not been much change in market conditions during th past week other than a slight increase in the home grown supply coming to this city. Asters are much improved and are leaders in the sales. Gladioli are plentiful and are also making a better showing due to the cooler weather prevailing. Ophelia, Russell, Premier and Columbia are the quality roses and the supply is more plentiful than at any time since last spring.

NOTES.

H. Kusik & Co. report good business and the demand is met daily with a good supply of gladioli, roses and asters. The wire department is busier than usual.

William L. Rock and wife have returned from a vacation spent at northern points of interest. They report a most delightful trip and splendid weather.

T. J. Noll & Co. report stock more plentiful and improved in quality which cleans up unusually well with a good local and shipping demand.

W. J. Barnes reports wedding orders are beginning to arrive. The call for funeral flowers has been moderate.

A. Newell has his force busy with strawflower arrangements. He reports fall trade opening well.

Charles Thomas, of the Rosery, has finished alterations and re-decorating at his store.

DAHLIAS

They have their season now and you cannot afford to omit them from your daily display. We have Dahlias for every purpose. For: Funeral work—Decorative purposes—Basket work. And there is nothing in the market at this time of the year that will make a better showing and that you can find quicker sale for.

Start the season right—make a Dahlia show. It will pay you.

BIG SUPPLY OF FINE QUALITY.

The past week in the flower market was a period of continuous oversupply. The quality of the stock has never been excelled, if equalled, for the season. Quantity features were fine indoor asters, good new crop roses and quantities of gladioli. There were Easter lilies, as well as rubrums and a few cattleyas. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are also offered. Field-grown asters, larkspurs, clematis, white hydrangeas, single and double cosmos and dahlias were also offered in large assortments. The demand was light; better than last year, perhaps, but there is unquestionably more stock on hand than at this time a year ago. Prices are holding fairly steady, particularly for all high-grade stock, while inferior qualities are sold in quantity lots at very low figures. It is thought that asters will be out of the market in from a week to 10 days, giving a little more elbow room for the dahlias, sales of which will start in earnest about September 15. Premier and Columbia roses are now coming strong. Russell is also plentiful, but like the others, mostly short stemmed, although there are specials of all three to be had. Those who have planted heavily of Premier, will be on the anxious bench for the next month or so, by which time it will have so far advanced as to demonstrate its worth locally as a forcing variety.

PROBLEM OF MOVING SURPLUS STOCKS.

In speaking of the difficulty of handling or moving surplus stock at this time, one of the large wholesalers ventured the opinion that the retailers had made too much money the past season, and some of them were still too busy spending their last season's profits, to buckle down to business. He said this was proverbial of many of the street men, who when they had a good Saturday, would not try to follow up their advantage, but enjoyed what to them was a good time, as long as their money lasted, when they would then come around again, looking for bargains, and try and recuperate their fortunes.

GROWERS OPTIMISTIC

The plant growers are taking a rosy view of the future as scarcely any of them, from the orders already received, feel they will have stock enough to last the season through. There has never been a better stock of ferns of the nephrolepis varieties than is offered this fall. Palms there are, but all growers of kentias, arecas and phœnix are very chary about taking large orders, preferring to make as large a distribution as possible. The retailers who want cyclamens, poinsettias and begonias for the coming holiday seasons, should place their orders very soon to avoid dissappointment.

NOTES.

W. A. Hansen, representing the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, made a flying visit Saturday last. Mr. Hansen thought Chicago took better care of the rose growers, than did the wholesalers of the Quaker City. They did this, he said, by holding up the price of the outside and other flowers, with the result that more roses were used. When reminded of the rose situation in Chicago last May, when they were jobbed out so low to department stores, he said that was owing to special weather conditions. He was much impressed with the appearance of the H. H. Battles store and Century Flower Shop.

"Say it With Flowers" week is being pushed by the local florists in no uncertain manner. There is to be a general decorating of all the shops and a parade of the florists with autos decked with flowers and carrying the slogan is to be a feature October 8. The Milwaukee plan to obtain funds for advertising is to be adopted and a special meeting of the trade to consider details has been called for Monday, September 15, at the Adelphia hotel.

Pennock-Niessen Baseball.

The return baseball match of the employes of the S. S. Pennock and Leo Niessen companies was played Saturday, August 30, at Richboro, Montgomery county, Pa. Elmer W. Gaehring had invited the boys to his country place so that he could entertain them after the game, which he did most bountifully with a sumptuous country dinner, followed by an hour of selected moving pictures, all of which was very much enjoyed. A fife and drum corps helped to enliven the occasion with patriotic airs.

Mr. Gaehring welcomed his guests in a neat speech, referring to the spirit of comradeship as shown in the clean game that had just been played by employes of rival firms. He then introduced Charles H. Grakelow, who, in an inspiring address, pictured people of this country village, in his comparison of city and country life; that each had its advantages to be equally enjoyed by those loyal to their community.

The game was very interesting, being much closer than the first contest a week ago. The Pennock team had much the same line up as before, but the Niessen nine had been considerably strengthened, the principal addition being a new battery, which kept the heavy hitters of the opposing nine guessing. After the disasterous third inning, in which the Niessens scored six runs, Kilgallen was relieved by Russell, who only allowed two more runs. There were several close decisions which Umpires Angele and Gannon handled like veterans. The Pennocks played a good uphill game, making several promising rallies, but the hit that was needed never came and the Niessens won, the score being 9 to 6.

DULL PERIOD BELIEVED AT END.

It is now believed that the past week brought business dullness to its limit, and that there is now about to be an upward turn. The first indications of an improvement, though slight, occurred September 5-6. The previous days of the week had been shockingly dull. Nothing is ever expected of Labor day, and this year confirmed precedents. The next three days were rainy and generally disagreeable. An immense stock of asters, dahlias and gladioli kept pouring in; a little would sell in the morning, and the problem was, what to do with the surplus. There was also an oversupply of roses, though it was not as great as in the above mentioned stocks. The number of carnations also increased, and a limited supply of chrysanthemums are now seen. In roses, there is now, for the season, exceptionally fine stock of Columbia. This rose, if it keeps its present gait, is bound to be a winner. It makes fine stems and has fewer thorns than some other varieties. It is prolific, and as it opens up, shows fine color. The retailers agree—and they should know—that it is a good keeper. These seem to cover the main points for a good rose. Leaving out American Beauties and Francis Scott Key, Columbia is now the only rose on the market that is showing good specials in quantity. There has been some increase in the supply of orchids, but they are yet held at stiff prices. One may reasonably expect them to keep well up in price for the season soon to open. Numbers of plants will go into private collections, and unless the quarantine is relaxed, none can be imported. A light supply of lily of the valley is on the market. Occasionally, a small lot of Easter lilies come in, and sell at 25 to 30 cents per flower, but there are too few to be able to call them factors. There is quite a stock of rubrums, and they are slow. White bouvardia moves fairly well. A miscellaneous stock consisting of gaillardias, zinnias, delphiniums, tuberoses and other flowers, is on the market and has some call.

September 8.—With a heavy supply of stock, a high temperature and humidity, the market is stagnant. Unless the weather turns cooler, there is no prospect of relief.

FLOWERS' PLACE IN PERSHING WELCOME.

Just what part the florist business will play in the great celebration in honor of General Pershing, which, beginning September 8, will continue for three days, cannot now be stated. A story has been published that a young lady will "strew flowers in his path," and that she is so beautiful that she has already had over one hundred offers of marriage. One may doubt whether that story was published to honor the general, or put the young lady in the spotlight. Mayor Hylan, who in general has no use for "magnates," particularly street railway magnates, cannot get along without some of them in an event like this. So on his hand-picked committee of reception, Rodman Wanamaker—a clever gentleman, we believe—has been given a prominent place. On the evening of September 8, Mr. Wanamaker gave a dinner at the Ritz-Carlton hotel to the General and his staff. On the evening of September 10, there will be a dinner given to the General at the Waldorf, at which Mr. Wanamaker will be toastmaster and at which General Pershing, Secretary of War Baker and Mayor Hylan will speak. At both these events, we have reason to expect that elaborate floral decorations will be seen. A woman, Lillian Bell, has written an article for the Tribune, which expresses a deeper sentiment than usually pervades an applauding throng. We quote in part:

"Throngs will press him on every side. Flowers will be strewn in his pathway. Women and men will shout his name and wave flags and cheer and applaud him. And he will bow and smile. But his smile will be grave and his face will be sad, for he will know that he is facing us—the women whose sons and brothers and husbands and sweethearts lie dead on the other side of the world. We are scattered from Maine to Texas and from Washington to Florida. In spirit, we will be thronging his pathway, reaching out our empty hands to him, and crying: "Those gallant, laughing boys, splendid and unafraid, whom we trusted to your care? How did they die?' And he will be saying: 'They died as soldiers should. They were true and brave. They were true to the training of American mothers, true to their country, true to the traditions of our pioneers. Facing forward they died—always facing forward!' "

NOTES.

J. Spiro, for several years past, buyer for Charles Abrams, of Brooklyn, has resigned the position, and about October 1, will open his own store at Fifth avenue and 47th street, this city. He is a clever and popular young man, and will doubtless make a success of the venture.

Ralph Armstrong, wife and daughter, have returned from Newport, R. I., where they spent the summer. C. F. Dailey, who has been in charge of the store during their absence, now takes his vacation.

A. T. Bunyard spent several days of the past week in this city, and also arranged an elaborate wedding decoration in New Jersey. He returned to Newport, R. I., September 4.

President Kessler, of the florists' club, who, with his family, went to the Adirondacks after the Detroit convention, has returned, and is now buckling down to business.

Mrs. Leikens, who has been attending to her Newport, R. I., store during the summer, recently made a short visit to this city. The Newport season is about ended.

William Hanft, for many years well known in the retail trade of this city, now has a good position with A. Meyer, Madison avenue and 80th street.

August Jahn, one of the older florists of Brooklyn, died September 6. Further details will be found in the obituary column.

Paul Rigo, manager for the Henshaw Floral Co., recently returned from a month's camping and fishing in Maine.

George I. Laird, of Fulton street, Brooklyn, is patronizing the noble art of I. Walton on the Long Island Coast.

New York Florists' Club.

The first meeting of the New York Florists' Club after an intermission of two months, was held September 8. The day would have been called a scorcher in midsummer, and the evening was no great improvement, but regardless of the heat, there was a good attendance and much interest was manifested in the proceedings. Various reports were heard from members who had attended the Detroit convention. C. H. Totty made pleasing remarks on the unity of the club members at the convention and introduced the president-elect, A. L. Miller, who was heartily congratulated for fighting "a good fight," and winning out at Detroit. He received an ovation on entering the hall. Later, at the close of Mr. Totty's remarks, he took the platform and in a neat speech, gave credit to the club members for their unwavering support and promised to use his best efforts as president of the S. A. F. F. R. Pierson spoke at some length on the features of Quarantine No. 37, reciting a number of the hardships it imposed on the trade. The next appeal for relief is likely to be made to congress. Joseph A. Manda spoke along the same line. C. H. Totty followed in agreement with the previous speakers, and proposed that the club indorse the resolutions adopted by the Detroit convention relating to Quarantine No. 37. That was done by a unanimous vote.

Max Schling made a lengthy address in favor of the publicity movement, and was active in pushing for contributions. A considerable sum was subscribed. C. H. Totty reported for the flower show committee, and asked the members to take a personal interest in promoting the show. Secretary Young also spoke on the flower show.

A. L. Miller reported for the transportation committee to Detroit. A bill of something over $100 had been incurred for entertainment at Buffalo. It was ordered paid.

A. M. Henshaw reported for the committee that has in charge the matter of securing a more suitable meeting place. A good hall can be secured from the Engineers' club, in the Engineering building, 39th street near Sixth avenue. The committee was given full powers to act. The proposed rent will be $25 per meeting.

C. H. Totty exhibited a vase of fine stock of the rose, Frank W. Dunlop.

The house committee furnished an ample lunch, and A. L. Miller supplied an excellent brand of cigars. President Kessler, at the opening, proposed that on account of the heat, members take off their coats, many following his advice, Secretary Young being an exception, as quite sensibly, he did not bring his coat.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, September 10, was $65.00.

WINTER VETCH price is easier, dry weather preventing seeding.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and wife, have been spending a recent vacation at Saratoga, N. Y.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The A. J. Brown Seed Co. estimates its pea crop short, but expects to deliver bean contracts in full.

CABBAGE SEED.—On the large acreage harvested, both east and west, the total production is the heaviest in the history of the country.

THE death of James C. Tait, president of George Tait & Sons, Inc., Norfolk, Va., is recorded in our obituary column this week.

ANTHONY C. VAN DER SCHOOT, of Hillegom, advises us Mr. Elliott, of the Elliott Nursery, Pittsburgh, Pa., is visiting Holland on his European trip.

THE death is announced, July 13, of Ludwig Heyn, sole proprietor of the business of Conrad Appel, Darmstadt, Germany, in his sixty-first year, after a short illness.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. T. Ferrell of A. T. Ferrell & Co., Saginaw, Mich., S. F. Willard, of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Conn.; Geo. C. Thompson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade September 10, were as follows: Timothy $9.50 to $11.00 per 100 pounds. September, $12.75 bid; October $11.90 sellers; $12.25 bid for March.

WERNER SCHMIDT has succeeded his father, the late Carl Schmidt, whose death was announced in these columns last June, as sole proprietor of the business of Haage & Schmidt, Erfurt, Germany, which will be continued as heretofore.

GARDEN PEAS.—Michigan, according to the government Seed Reporter, will produce 500 pounds to the acre, Wisconsin 700 pounds, Washington 750 pounds, Montana about 700 pounds. A large acreage has been abandoned in Idaho and 25 per cent in Montana.

NEW YORK importers complain that the federal horticultural inspector is making bulb importation difficult and subject to annoying red tape delays, all of which apparently belong to and go along with such embargoes, the central thought being the embargo and not the facilitation of business.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—W. H. Bofferding has retired as active manager of the W. H. Bofferding Co., Inc., and the business as will be continued by C. W. Armstrong and F. H. Virtue. Mr. Bofferding has bought the Emma V. White mail order seed business, which he will carry on under the name of the Emma V. White Co., Inc., at 3010 Aldrich avenue, south.

Rice's Michigan Seed Crop Inspection.

Seedsmen who visited the extensive seed farms of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., at Grass Lake, Mich., September 25, advance mention of which appeared in our issue of August 30, page 350, found in addition to the trials, much to interest them in the 1,200 acres devoted to the production of stock seed of beans, sweet and field corn, cucumbers, carrot, beet, turnip and rutabaga as well as more than 200 acres of transplanted radish, muskmelon, watermelon, cabbage, onion, pumpkin, squash, tomato, pepper and mangelwurzel, the crops grown solely for stock for distribution among farmers for the seed crop of 1920. Notwithstanding a prolonged drought, both trials and crops were so interesting that it was difficult to get the visitors to stop long enough for meals. The location is ideal for the work in stock seed selection which is in the capable hands of Superintendent George E. Starr, who is assisted by a number of enthusiastic young men.

Holland bulbs are in. The S. S. Sloeterdyk, of the Holland-America line, docked in this city, September 5, direct from Holland. C. W. Gloeckner, head of the bulb department of the Henry F. Michell Co., reports a shipment of more than 700 cases on the vessel. He is especially pleased that they were received direct, as the reshipping from New York always entails more work and considerable expense. The average increase in prices will be about 25 per cent over last year's figures. Frank Ely, for 20 years in charge of the seed department, has now entire supervision of the catalogue and publicity work. C. W. Gloeckner will combine the seed and bulb departments and manage both branches.

Onion Sets.

In the Chicago district, drought continues. The sets so far turned into warehouses on the north side are running only a little better than two bushels to the pound of seed sown, half of the crop being now housed. Independent growers are storing as usual.

The Produce Reporter of September 6, states that buyers are paying 4 to 4½ cents per pound for onion sets in the Louisville market.

Isbell-Kimball Suit.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., have begun suit against Kenneth R. Kimball, alleging that the defendant, after selling a number of bean warehouses to the complainant, resumed business in violation of an agreement not to re-enter it for 20 years. S. M. Isbell & Co. obtained an injunction against Kimball, and a hearing recently, asking for a dissolution of the order, was adjourned.

POTATO prices, in the west, depend on rains between now and September 25, severe drought being general.

Cabbage Industry in Ohio Threatened.

Reports from different sections of Ohio indicate that the cabbage industry of that state is seriously threatened by yellows, a fungus disease which is capable of living in the soil for an indefinite period. Vegetable Markets.

According to reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period September 1-8, no strong trend was shown, but most changes in prices were upward. Potatoes and onions advanced slightly. In the former, small gains continued in most sections and varieties. New Jersey sacked Cobblers strengthened at shipping points to a range of $3.30-$3.50 per 100 pounds as compared with $3.30-$3.35 the previous week. Consuming markets quoted this stock somewhat stronger at $3-$3.75. New Jersey Giants were slightly weaker at shipping points at $2.40-$2.65 and in consuming markets at $2.50-$3.10. Minnesota early Ohios advanced steadily at shipping points, reaching $2.85-$2.90 compared with $2.40-$2.65 f. o. b. last week. Carlots in Chicago advanced to $3-$3.25 per 100 pounds, compared with $2.35-$2.50 last week and with $2.40-$2.50 a year ago. Idaho Rurals strengthened to $3.50-$3.65 per 100 pounds in Chicago and carlots ranged $2.75-$2.90 in Kansas City. California sacked white stock weakened slightly, closing at $2.25 f. o. b. Shipments increased with the appearance of northern harvesting season and more favorable price conditions. Eastern sacked Yellow onion stock was firm in eastern jobbing markets, ranging $3.50-$4, but value weakened slightly in Boston. Various middlewestern yellow and red stock strengthened to a range of $3-$3.75. California yellow onions strengthened to $2.10 f. o. b. shipping points and showed a stronger range in consuming markets also at $2.75-$3.25. Cabbage followed slightly stronger range in consuming markets, but held steady in producing sections.

Rivals.

"My dear," said the wife of the eminent professor, "the hens have scratched up all the egg-plant seed you sowed."

"Ah, jealousy!" mused the professor—and he immediately began an article on the "Evidences of Envy in the Lower Grade of Bipeds."—Boston Transcript.

Pennsylvania Nursery Certificates.

J. G. Sanders of the Pennsylvania department of agriculture has announced that non-resident certificates issued to nurserymen from other states desiring to ship into that state, will expire October 1, 1919. As soon as new certificates for 1919-1920 are received certificates or permits will be sent to anyone expecting to ship into the state who have filed with the state department of agriculture a copy of their state certificate for the coming year. Certificates for Pennsylvania nurserymen and dealers will also require renewal for the year beginning October 1, and both resident and non-resident nurserymen are reminded that it is necessary to send applications in ample time to avoid delay.

Tree Planting Time in Missouri.

The season of transplanting, as a factor affecting the subsequent development of fruit trees, appears to have been the subject of comparatively little experimental investigation, according to the University of Missouri College of Agriculture at Columbia. A summary of the results obtained in the state from the work of the department of horticulture is of interest. Fall planting of hardy fruit trees and the majority of hardy deciduous trees and shrubs has given better results than spring planting. Late fall planting has given better results than earlier in the season and late spring planting has given as good results as early in the spring, provided the trees are kept dormant until they are set out.

Apple trees planted in the fall usually begin new root formation about January 1, from the sides of the lower main roots, after the surface soil has frozen. Early fall-planted trees have begun root growth no earlier than late fall-planted trees. New root growth apparently proceeds slowly throughout the winter, below the frost line. Apple trees planted in early fall dry out more during fall and winter than do those planted in late fall. Young apple trees having their branches pruned back in autumn, make better growth the following season than do trees pruned back in spring. This holds true whether or not the trees are transplanted.

Sour cherries when planted in late fall suffer no appreciable mortality in the fall as compared to a loss of one-third to one-half of the number of trees when planted in spring. Peaches, Japanese plums and other slightly tender species are more safely planted in spring. Pears and plums benefit by fall planting about in the same proportion as apples. Persimmons, native walnuts, chestnuts, hickories and pecans, which do not transplant successfully when dormant, do best when planted in the spring, just as their new leaves are pushing out.

The London Plane.

In a recent issue of the proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy, Prof. A. Henry, in association with Miss M. G. Flood, contributes a very interesting article on the London plane. The mystery which has always surrounded the origin of this tree, known to botanists as Platanus acerifolia. Prof. Henry has done much to solve. Never having been found in a wild state, there only remained for the London plane an origin under cultivation, but whether it was a mere seedling variant of the oriental plane (P. orientalis) or a hybrid between that species and the American plane (P. occidentalis) has for some years been a question much discussed. As recently as 1908, Prof. Henry himself rejected the hybrid theory in The Trees of Great Britain and Ireland, vol. iii, p. 620, and I remember some years ago, in conversation with Prof. Sargent, suggesting that the London plane was a hybrid, and that he disagreed. The habit of the tree, with its clean, stately trunk, and its much less deeply lobed leaves, as compared with those of the oriental plane, are resemblances to P. occidentalis, but the fact that the latter will not, at the present time, live more than a few years in this country, much less attain to the flower-bearing age, made the theory that the London plane is a hybrid descendant of that tree, difficult to accept. P. occidentalis has, of course, been grown in this country in an intermittent sort of way for nearly three centuries (it was introduced in 1636), and in its early years, it may have been free from the fungous attacks or other causes which make it so short-lived now. But I do not know that any positive evidence exists of its ever having reached the flowering state in this country.

The studies that Prof. Henry has made in recent years of hybrid trees, such as Salix coerulea, Lucombe oak, and black Italian poplar, which have added much that is valuable and interesting to our knowledge of those trees, led him also to the study of the London plane. His conclusion is that this tree "is undoubtedly a hybrid, and must have originated as a chance seedling in some botanic garden where an occidental plant and an oriental plane happened to be growing together." The first description of the London plane was published in 1700 by Plukenet, who described it then as bearing large fruit balls. This gives only 64 years for P. occidentalis to have reached the flowering state after its introduction, to have hybridised with P. orientalis and produced P. acerifolia, and for that hybrid to have itself reached the fruiting stage. This, although not at all impossible, strikes one as a very short period, considering all the chances involved, in which this sequence of events must have occurred; and, taken in conjunction with the absence of any proof that P. occidentalis has ever flowered in England at all, enables one to appreciate the reluctance of some to accept the origin of the London plane as a hybrid one.

But after reading Prof. Henry's paper, and all the evidence he adduces, circumstantial though it may be, few probably will fail to be convinced by his reasoning. One of the first proofs of hybridity is in the variability of the seedlings of the London plane, a well-established characteristic of the seedlings of a first cross. This variability is to be noted in the size and depth of lobing in the leaves, in the number of fruit balls on a stem, and in the characteristics of the individual fruits (achenes) that make up these balls, all more or less intermediate between those of oriental plane and American plane.—W. J. Bean in the London Gardener's Chronicle.

Tree Planting at Proper Depths.

The character of the soil and the climate of a region should doubtless govern the depth to which the roots of a fruit tree should be set according to the University of Missouri College of Agriculture at which institution shallow plantings have given better results than those made at greater depth, the tests covering several years, and as a result of observations made in many orchards in the state. Very deep planting has been emphasized in the prairie states of the northwest, where there is danger of root injury by severe winters. Deep planting is also preferred in the plains where rainfall is very limited, and the ground becomes very dry in winter. No doubt the roots should be set deeper in loose, sandy soils than in heavier soils. If trees are set in autumn they may be set an inch or so deeper than they stood in the nursery. The soil at this season is aired and warmed to a greater depth. New root growth starts, in early winter, on the lower roots which become established for early spring growth.

IBOLIUM

THE NEW Hardy Hybrid Privet

Resembles California Privet in Habit with this added advantage:—

It's as HARDY as IBOTA Privet and will succeed wherever IBOTA thrives.

Name, IBOLIUM, coined thus:—IBO from Ibota and LIUM from Ovalifolium

REGISTRATION

Society of American Florists, April 5, 1919.

IBOLIUM Privet is the product of crossing the California Privet (Seed Parent), with Ibota, the hardy Chinese Privet.

It is similar in general character to California Privet being perhaps somewhat more robust in habit of growth. It is inclined to bush more freely from the base than California Privet, a decided advantage.

It can be propagated with the same ease as California Privet either from hardwood or softwood cuttings and is quite able to withstand the abuse incident to the ordinary handling of a hedge plant, both by the nurseryman and planter, without serious injury.

Its great claim for the public's consideration as compared with California Privet is its hardiness taking in this respect from the pollen parent, Ibota, having proven to be perfectly hardy wherever Ibota Privet is hardy. This gives this new hardy hybrid a very extended range of usefulnes

The extreme test as to hardiness was proven out in the winter of 1917-1918, when IBOLIUM Privet stood the test without the slighest winter injury side by side with the California Privet, which was not only killed to the ground but in many cases died root and branch.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

IBOLIUM PRIVET—The above cut is from photo of a plant of IBOLIUM Privet, three years old. Softwood cuttings have been taken from this plant twice this summer. This is the identical plant which was shipped to Chicago for exhibition purposes, was knocking about for at least three weeks and on its return to the Nursery appeared to be little the worse for wear, proving the remarkable vitality of IBOLIUM PRIVET.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT

American Nurserymen's Association, Chicago Convention, June 27th, 1919.

Report of Committee on Plant Exhibits. JNO. S. KERR, Chairman.

Your committee is pleased to report upon IBOLIUM Privet, originated and now introduced by the Elm City Nursery Company, Woodmont Nurseries, Inc., New Haven, Conn.

IBOLIUM Privet is the result of cross breeding between the Ibota Privet and California Privet and combines the hardiness of the Ibota with the fine foliage and growth characteristics of the California Privet. Evidently IBOLIUM is quite an acquisition to the privets for northern sections.

Your committee readily commends this new introduction as very meritorious.

JNO. S. KERR,
ROBERT PYLE,
ALVIN E. NELSON,
Committee.

IBOLIUM Privet is ideal for hardy hedge purposes, for training into specimens, general decoration as a tub plant, also in its natural form wherever a tall dignified shrub is desired. It also thrives well in the shade. It produces freely large panicles of pure white flowers followed by clusters of glossy black fruits, making the whole shrub very ornamental. The usefulness of IBOLIUM Privet is almost without limit.

Vegetable Growers' Ass'n of America.

Eleventh Annual Convention, Held at Detroit, Mich., Sept. 9-12, 1919.

Interesting Meeting Well Attended.

The eleventh annual convention of the Vegetable Growers Association of America was held at Detroit, Mich., September 9-12, 1919, in the Hotel Statler. At the opening session, over 200 members were present when Vice-President C. W. Waid, of East Lansing, Mich., called the meeting to order. J. Lee Barrett, of the Detroit convention bureau, gave the address of welcome to the visitors. He referred to the beautiful Detroit river, the city's extensive and beautiful park system, and its great auto manufacturing interests, and extended in the name of the mayor, the freedom of the city to the delegates. President H. W. Selby, Springfield, Mass., responded, and said in part: "We meet for the dual purpose of advancing our individual interests, and also to help solve the national problem of high cost of living. We must educate the great masses in production. Inefficiency and lack of production are the causes of high cost of living. Wages, at present, are advanced according to the desires of earners, rather than by their achievements. We must utilize the methods of manufacturing interests, and apply them to our own work. Our problems are very important." Secretary S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., read his annual report, which gave the number of members as 469, of which 100 are life members. He referred to the omission of the usual annual convention last year, owing to war time conditions, and thanked the advertisers who patronized the convention programme this year, which fully defrayed the cost of the same.

Prof. T. C. Johnston, Norfolk Va., addressed the members on "Vegetable Nomenclature." He was followed by Vice-President C. W. Waid, chairman of the committee, to report on weights and measures. He said his committee held no meeting the past year and accomplished what they did by correspondence only. He said the standardization of measures is very important in the handling and sale of vegetables, and his committee believed it more practical to accomplish this standardization by measures rather than by weight, and recommended for that purpose a bill now before congress, which it appears, will accomplish the desired end.

F. A. Downing of the bureau of markets, Washington, D. C., said the standardization of containers for vegetable growers, products is a big problem. Growers have made great progress in recent years in cultural methods, but the marketing of the same has not advanced correspondingly. He urged the great importance of uniform containers. He has been told that all growers are in favor of the reform, but the question is what is the form, weights or measures? It is not feasible to use weight. It is not possible to get the weight in a bushel basket to conform with the legal weight. The state department requires the impossible as the present method prevails. The quick handling of these commodities eliminates the practicability of weights. He deplored the present number of over 40 kinds of cabbage crates used, which are not uniform. His committee suggests: "We must determine our requirements, then have laws to sustain them." He suggested a list of sizes of containers, which in practical use, would meet all reasonable requirements. The market basket in five sizes would suffice for all the general purposes and these sizes should be standardized nationally, as state and local standards would not be practical, owing to inter-state shipments. The standard grape basket, as now used, is deemed a distinct success.

C. W. Waid, chairman of the committee on organization, reported that there was no meeting held of his committee, but the individual views of the members declare that the business interests of the members should be better cared for. He thought the business organizations should be more closely affiliated. The transportation question alone, is so important that it could be better handled by this interchange of ideas. He said his committee was supposed to re-write the constitution and by-laws, but did not do so. He thought previous free discussion of the questions bearing on the work should be had between the scheduled sessions of the conventoin, and the result put in the desired form.

J. H. Rice, chairman of the fuel commission, made a report which included the recital of the trials of his committee late in 1918, which involved little cooperation on the part of government officials, who seemed to know little of the situation, and less inclination to learn. He urged a better work organization that could be able at all times to show the full import of the vegetable growers' industry. He said: "Make the organization so formidable that the department of agriculture at Washington will properly recognize it." He spoke of the railroads going back to private ownership, January 1, next, after which it is reasonable to hope more satisfactory service will be given.

At the afternoon session, the subject of co-operation among producers was discussed. Hale Tenant, East Lansing, Mich., recited the experience of the Berrien county, Michigan, fruit growers, and their trials, and compared their experiences with the present necessities of the vegetable growers. Dorr Buell, Cadillac, Mich., spoke on a producers' organization that co-operates, and told of the work of the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange, which is composed of 78 local associations operating under one head at Cadillac. He described the marketing methods of these potato growers, and their success under their efficient organization. He referred to the Petoskey, Mich., potato growers, who unite on growing the Golden Russet variety as the most productive and valuable for that district, while the Green Mountain is found best for the upper peninsula. These are all sold through the association in 100-pound sacks, sewed with red twine for identification and to prevent the second use of the sack, it is stenciled with a trade mark. Last year 2164 cars of these were shipped to 186 cities in the United States. This central exchange, he said, charges eight cents per 100 pounds for handling the product of the growers, who are uniformly satisfied with the result. He was followed by E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., who told of the lettuce growers' association of that city. He interestingly recited the workings of the 18-year-old organization which has been marketing the products of its members during that time, and praised the efficiency of its methods, which were at all times mutually satisfactory.

Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., followed, and told of co-operation among Toledo gardeners. He gave an interesting account of the vegetable growers of the Ohio city, who are organized and sell through a central medium, the gardeners' exchange. This association, after many trials in its early history, finally adopted methods for disposing of its members' products, which are found most advantageous and satisfactory to all. He stated, however, that by a misconception of its purposes, the members were recently indicted under the technical charge of their restraint of trade, and a hearing set for September the result of which, however, no one fears, as the association operates within legal requirements.

Co-operation in New England was then discussed. Howard W. Selby in a splendid address related the results of the organized farmers of New England, who carry their good work beyond the marketing of their products to the co-operative purchasing of all their requirements, and on fertilizers, alone, save $8 per ton. They operate under the name of the New England Farmers' Exchange, and will this year market 800 cars of potatoes and a similar number of cars of hay. Mr. Selby's address was replete with interesting data and distinct cases of the many advantages accruing to organized effort as exemplified by that association.

Then followed the annual report of Treasurer Eugene Davis, which was omitted at the morning session. It showed receipts during the year of $1410.80 and disbursements $1324.79, the balance, together with Liberty bonds worth $400.00, on hand. The report was referred to an auditing committee to be later named.

In the evening, an illustrated lecture was given by Dean Alfred Vivian, Ohio State University, Columbus. He stated that the city man, unfortunately, does not fully appreciate the actual cost of the farmers' and vegetable growers' products, who bring their commodities to their tables, and highly commended the splendid work of the association. His lecture and pictures covered the agricultural scenes of the Philippine Islands, China and Japan, and showed the crude methods pursued, even in this day of the world's advancement, in these countries, where the low price of labor alone, made possible the continuing toleration of their crude practices agriculturally.

G. V. Branch, market director of Detroit, gave an interesting description of the local markets, and extended an invitation to all to visit the eastern market at 7 o'clock Thursday morning.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

Frank Luce, of Ashtabula, O., on Wednesday morning, presented an interesting and valuable paper on the subject assigned to him, "The Past, Present and Future of Vegetable Forcing." He told of the pioneer days of the industry in his city and the many hardships the growers had to endure, which included the marketing of products. He said: "Those were the days of long hours, and all who had attained success secured it through hardships unheard of today." He asked if any grower present was working under a six or eight hour day, but there was no response. His paper brought a general discussion of the subject and led to many phases of the growing and marketing of greenhouse grown products.

Professor H. C. Thompson followed with an address on "Better Crops for the Greenhouse." He cautioned against experimenting with new vegetables, but urged the improved culture of lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers. He recommended the practice of each grower relying on his own seed. The discussion led to soil conditions, temperature control, sterilization and drainage as important factors and essential to success. Others on the programme for the Wednesday morning session were: Prof. A. H. McLennan, Toronto, Ont., "Experimental Work in Connection with Vegetable Growing in Ontario;" Prof. J. W. Crow, Guelph, Ont., "Developing Improved Strains of Varieties of Vegetables;" Prof. E. O. Fippin, Ithaca, N. Y., "The Use of Commercial Fertilizers and Lime in Connection with Vegetable Growing;" Mrs. Fred Osborn, Ann Arbor, Mich., "Promising New Crops for Muck Lands;" Ezra Levin, East Lansing, Mich., "Muck Land Problems;" Prof. E. A. Fippin, "Commercial Fertilizers on Muck Land."

There was no afternoon session, the period being reserved for a boat ride on the Detroit river, which was enjoyed by the visitors.

Thursday's Proceedings.

In the greenhouse section of the proceedings Thursday morning, George Bayer, Toledo, O., read a paper on "The Development of Vegetable Forcing at Toledo." This brought about perhaps the most general and interesting discussion of the convention, because of its comprehensive nature covering the history and gradual growth of the industry that has now assumed such great proportions. During the discussion, much stress was laid upon the great importance of soil sterilization, which was declared by all present to be so necessary to successful operations with greenhouse crops. The methods of doing this work were found to be varied according to the ideas of the different growers, even in the same locality. The present cost of greenhouse construction was declared to be about 75 cents per square foot, and at such a price, it was found by a direct question, that no one present would advise building even at the present prices of products as these are fluctuating and no assurance can be had as to the future. In this discussion, the depreciation of greenhouse property was taken up at length, which led to the appointment of a committee to draw up a resolution, embodying the sense of the convention, designed to guide all in the disclosures made to the income tax collectors. This resolution, which was adopted, reads as follows:

"Be it resolved by the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, in convention assembled at Detroit, Mich., September 11, 1919, that it is the opinion of the greenhouse growers of the association that a depreciation of 10 per cent per year on greenhouses is a fair depreciative charge."

JOHN S. FRISZ,
FRANK LUCE,
M. E. MOORE.

On Thursday afternoon, as the guests of D. M. Ferry & Co., the visitors inspected the firm's seed farms at Rochester, Mich. Refreshments were served at the greenhouse service building.

The annual banquet was held at the Hotel Statler, Thursday evening, covers being laid for 347. C. W. Waid made an excellent toastmaster. J. Lockie Wilson, Toronto, Ont., who spoke of the deplorable condition that took the productive power of the world away to destroy fellow men, praised the work of the association, saying: "If present high wages and short hours prevail, the product must increase in price. All should work more and work harder. This is no time to loiter." Mrs. Dora H. Stockman, of Lansing, Mich., gave a pleasing address in which she also praised the work of the women of both the United States and Canada who helped win the war. W. P. Hartman, who had for his topic, "The Go-Between," explained the difficulties which the railroads are laboring under in trying to serve the shippers in the movement of their produce, while in reality the blame should lie with the restlessness of the people. Thomas F. Gunson, of the Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, spoke of "The Better Things of Life," while "The Spirit of the Hour" received forceful and logical treatment at the hands of Dr. Eben Mumford. Good music and the singing of popular airs by those present added to the enjoyment of the evening.

Friday's Proceedings.

Professor H. C. Thompson, of the state college of agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., who opened the Friday morning session had for his topic, "Storage of Vegetables. He called attention to the fact that more and better storage facilities meant greater advantages to the grower and consumer alike, through more equitable adjustment of prices and the elimination of loss. He advocated co-operative storage plants and suggested containers be better made to answer their purpose and of proper shape. Bags, he said, were the worst form of package and responsible for much of the damage to contents.

TUMBLER BASKET OF POMPON DAHLIAS.

Thorough maturity of the vegetables to be stored is a most important factor. Professor L. M. Montgomery, of the Ohio State University, Columbus, who spoke on "Possibilities of State Association Work," a most interesting subject, said the local, state and national organizations should be so correlated as to present a solid front when the necessity arises to combat adverse legislation or other dangers. Insect enemies and soil fertility are also great problems, with manures and fertilizers closely following in importance. Seeds, too, are now becoming a vital factor, which should be closely guarded.

Professor G. H. Coons, of the Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, who addressed the meeting on "Diseases of Vegetables and Their Control," said in part: "Intensive cultivation increases the dangers of more and more insect enemies. The potato wart was first noticed in a section of the mining region near Scranton, Pa., and was brought from there to the soft coal regions, and thence by a family to Detroit. The causes and remedies should be secured from the agricultural colleges as the practical man learns from the technical man, and the scientist gladly listens to the grower in his efforts to locate the cause of diseases and remedies that will protect his crops."

Resolutions were presented at this session to reduce the constantly increasing list of alleged new and varied types of vegetables by some seedsmen, who at present enumerate more than 7,000 varieties, which according to an investigation conducted by Dr. Tracy should be reduced fully 90 per cent to arrive at really distinct sorts. This matter, after discussion, was referred to the resolution committee.

The nominating committee presenting the following names as officers for the ensuing year, and all were unanimously elected: E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., president; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., vice-president; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids, Mich., treasurer; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., secretary. On the committee's suggestion, an organization secretary was added to the list of officers, C. W. Waid, of East Lansing, Mich., being unanimously chosen for the post.

A proposition with a view to forming a new division or section composed entirely of members of the staff of agricultural and horticultural colleges was voted down on the ground of the fear of there being an attempt to remove these men from close relation to the membership, which, however, the proposers assured the convention was not the purpose, but rather to speak and work as a united body to represent colleges, and not so much in the position of individuals as at present.

An invitation to hold the next convention in Buffalo, N. Y., was received and the matter was referred to the executive board with authority to select the 1920 meeting place. The present plan of arranging the programme so that the work is conducted by sections was thought by many to be objectionable, and this matter was also put in the hands of the board.

Many of the delegates visited the Ford automobile plant in the afternoon, and on Saturday, on invitation of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., about 75 inspected the firm's farms at Grass Lake, Mich.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

The National Association of Gardeners, at its annual convention, held at Cleveland, Ohio, September 9-12, indorsed the resolution adopted by the Society of American Florists at the Detroit convention, August 21. This resolution will be found on page 420 in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of September 13. The following is an abstract of an address made at the gardeners' meeting:

BY CONGRESSMAN M. L. DAVEY OF OHIO.

During the time that is at my disposal, I wish to discuss some very practical questions which have an interesting and important bearing upon the profession which you represent.

Let me first take up the matter pertaining to prohibition of plant importations, known as Quarantine Bill No. 37. It is not my proper function to condemn this act of the federal horticultural board, inasmuch as my office would make it improper for me to assume that position at this time. I can, however, make certain practical and helpful suggestions regarding the best methods of procedure to get results. I may go far enough to say that, in my judgment, the federal horticultural board has gone too far. I believe that there are elements of good in this ruling, and likewise I believe that it has gone far enough beyond the actual necessities of the situation, so that certain injustices have been done. Now, then, all you want is the elimination of the injustice, and the benefits of fair consideration for the proper interests of your profession. You have a right to ask and demand an impartial hearing on this important question. You do not want any action which is improper. You only want justice and fair play. Those things can best be determined by an impartial hearing. Obviously, the federal horticultural board would not be in a position to give an impartial hearing, because they have already reached a decision, and it is most natural that they should be prejudiced in favor of their own decision. They are human like the rest of us.

My suggestion is that you proceed to get a full hearing of this matter before the agricultural committee of the house. You can get such a hearing, if you will proceed in a practical way. The federal horticultural board will certainly listen to the agricultural committee of the house, because they get their appropriations through that committee. The agricultural committee, in turn, will certainly listen to the urgent request, either of their own members, or a reasonable number of other members of the house. No one can deny you the benefits of a hearing. That is the least thing which the agricultural committee of the house can in fairness do.

You are not asking this committee to pre-judge your case. You are not asking them to take your side. You are asking them merely to arrange for a hearing, at which all the facts from both sides may be fully and freely pre- a just conclusion as to the merits of sented, and from which they can draw the case. If you cannot make a good case, you naturally would not expect favorable action. But if you can make a good case, you will expect such action as will result in a proper modification of this quarantine ruling.

Those who are interested in this matter are sufficient in numbers to secure such a hearing, if they will proceed in a determined manner. Let me tell you something about the attitude of a member of congress. Those whom I have met, are practically all fine fellows, personally. They are trying to do right in the service they render to their constituents. They are human, of course. Most men are in congress because they want to be there. Most of them want to stay there. They recognize the fact that the best way to stay there, is to render satisfactory service to the people whom they represent. So if each of you will tell your congressman that you think an injustice has been done the horticultural profession by this Quarantine Bill No. 37; that you insist upon an impartial hearing of the whole question before the agricultural committee of the house; that you ask him to use his influence to secure such a hearing, I am sure he will gladly respond favorably.

You are not asking him to commit himself as to the merits of the case. You are asking him merely to help you secure an impartial hearing, which is perfectly right and proper.

Take my advice, and do not write a form letter. Take the facts, and write them in your own way, to your own congressman. Do not let him put you off with a formal acknowledgement. Tell him you want to know the results of his efforts. It he does not report to you within a reasonable length of time, go after him again. Let him know that you expect results. If he knows that you mean business, you can take my word for it, that he will "step on the gas," and try to help you. Your congressman wants your votes, and the votes of your friends. As long as you do not ask him to do anything wrong, or injure anyone else, or violate the rules of proper conduct, he will be glad to help you, if he knows you mean business.

Dr. C. L. Marlatt, Washington, D. C.
Chairman Federal Horticultural Board.

You cannot expect him to do anything for you, unless he knows what you want. You are not asking anything improper. Not only will he be glad to help you, but you have an absolutely perfect right to go to him for help. He is your representative and subject to your call on anything that pertains to his office. Do not feel that you are asking something, to which you have no right. He knows that you have a right to go to him, and that you have a right to insist upon his help, within the limits of propriety.

If every man interested in the horticultural profession will make it his individual business to take this matter up with his own congressman, and insist upon positive help and definite action, and keep after him until he gets a satisfactory reply, I can almost guarantee that a hearing will be granted. From that time on, it is entirely a question of making your case before the committee. Also, I can almost guarantee that any recommendations, which the agricultural committee sees fit to make on the basis of the facts and merits of this case, as disclosed at the hearing, will be cheerfully and promptly carried out by the federal horticultural board.

If I should talk to you indefinitely, I could not give you any more practical method of procedure, nor one more likely to be successful. I commend it to you for prompt and vigorous action.

Nothing is Impossible.

It is generally conceded that the advertising staff of a newspaper gets more pay than the editorial staff, yet none will question that the members of the latter staff have the advantage of education and brains, usually being men of college education, etc. Why this condition? After all, the newspaper is a money proposition, and must be able to show profits to be successful, so that they may obtain the best brains for their individual departments.

Who will doubt the importance of the advertising columns of the city newspapers? Imagine, if you can, business success without the use of advertising. There are some, but in the main, the real, big business would never have been done without it. Also follows another fact, that with advertising, you can do in two years, what would ordinarily take five or more years, and if time is money, what valuation will you add for this important adjunct now being carried on by our national publicity campaign and our slogan, "Say It With Flowers." Its growing importance makes it worth every one's efforts to use it whenever and wherever possible. The more liberal the use, the more profitable its results. Whether we will enjoy its full benefits, depends upon the liberality of the members of the craft, and the greater the generosity of the contributor, the greater will be the dividend. We need $100,000 to carry out our full campaign, and with your assistance, it can be done.

La Rochefoucauld said: "Nothing is impossible; there are ways which lead to everything, and if we had sufficient will, we should always have sufficient means."

If we put over the campaign, as outlined this year, we will never have any difficulty in putting over any campaign for the general good of all, and especially this one, the greatest compaign for the sale and use of more flowers, and a greater distribution of our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," so that all will appreciate the effort made.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Our publicity committees are greatly pleased at the confidence displayed by florists in the work of the campaign, as evidenced in the many additions to subscriptions already placed that are coming in. The following is a sample of the many letters our promotion bureau is receiving: "We are making good our promise of June 30, by enclosing a cheque herewith towards the 'Say it with Flowers' campaign, in addition to the one sent on the above date. We hope, and feel confident, that we will be able to double our subscription next year. Wishing you and the publicity campaign the greatest of success, Moraio Brothers, Rye, N. Y."

Those who have not subscribed should ponder upon this condition, for better evidence of the satisfaction the campaign is giving they could not have. But do they need evidence? Have they not that inner feeling that the campaign has already benefited their own businesses? As has been publicly pointed out, the florist business has been among the first of the industries to "come back" after the late disastrous war, and, like Johnie Walker, it is "going strong." What has been a prime factor in this speedy return to pre-war conditions, and even an improvement upon them, if not our publicity campaign?

An everlasting debt of gratitude is owing to the generous subscribers who have made the initial efforts of the campaign possible. Some of these subscribers have donated sum after sum in their enthusiasm over the great service rendered by the campaign. At a recent meeting of the New York Florists' Club, when nearly everybody present was already a subscriber, Max Schling, in an address which disclosed his personal experiences as to the beneficial effects of the campaign, collected additional subscriptions to the amount of several hundred dollars; and the club itself recommended a subscription of $500 from its own funds, which recommendation will be formally confirmed at its next meeting. There was some truth in a remark, made by one present at that meeting, "I should not like to have my name omitted from that subscription list—the omission would be a brand upon my honor."

At the meeting of our joint committees, to be held in Buffalo, October 14, there is to be set up for inspection one of the bill board signs which it is proposed to supply to the trade at $50 each. There should be many hundreds of sites in this country at the disposal of florists for the display of signs such as these, and their use will be helpful, not only to the publicity campaign, but to the florists themselves. Again, it is asked that all florists who have available sites along public highways, railroads, or where they will catch the public eye, notify the secretary, so that full particulars in regard to the signs may be provided at the earliest possible moment. The sooner the signs are installed, the better it will be for our industry.

Campaign plans are now very active, and will be more so as the campaign fund grows—we cannot say "accumulates"—for it is not allowed to do so. Every dollar works as fast as it is collected. Help us toward our goal of $100,000. Banish that feeling of distrust which all along has been unwarranted, and come over with your subscription. Be a "live florist" in every sense of the term. Foster the interests of your industry, and the industry will take care of you.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.
President Wisconsin State Florists' Association.

Wisconsin State Florists' Association.

The Wisconsin State Florists' Association celebrated its first birthday September 12 at an enthusiastic and largely attended meeting at the Blatz hotel, Milwaukee. According to the report of Secretary H. J. Seel, the association has a charter membership of 133, a very creditable beginning for the new organization. A telegram from F. Rentschler, Madison, a director, stating that due to illness in his family, he was unable to attend was read, and the secretary was instructed to write him conveying the regrets of the members and hopes for the patient's speedy recovery. Among the various topics that came up for discussion were universal trade discount, the adoption of a suitable code and President Pollworth made a strong plea for the national publicity campaign of the Society of American Florists. He also reported some of the proceedings of the Detroit convention of the parent organization.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: James Matthewson, Sheboygan, president; Richard Haentze, Fond du Lac, vice-president; H. J. Seel, Milwaukee, secretary; Gust. Rusch, Milwaukee, treasurer. Director for three years: John Rindfleisch, Beloit; for one year, J. E. Taylor, Oshkosh. It was voted to hold the 1920 summer meeting at Sheboygan in July, the date to be fixed by the board of directors.

Among the visitors present were Allie Zech, George Mohn, A. F. Longren and A. Kilner, of Chicago. Following the business session a supper was served at the hotel and the occasion was greatly enjoyed by all present. C. C. Pollworth acted as toastmaster in his genial way and much credit is due him for the great success of the meeting, the delegates departing for their homes with anticipations of many more such happy and instructive gatherings in the future.

John K. Rugowski, of Manitowoc, exhibited two vases, one of white and one of shell pink asters of exceptionally fine quality on long stems, the flowers measuring more than four inches in diameter, which were awarded a certificate of merit. They will not be disseminated for the present.

Floriculture at Wisconsin State Fair.

With ideal weather conditions prevailing throughout the week of September 8-13, the Wisconsin State Fair at Milwaukee exceeded any in the past as to attendance, exhibits and financial returns. The horticultural building, due to the good work of the local florists' club, was again a center of attraction, being tastefully decorated overhead and with fine groupings of plants, and other features did much to promote the florists' interests. While, in former years, the cut flowers and designs were staged and judged on the second day, this year, through some misunderstanding, they were called for on the first day, and which doubtless resulted in the poor showing made in these classes by the retailers, which, it is hoped, will not occur another year. The outdoor flower beds and boxes were in full bloom, and certainly were a credit to both the fair and the florists. Present prospects indicate that a new and really necessary horticultural building, in which a creditable exhibition can be properly staged, will be a reality in the near future. The awards were as follows:

Collection of greenhouse plants—Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, second; A. F. Kellner Co., Milwaukee, third; Edward J. Hamme, Wauwatosa, fourth.

Display of palms, 50 square feet—A. F. Kellner Co., first; Holton & Hunkel Co., second; C. C. Pollworth Co., third.

Display of ferns, 50 square feet—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; A. F. Kellner Co., second; C. C. Pollworth Co., third; E. J. Hamme, fourth.

Display of foliage plants—C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Holton & Hunkel Co., second; A. F. Kellner Co., third; E. J. Hamme, fourth.

Display of plants in bloom—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; E. J. Hamme, second; A. F. Kellner Co., third.

Specimen nephrolepis — Holton & Hunkel Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second; E. J. Hamme, third.

Floriculture at Minnesota State Fair.

At the Minnesota state fair, August 30 - September 6, one of the most prosperous in history, with a record-breaking attendance, larger premium lists and naturally more extensive exhibits, the floricultural features surpassed those of previous years. The plant stock, especially was the finest ever shown. Outdoor flowers, however, were not up to the usual standard. Noteworthy, and a center of attraction at all times, were the designs staged for competition, there being four entries in this section. Holm & Olson, St. Paul, were awarded first honors for a concave panel with flags of the allies and the Red Cross about 24 inches in height, the entire design being made of flowers. The work was executed by O. J. Olson and was without doubt the finest ever turned out by this establishment. Professor Cady was in charge of the exhibits and August Swanson, as usual, acted in the capacity of judge. The awards in the general classes were as follows: Holm & Olson, 38 first, five second and one third premiums: Swanson, Inc., Minneapolis, three firsts, 20 seconds and four thirds; Chicago Avenue Greenhouses, Minneapolis, three firsts, 14 seconds and 15 thirds; Robert H. Black, Albert Lea, Minn., one first; Franklin Baker, Minneapolis, one second and one third; C. Ruedlinger, Minneapolis, one second.

Massachusetts Hort. Society's Exhibition.

Although, as the growers state, heavy rains and high winds have been unfavorable to the dahlia crop, the Massachusetts Horticultural Society staged an interesting show in Horticultural hall, Boston, September 13-14. There were good exhibits from both commercial and private growers. Noteworthy, were the displays of J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, Mass.; Joseph Breck Company and Breck-Robinson Nursery Company, of Lexington, Mass.; W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn., and the Boston Cut Flower Company, which made an interesting display of basket arrangements.

Ralph W. Clark, a private grower of Brockton, Mass., exhibited fine blooms of Cambria, George Adams and J. O. Moran. Both J. K. Alexander and W. D. Hathaway exhibited new seedlings, their own productions. Thomas Murphy, of Peabody, Mass., again exhibited his Lily Grand, a white flower of large size, which has been highly praised. He also showed other good varieties.

Dahlia Mandiana, by W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., has previously been exhibited, and is well known to the patrons of shows. It may be said in passing that it is a red of exceptionally large size and the flowers close down on the foliage. It will be useful, chiefly as a garden ornament. C. Louis Alling's yellow, William Slocombe, attracted much attention. A. E. Doty, New Haven, Conn., exhibited fine specimens of Yuban, Robert Lyon and Big Ben. Other exhibitors were Jelle Roos, of Milton, Mass.; J. E. Jones, of Waltham, Mass., and James Adie of Boston, whose vase of Mrs. Frederick Grinnell, a winner of many first prizes, was a center of interest.

Floriculture Sets Record at Conn. Fair.

The record for number of entries in the floricultural section at the Connecticut state fair was broken this year and the displays attracted more than usual attention. Among the prominent exhibitors were: Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn.; Coombs, the Florist, Hartford, Conn.; J. F. Huss, Hartford; N. Nelson, Hartford; East Hartford Gladiolus Co.; J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; A. B. Goodrich, Glastonbury, Conn.; W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass.; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn., and A. W. Davidson, Ansonia, Conn.

Floriculture at Nebraska State Fair.

The floricultural display at the Nebraska state fair, held at Lincoln, September 1-5, was excellent, as was the display of fruits, both being under the supervision of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society. The rose display was particularly good, especially the entry of the Eiche Floral Co., of Lincoln, which included excellent Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Premier and Hoosier Beauty. The fountain in the center of the building was an attractive spot with its handsome decoration of water lilies and hyacinths arranged by Professor Grosshart of the state university.

Lewis Henderson, of Omaha, was probably the largest exhibitor, being awarded first honors for displays of greenhouse plants, palms, ferns, a flower bed in bloom; also, first for display of cut flowers, vase of 50 roses, wreath, gladioli and corsage bouquet. J. K. Hiltner, of Lincoln, was first for bridal bouquet, floral spray and basket of flowers, and second in the competition for cut flowers and roses, and greenhouse plants, ferns, palms and blooming stock. Paul B. Floth, of Omaha, was a strong contender in nearly all classes, both cut flowers and plants, taking most of the third prizes, and a number of second honors. The judging was in the capable hands of C. H. Green of Fremont.

COOLER WEATHER SHORTENS SUPPLY.

With cool nights prevailing, the effects were soon noticeable in the receipts of roses, which shortened up considerably towards the end of last week. The daily cut of gladioli is also growing less, and the same holds true of good, clean asters. With prospects of a rainy period, which is due about this time each year, the cut of outdoor stock will soon come to an end, and indoor grown crops will again command more attention. While cut carnations are becoming more plentiful from day to day, the stems are too short to be of much value. The few early yellow and white chrysanthemums that come in occasionally are soon picked up.

NOTES.

Carl Desebrock, age 71, who with his daughter, Miss Carla, conducted a retail store at North avenue and 29th street up to June, 1918, died suddenly from apoplexy at Cedar Lake, September 6. Previous to opening his store, both he and his daughter were in the employ of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., where both were held in high esteem for their faithful services. Interment was at Wanderer's Rest cemetery, September 8.

A. H. McDonald, of Gimbel's, reports an exceptionally busy time during fair week; in fact, it was the best business in September since their existence.

Vivid Description.

Another city man finds color in the lamp-lit stall of fruit and vegetables on the street.

Tomatoes, redder than Krakatoa's fire,
Oranges like old sunsets over Tyre,
And apples, golden-green as the glades of Paradise.

OBITUARY.

Peter Risch.

Peter Risch, well-known grower and wholesale florist of Chicago, died at his home in Evanston, September 12, at the age of 74 years. He was born in Mertzig, Luxembourg, August 19, 1845. After spending 10 years in Paris, France, he came to America in 1870, locating at Chicago, and settling in Evanston one year later. He spent most of his years in the florist industry, and established the Weiland & Risch business in 1898, which consisted of a large sized range of glass in Evanston, and a wholesale store in Chicago. In 1918, the business was incorporated as the Weiland-Risch Co., of which he was president. Mr. Risch was quick to realize the great possibilities of the Killarney roses, and was the first to grow them extensively in the west, recommending them most highly to all growers, who were welcome at all times to inspect the plants growing at their greenhouses. They handled the Killarneys exceptionally well, and later introduced a new pink rose, named Champ Weiland, which was a great success, and quite a factor in the Chicago market today. Mr. Risch was highly respected by all who knew him, and the sympathy of the entire trade is extended to his family and business associates. He is survived by his son, John P. Risch, who has been managing the Chicago wholesale store so successfully for many years, and a daughter, Mrs. Catherine M. Weiland, both of Evanston. The funeral was held from the late residence, 802 Monroe street, Evanston, September 15, at 8:30 a. m. to St. Nicholas' church, where requiem high mass was celebrated at 9 a. m., and interment was at St. Henry's cemetery. The funeral was largely attended, and the floral offerings from the trade were many and beautiful and showed the high esteem in which he was held by his fellowmen.

William H. Keyser.

William H. Keyser, for many years a grower, with a range on Randolph avenue, Jersey City, N. J., died at his home, 87 Clark street, that city, September 11, of intestinal trouble, in his sixty-seventh year. He was born in New York, but most of his life had been spent in Jersey City. He was well and favorably known to the older generation of florists of both places. Surviving him are four daughters and one son. His funeral was held from the family home, September 14.

William G. Henderson.

William G. Henderson, a landscape gardener of Hartford, Conn., died at his home, 30 Harrison street, that city, September 4, age 74 years. He was born in Glenisle, Scotland. Surviving him are his wife, three daughters and two sons. The daughters are Mrs. Elizabeth Sherard, Mrs. John H. Sirne and Mrs. Edgar M. Brown. The sons are Charles and William G. Henderson.

World Exposition Planned for Nova Scotia

With the aim of bringing Nova Scotia and her resources into the limelight, and to commemorate the part played by Canada in the war, a world exposition and old home celebration is planned for Halifax in the summer of 1922. There are a million or more Nova Scotians or their descendants scattered throughout the world, and it is hoped that many will return for the occasion. The Halifax board of trade has given assurance of its co-operation and financial support.

THE Chicago Association of Commerce is planning to invite the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association to hold its 1920 convention in that city.

NEW ORLEANS members of the Society of American Florists are talking of making a bid for the 1921 convention, to be held, presumably in winter or spring.

A SHIPMENT of 10,000 tons of potash from Germany to the United States, said to be the first since 1914, has been contracted for, and ships for transportation provided by the shipping board.

GROWERS in the larger cities are being crowded farther out every year. With the automobile, improved roads, and the interurban railway, this is not such a disadvantage as would have been the case only a few years ago.

THE general magazines are exploiting a recent English production as the first greenhouse on wheels, overlooking the fact that in 1912 we gave an extended illustrated account, of A. J. Stahelin's range on wheels at Redford, Mich., issue of October 19, page 736.

Seattle's Preparation for President.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., writes as follows from Seattle, Wash., September 11: "We are having a great time in this wonderful section of our great country. Everybody is anxiously awaiting the arrival of the president and the battleship fleet. A warm welcome will be given to both the president and the fleet. This is a great week for the florists here. Roses are fairly plentiful, dahlias magnificent, also gladioli."

Money.

Chicago bankers are predicting that the commercial paper market, in fact, all commercial paper discounts, will shortly get down to a 5¼ per cent basis. The market is now around 5¼ per cent for the average run of paper placed. A rate of 4¼ per cent on government borrowing, a reduction of ¼ of 1 per cent, has brought about a great change in the situation, and where bankers a few weeks ago talked nothing but tight money, they see an important change for the better coming.

Society of American Florists.

LIFE MEMBERS' CERTIFICATES.

Owing to the recent large influx of life members, some delay is being experienced in the furnishing of engrossed diplomas to such members, signatures, engrossing and framing all requiring considerable time. New life members are, therefore, asked to appreciate this condition. The supply of life membership buttons, furnished at 75 cents each, was early exhausted at the convention, and delay is being experienced in obtaining a further supply. As soon as received from the maker, the buttons will be forwarded.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Profiteers' Bill.

The house bill extending the food control act to penalize profiteering, as a means of reducing the cost of living, was passed by the senate, September 12 and sent to conference. In addition to penalties—$5,000 fine and two years' imprisonment—for profiteering, hoarding, destroying, or monoplizing of food and other necessaries, or "making any unjust or unreasonable rate of charge," the bill extends the law to include wearing apparel and containers of food, feeds and fertilizers, as well as food, fuel, fertilizers and agricultural machinery. The life of the proposed law would terminate upon the proclamation of peace.

American Dahlia Society Field Day.

Visitors in attendance at the annual convention and exhibition of the American Dahlia Society in New York, September 23-25, should plan to attend the field day of the society which will be held at Storrs, Conn., September 20, when the varieties in the trial gardens at the Connecticut Agricultural College will be scored by the society's officials for the American Dahlia Society's certificates of merit. Forty-five varieties from numerous states including California, Oregon, Maine, Rhode Island, New York and Connecticut are represented as well as entries from Holland.

In reaching Storrs by train it is necessary to purchase ticket to Willimantic, where motor bus transportation may be obtained to Storrs, eight miles north. The following schedules will be found practicable:

From New York by boat to New London leave Pier 40, North River, at 5:30 P. M., or Pier 70, East River, foot of Twenty-second street, at 6 P. M. on Friday, September 19, arriving at New London at 1:30 A. M. Saturday. Passengers leaving word with purser will be called in time to catch the Central Vermont train leaving about 5:50 o'clock for Willimantic and arriving at 7 o'clock.

By train leave New York, Grand Central Station, over New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway, Saturday morning at 7:51, arriving at Willimantic at 12:24 P. M.

Automobile parties will find routing to Willimantic in any of the standard road books.

BUSINESS UNUSUALLY GOOD FOR SEASON.

Activity in the flower trade in this city has been better than is generally the case at this period of the year. The supply has been plentiful, especially gladioli, which are now practically in a state of glut. Asters are showing a decided improvement both in size of flower and length of stems. Roses are especially good and are also plentiful. Russell, Ophelia, Sunburst, Francis Scott Key and Columbia are perfect in flower and stems are of good length. Some good carnations have been seen, but the supply is limited. Calendulas, cosmos and snapdragons are filling in nicely in the boxes of assorted flowers.

NOTES.

It is gratifying to see the attitude of Philip Breitmeyer, Albert Pochelon and Charles H. Plumb of Detroit, Mich., regarding Sunday closing after their visit to Toronto, Ont., and other Canadian cities, which were not permitted to and never did open on Sunday, and still have always been most successful. The florists' business is at least being placed where it always belonged—in the highest class and catering to the best trade.

The state fair at Syracuse, as in former years, offered good inducements for exhibitors in table decorations, bouquets and cut flowers. W. H. Grever, of Allen street, and E. A. Slattery, of W. J. Palmer's staff, entered in the competition while Jerry Brookins & Son, of Orchard Park, N. Y., had displays in the rose classes. Good reports from all are assured.

Williamsville, N. Y., the home of Wallace Eiss, of the W. F. Kasting Co., has an automobile speed limit of 15 miles per hour. Wallace is the "police force." The state bank at Williamsville is said to have considerable money to loan, the result of fines imposed on tourists on their way to the automobile club who like to travel "on high."

W. J. Palmer is still away on his vacation. Nearly all of the other summer absentees are back, however, and ready for good business.

S. A. Anderson, Jr., and John Anderson have left for Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

Charles Felton has returned from a trip to Detroit, Cleveland and other western cities.

John Fiebelkorn has a new car in which he now makes his calls on the trade.

Visitors: Herbert A. Claussen, Denver, Colo.; F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O.; Werner Bultmann, Syracuse, N. Y.

BISON.

St. Paul, Minn.

FALL TRADE OPENS AUSPICIOUSLY.

Trade conditions are now assuming a fall aspect. Business in all branches is very good, with plenty of funeral work, numerous weddings and general buying up to the standard. The supply is plentiful, although outdoor flowers are of poor quality.

NOTES.

Holm & Olson are in the midst of the work of remodeling their establishment, and with present heavy business, it is a problem to take care of all orders. When the work is completed, however, the store will be more capacious and up-to-the-minute than ever.

Jan Commandros, who for several years conducted the Golden Rule flower department, has severed his connection, and the establishment is now operating this branch of the business. Mr. Commandros has not definitely decided on the future.

The visit of President and Mrs. Wilson called for much activity in the flower shops. The decorative features at the capitol were ably executed by Holm & Olson. This firm also had the order for an elaborate wedding decoration at Austin, Minn.

Visitors: Albert and P. Claussen, Faribault, Minn.

BUSINESS IMPROVING.

There was a noticeable increase in the sales the past week, due principally to several prominent funerals, which called for a large quantity of flowers. Stock the past week was in extra heavy supply in practically all lines, and many of the wholesalers agree that there never was a period in September when flowers were so plentiful as last week. Most of the stock was sold to whoever would buy it by some of the houses at ridiculously low prices, including several department stores, who it is reported, bought roses as low as $4 per 1,000, which will give one an idea how well glutted the market really was. Other stock sold correspondingly low, especially asters and gladioli, many of which were dumped, owing to the great surplus of these and other flowers. The market took a change for the better, September 13, and while stock is not as plentiful as it was last week, there is plenty to go around and some low offerings in quantity lots are being made by several of the houses. There is a good demand for American Beauty roses, and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Some fine Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney, Hoosier Beauty, My Maryland, Ward, Sunburst, Milady and Champ Weiland are arriving, in addition to a few other varieties grown for this market. Carnations are improving in quality, and continue to clean up nicely right along at good figures. Gladioli are very plentiful, and are obtainable in large lots at low prices. Asters are seen in quantity everywhere, and are moving better at this writing than they have been for several weeks, although they are not anywhere near what they should be. Lily of the valley is selling at $12 to $15 per 100. Orchids are more plentiful, but command high prices. White and yellow chrysanthemum are to be had in fair sized quantities and the supply of lilies appears to be gradually increasing. A few snapdragons and calendulas are offered, together with an assortment of outdoor stock that

The McCabe family has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their loving daughter and sister, Clara, whose death occurred this week. This is the second visit of the grim reaper to McCabe home within a few months, it only being a short time ago that Frank, formerly with the A. L. Randall Co., was called to the great beyond.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report that trade has shown a great improvement over last week especially in regard to the local demand. The shipping trade is steady here and some of the firm's out-of-town customers have been with it since Mr. Vaughan started his business.

William Reed, of the A. L. Randall Co., is back from an out-of-town trip and is having a pleasant visit with his old friend C. O. Wilcox, representing Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., who is home on a visit.

D. F. Simonds, 1917 West Harrison street, who is a member of the local order of Elks, will make the trip to Michigan City with his lodge, September 20, where they will be the guests of the lodge in that city.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, George Mohn, of Vaughan's Seed Store, and Fred Longren attended the first annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association held at Milwaukee, Wis., September 12.

Peter Olsem, Fred Price, Allie Zech, William Lorman and William Wolf are representing the trade in Kaad's bowling league this season, which opened Wednesday evening, September 17.

Nick Alles, son of Gust Alles, with Wietor Bros., who has been in the navy for many months, was released from service recently, and is back home.

The South Park canna beds on Drexel boulevard are now a grand sight. Florists who wish to satisfy themselves as to the best sellers should see these before frost.

The Central Refrigerator & Equipment Co. has sold an icebox to Frank S. Ayres, who opened a store recently in the Atlas building.

Peter Reinberg is having a good call for roses, which he is cutting in quantity, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia.

Joe Bieber is back from Point Place, near Toledo, O., where he has been spending the summer for many years.

Miss Heskett, of Vaughan's Seed Store, has returned from the east. Miss Ludlow leaves for New York next week.

Tom Rogers is back on the job at the Weiland-Risch Co.'s store after spending almost two weeks in a local hospital.

John Enders, with Poehlmann Bros. Co., is now a grandfather, which accounts for his unusually good humor.

C. C. Pollworth, of C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., was a visitor September 16.

Fred Mann, son of Matt Mann, is attending Notre Dame university.

MARKET CROWDED BUT DEMAND NORMAL.

The market the past week has been crowded with stock, and the surplus moved slowly. Business was normal for this season of the year. Asters have shown some improvement, but the supply has been in excess of the demand, as a consequence of which, prices suffered. Roses also have been numerous, although they have moved fairly well. Gladioli are plentiful, with bargain prices on large lots. Carnations are still short with little demand. Dahlias, so far, have been a disappointment, the plants having suffered from the long dry spells, and have not made the proper summer growth. Tuberoses, snapdragons, etc., are very little sought.

CLUB MEETING.

The members of the florists' club journeyed to Belleville, Ill., last week to hold the monthly meeting as the guests of Gust. Grossart. About 50 were present, and were royally entertained by Mr. Grossart and his family. The chief business of the meeting was the installation of the new officers, consisting of A. H. Hummert, president; A. S. Cerny, vice-president; J. J. Benecke, secretary; Wm. C. Smith, treasurer, and Oscar Ruf, trustee for three years. The club went on record as pledging their support to the members of the Florist Telegraph Delivery and the Retail Florist Association in endeavoring to get the 1920 convention of the F. T. D. Four new applications for membership were presented. The club also pledged the support of the members to the St. Louis representatives of the National Association of Gardeners at their convention to be held here next year. The president was also instructed to appoint a committee of five to keep in touch with the national flower show committee to secure the next national flower show for St. Louis, which has been pledged for this city if they want it and can get a proper hall to stage it. A. H. Hummert, the president, donated the attendance prize, which was won by G. H. Pring, a box of cigars, which he generously shared with the members. J. J. Benecke also presented to the members a box of cigars, which he won in the bowling contest at Detroit a few weeks ago. After the meeting, quite a few of the florists went to the county fair at Belleville.

COOLER WEATHER STIMULATES DEMAND.

With cooler, crisp, fall weather, business has shown improvement, especially in the call for flowering plants, ferns, house plants, etc. Carnations have also been greatly benefitted by cool weather and sunshine. Gladioli show excellent quality. Asters are still plentiful at $1.50 and $2 per 100. There is a heavy supply of roses of all kinds, with Francis Scott Key, Ophelia and White Killarney among the leaders in quality. Fall garden flowers, such as gaillardias, snapdragons, helianthus, tritomas, candytuft, cosmos, etc., are in good demand. The fall openings of the department stores has created a good market for gladioli, cut hydrangeas, palms, ferns and flowering stock.

CLUB MEETING.

The first meeting of the season of the Rochester Florists' Association was held September 12 with a small attendance. There was a discussion of plans for the fall flower show and it was decided to hold a sausage roast at Durand-Eastman park in the near future. Resolutions were drawn and ordered sent to Mrs. George Arnold and Schuyler Arnold expressing the sympathy of the association in the loss of the head of the family. George T. Boucher related interesting incidents of his recent trip to Detroit and Chicago. The finance committee reported on the outing of the associaton held August 12 at Manatou Beach, which resulted in a profit.

NOTES.

George T. Boucher attracted attention to his store during the week with a fine display of cyclamens, crotons and Australian ferns. Mr. Boucher has been elected grand knight by unanimous vote at the September meeting of the Knights of Columbus, after serving one year as deputy knight.

The forces at the establishments of the Rochester Floral Co. and H. E. Wilson have been busy with fall decorations at a number of the leading stores of this city.

CHESTER.

Fort Wayne.

WARM WEATHER LESSENS DEMAND.

Trade has been fairly active in flower circles, although the demand did not measure up to the first week in September, obviously due to the very hot weather of the first part of the week, which caused a falling off in the trade. Funeral work was very light, and weddings were not numerous. Roses are the mainstay of the business. All pink varieties are increasing in both quality and quantity. Shawyer and Ophelia are coming to the front in productivity, although Columbia and Premier are easily the leaders in public favor. Asters are of exceptionally fine quality, and are very plentiful. Short stemmed carnations are retailing for 75 cents per dozen, which is a good figure considering their quality. Gladioli are fast decreasing in quantity, and the grade is poor in many varieties, especially America, which was a leader a month ago. Orchids are increasing slowly but a large supply is not expected much before the first of October.

NOTES.

The florists have charge of decorating the large "court of honor" for the peace centennial exposition, which will be held in this city for one week, commencing September 29. The court of honor will extend over half a city block, and hardy flowers, evergreen, and plants will be used in its decoration. The florists are obtaining a large amount of publicity in the daily papers from this work.

The Knecht-Freese Floral Co. is cutting a fine large supply of Ophelia and Shawyer roses, and report a very good demand for all seasonable stock.

S. Hudson, orchid grower for W. J. & M. S. Vesey for the past eight years, has resigned, to take a position at Columbus, O.

MARKET SHOWS DECIDED IMPROVEMENT.

Market conditions during the past week were more satisfactory than they have been for some time. Asters arrived in quantity, the quality was better than at any time this season, and with plenty of dahlias, there was an ample and varied assortment to tempt the flower-buying public. South Baltimore seemed to have a busy week with funeral work, and with the other stores carrying good stocks, the market was relieved of the previous overcrowded condition. The feature of the week was the appearance of a few Golden Glow chrysanthemums.

CLUB MEETING.

Previous to the meeting of the florists' club, September 8, the entertainment committee held a session and made plans for the banquet to be held in connection with the election of officers in October, at which the ladies will be invited, and members of the florists' clubs of Philadelphia, Pa., and Washington, D. C., will also be asked to attend. It is hoped to secure Charles H. Grakelow, the well-known orator of the former city, as the speaker of the evening. The recommendations of the committee were concurred in. The nominees for office are as follows: For president—Wm. F. Ekas. For vice-president—Robert L. Graham, Jr. For treasurer—Albert G. Fiedler. For secretary—Robert T. Paterson. For financial secretary—C. Harry Wagner. For librarian—Charles Wagner.

After routine business had been disposed of, the club was addressed by Mr. Shaw, of the Maryland Agricultural Society, who spoke of the preparations being made for the success of the Hagerstown fair, October 27-31. It was hinted that there might be an "apple banquet" on the evening of the second day of the fair to consist of five courses, each showing different ways of serving.

Some very fine dahlias were exhibited by R. Vincent Jr. & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., among them a very fine cross from King of Autumn, and a white, which it is claimed the beetle will not attack. Some fine gladioli were staged by the De Grott establishment, and John Wagner had a very fine basket of Lady Hillingdom roses.

Following remarks by several members who had attended the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, the meeting adjourned.

NOTES.

John L. Wagner, of Towson, is being complimented on his excellent display of foliage plants at the Timonium fair. The exhibit was arranged under his personal supervision, and as his establishment is in close proximity to the fair grounds, it proved a good advertising feature.

Isaac H. Moss, of Govanstown, had an especially fine exhibit of evergreens, attractively displayed in one of the new buildings at the fair grounds, which attracted many visitors and received much favorable comment.

Robert Halliday continues to improve in health and was able to take a short walk last week. When strong enough to undertake the trip, he will go to Ocean City, N. J., to recuperate.

The S. S. Pennock Co. had the first Golden Glow chrysanthemums offered in this city this season. They arrived September 5, and met with ready sales at $2.50 per dozen. G., JR.

Toronto, Ont.

MARKET CLEANS UP WELL.

The visit of His Excellency, the Prince of Wales, was responsible for a number of good decorations, and with many social events, there has been a good demand for both flowers and decorative material. Corsages were also much in evidence, and all of the local florists appeared to get a share of the business. The Canadian national exhibition, which closed recently, with an attendance of 1,200,000 in two weeks, also created an additional call, and although the supply was plentiful, the market cleaned up in good shape. Roses are showing good condition, with the new variety, Dunlop, being cut in quantity, and it meets with ready sale. Premier, Columbia, Russell and Ophelia are fairly numerous. Carnations have again made their appearance, but are not above the ordinary. Orchids and lilies are plentiful enough to fill all orders. The stores are now depending on gladioli and asters for their main decorations, and these flowers are plentiful at present, and prices are within the reach of all.

NOTES.

The retail florists' club held an enthusiastic meeting at Dunlop hall September 8, at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year. H. G. Dillemuth, president; S. A. McFadden, vice-president; George Hatcher, treasurer; H. W. James, secretary; J. J. Higgins, financial secretary. George M. Geraghty was elected a member of the executive committee, as were H. W. Parker, Edward Gale and Jack Carter. The club will have a "Say It With Flowers" day in November, when all of the stores will have their autos in a parade and flowers will be donated to all hospitals in the city. This feature will doubtless prove good publicity for the chrysanthemum show.

In the plain groups at the exhibition, the first prize was awarded to Sir Henry Pellatt, second honors going to Thos. Manton. In the fern group, Sir Henry Pellatt was first, Sir John Eaton, second and Thos. Manton, third. For specimen palm, Sir Pellatt's entry was first and that of Thos. Manton, second. For caladiums, Sir Eaton and Sir Pellatt were first and second respectively. In the orchid display, the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., took first honors with a grand showing considering the season. In the cut flower section, among the commercial exhibitors who were prominent in the list of prize winners were Campbell Bros. of Simcoe, Ont., H. Sheriden and T. H. Hammett.

A. Gilchrist is cutting large quantities of his new gladioli, Lady Borden. This is a vigorous grower with large flowers and petals the color of the Ophelia rose, with center scarlet, shading to crimson.

The Hamilton florists will form an organization, September 24, and a good sized delegation is expected to go from this city for the installation of officers.

H. J. Mills is cutting good stock of Columbia and Ophelia roses, his range being devoted exclusively to these varieties.

H. W. James and wife are on an extended visit to the United States.

TRADE BETTER THAN LAST YEAR.

Business the past week is reported as seasonable; if anything, better than for last year at this time. The supply of cut flowers is heavier, particularly such outdoor staples as gladioli and dahlias. The former are holding out remarkably, some of the varieties being of splendid quality. The dahlias, judging from the exceptionally good flowers of the highly cultivated types so far seen, will be better and offered in larger quantities than ever before. Asters are still quite numerous. New crop carnations are appearing, but if they take any strength from the plant, their advent had better be postponed for a while. Roses are becoming more plentiful. Russell, Columbia and Premier are leading. This latter variety is increasing in size and quality as the weeks go by, and growers who have taken a chance, are well satisfied that they made no mistake. Alfred M. Campbell, who planted 10,000, is now quite well assured that he has more in sight than he would have realized from any other variety. American Beauties, while none too plentiful, are selling well up. The quality is fine. Cattleya labiata is in and it is a poor flower that will not bring $1. Hydrangea clematis, zinnias, larkspurs, tritomas and New Jersey statice are other outside items that give variety.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR DECORATIONS.

This has been Sir Knights week, the national conclave of the order holding its annual meeting in this city. There have been a number of entertainments for which the decorations were quite elaborate. J. J. Habermehl's Sons had most of these, one, the decoration for the grand ball at the Commercial Museum, being an extensive arrangement which was splendidly carried out. One item was 150 cases of wild smilax. The exhibition room, where the ball was held, is immense. All the walls were covered with lattice work. There were also hundreds of feet of balustrade railing and large numbers of pedestals for pot plants and evergreens. Tall cedar trees stood sentinel-like at the sides of all supporting columns. A fine grouping of palms and large cibotiums, in front of which was a large electric fountain, graced one end of the dancing floor. There was elaborate fastooning of bunting, flags and banners. The electric light decorations, which were put up by the Habermehl electricians, were elaborate and added much to the decoration, which was one of the most extensive in its entirety ever seen here, and a great credit to the firm.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WELCOME.

Friday was "Pershing" day, which Charles H. Grakelow conceived should take the form of a "Say it With Flowers" welcome to the famous visitor. The city's programme for his reception was not finally decided upon until late the day before. His visit was short, from 10 a. m. to 12:30. Charles got busy on the phone, however, at once, and at 6 a. m., the next morning, had a volunteer force from a number of the stores and wholesale houses busy decorating grandstands on the parkway, from which 20,000 school children were to greet the general. A lot of material from the Knights Templar ball decoration was loaned by J. J. Habermehl's Sons, and there were quantities of cutflowers, donated by the growers, sent from the wholesale houses. These decorated stands, the wild cheering, and the flowers which were showered on the general's car and strewed over his pathway, thrown by the hands of the school children, was the feature and most pleasing incident of his visit. As he drew to the center of the stands, his car was halted a moment, and two little girls, Marie L. Aengele, daughter of George Aengele, and Hazel Matthews, niece of Charles Grakelow, presented the general with a large bunch of Columbia roses, with a card, "The Florists of Philadelphia offer you a 'Say it with Flowers' welcome." The children, who were dressed in white, wore red, white and blue headbands and large sashes. Marie forgot her prepared speech, but after a moment said, "These are for you, General Pershing." "Yes, for you," said Hazel. Then the general said, "Thank you," reached down, lifted up and kissed each of them, and waving to the cheering children on the stands, passed on. You have to take your hat off to Charlie. He not only has initiative, but the executive ability to inspire others to carry out his plans. Credit must also be given to those who furnished the flowers and others who were there in the "dawn's early light" to put them in place.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WEEK ENDORSED.

The meeting of the florists' club, called for the purpose of endorsing "Say it With Flowers" week, was rather poorly attended, although full of interest from start to finish. After full consideration, it was finally determined upon as a good initiative to start the season, and the week, October 13-18, was selected as the time when flowers would be most plentiful. The arrangement of the programme was left in the hands of a committee consisting of Charles H. Grakelow, Frank M. Ross, Victor Ridenour, John Habermehl and Charles Theiss, with power to add to its number and arrange all details. The question of raising funds to finance a local publicity campaign for the coming season burned fiercely for a while. Two plans were discussed—assessment in classes and percentage on all sales as is done in Milwaukee. The percentage plan seemed to prevail and 19 of the 20 retailers present agreed to have one per cent added to all of their slips. The growers were asked to confer with others in their branch of the business and urge the absentees to attend the next meeting of the club, October 7, when it is hoped, a working plan acceptable to all will be presented.

NOTES.

T. Nelson Geiger has added a new Dodge car to his delivery service. This has all the up-to-date improvements, including an electric light in the inside top, which illuminates the body, and a coil inside at the front, through which the exhaust is carried, which heats the car in cold weather. Mr. Geiger, his brother and mother, are enjoying a two weeks' motor trip through New England and into Canada.

The H. H. Battles window is nearly always a study in color effects. Many of the combinations are striking and unique. One example is a small shallow bowl with perforated flower block center, which contained only four orange colored zinnias. These were arranged with a few sprigs of silvery juniper, not much, but finished and effective, having a Japanese look.

"Happy Jack" Deutscher is very optimistic regarding the future. He says: "Our growers' stocks never looked better. There will be a great cut of dahlias, and then the chrysanthemums and roses."

Edward Reid is visiting his ranch in Montana, to which he takes a pilgrimage every year about this time. He is calling on friends in the trade in Chicago and other cities on the way.

John Berger thinks gladioli have never been finer than this season. He expects dahlias to break the record both for quality and quantity.

The dahlia season opens this week with the Leo Niessen Co. Their order system insures perfect delivery.

The Sign of the Rose Flower Shop has an effective window, done with terra cotta pottery and ferns.

SACRIFICE PRICES MOVE HEAVY SUPPLY.

Some of the retailers say that there is a slight revival of business, but it is not of sufficient volume to have any perceptible effect in the wholesale district. It is true that on Saturdays—always dull in the summer—more buyers are now around in the morning, but their purchasers do not seem to greatly reduce the heavy supply of stock. During the past week, an enormous stock of dahlias and asters were thrown on the market, and the supply of roses was also too great for the demand, consequently much stock was sacrificed or lost. Orchids are more plentiful, the best cattleyas wholesaling at the rate of $75 per 100. Only a light supply of chrysanthemums is on the market, and there will be little call for them, while the counters are glutted with dahlias and asters. Some of the white bouvardia that is arriving is exceptionally fine and brings a good price. Necessarily, there is always a call for a certain amount of good stock; the problem is in the surplus.

September 15.—The weather is dark and cool. Roses are in lighter supply this morning, but there are enough for requirements. Otherwise, market conditions are unchanged.

NOTES.

Reference in these notes to Quarantine No. 37 may seem superfluous, since its discussion at the Detroit convention has been published, but in reading the report of the discussion, the writer has been impressed by the reasonableness of the arguments of F. R. Pierson and John E. Lager, both of whom spoke of the possibility of injurious insects being imported in packing material, bananas and other tropical fruits, that come in uninspected. The writer has thought of this on seeing truck loads of green bananas passing through the streets of this city. A bunch of bananas is a safe hiding place for insects; in fact, snakes and centipedes have been found in them. Not long ago, a ship arrived at this port from the tropics, and the seamen declared, that a swarm of winged insects had come on board at their port of sailing, and to their great discomfort, remained with them throughout the voyage. Some insects, injurious to plants, can fly. What would hinder some of them from following the fruit, lumber or other material to the ship and being thus transported? That may not seem probable, but it is, at least, as good an argument as some that have been advanced in support of Quarantine No. 37.

Manager Perry, of the Dards store, who spent two months of the summer in England, recently gave the writer his views on the condition of the florist business in London and other places that he visited. He says that money is plentiful over there, and that the florists are receiving quite as good prices as our own florists are able to realize. Relating to such conditions as the quality of stock and arrangement, he says that the work of our American florists will favorably compare with anything that he saw while abroad. On his return, Mr. Perry took his family to the White mountains for a vacation, but he is now back at the store, where business is already quite active.

A coal shortage is predicted for the future—but we hasten to state that there is no cause for immediate worry. A correspondent of the Manchester (Eng.) Guardian writes that, English coal will be exhausted in about 900 years, German coal in 1,400 years and American coal in about 2,000 years. Of course, the man that tells us this must be a scientist for he has several plans for furnishing heat when the coal becomes exhausted. We move that he get them in operation as soon as possible. It might give our "coal barons" a jolt, and reduce the price of coal for the coming winter.

J. H. Small & Sons had the decorations at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel for the luncheon and dinner given in honor of Gen. Pershing the past week. Many of the finest dahlias and gladioli were used. For the dinner on September 10 plates were laid for 1500 persons. General Pershing received a great ovation as he led the parade down Fifth avenue on that day. In front of the Hotel Savoy, at 59th street, the avenue was literally carpeted with flowers.

The Campbell Flower Shop, for which G. L. Staub is manager and designer, had a large number of fine designs for the funeral of the late John Mitchell, formerly a prominent labor leader. There were tributes from President Wilson, Governor Smith and various organizations in which the deceased had held membership. Many Scott Key roses were used in the work.

A. Ehmann, and staff, of 2112 Broadway, recently arranged an elaborate decoration for the Dressler-Knoliowell wedding at Islip, L. I. For the occasion, an arbor was erected on the lawn, which the decorators covered with oak leaves and clematis, and in this the ceremony took place. In the house decoration, many Premier and Ophelia roses were used.

The matter of high rents is bothering florists as well as other business men of this city. It is now not unusual to see on a store front: "Must move; leased over our heads." One retailer florist, who had to move over three months ago, secured a temporary location, but has not yet found a permanent one.

Another man—probably a scientist—has come forward to state that the anthracite coal of Pennsylvania will be exhausted in 75 years. The old timer that always predicts an early and hard winter, has not yet been heard from, but doubtless he is on his way.

N. J. Lales, president of the Greek-American Florists' Association, is visiting his old home in Greece, and is not expected home until October. During his absence, Mrs. Lales and Miss Margaret Vreeland, assisted by a young man, are conducting the business.

We have been pleased to see W. S. Allen, one of the pioneer wholesalers of this city, again at his store after a long illness. During his absence, the business has been ably managed by his daughter, Mrs. Margaret A. Martin.

The New York Floral Co., with stores in this city and Yonkers, has purchased from Albert E. Holburn, of New Rochelle, N. Y., a three-story brick building and will open another store at that location about November 1.

John S. Donato, a young florist, whose creditable and adventurous war record of 18 months has already been mentioned in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, has opened a retail store at 813 Fourth avenue, Brooklyn.

James Markatos, who has a retail store at the corner of Madison avenue and 86th street, has taken advantage of summer dullness to have a large section of plate glass installed on both fronts.

Charles H. Brown and wife, of Broadway and 86th street, are home after spending the summer at various resorts. Mrs. Brown, who has had a long period of ill health, is now much improved.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

Jack Trepel, of the well known Trepel family of florists, has opened three new stores in Brooklyn. They are located on Jamaica, Parkside and DeKalb avenues.

Herman Berkowitz, of Malandre Brothers' staff, is the proud father of a third son. Joe Supplee, designer for the store, says that he has been picked for godfather.

In the absence of Peter Theopine, of the Boulevard Floral Co., who is in Europe, the men in charge of the store have given its interior a thorough painting and decorating.

N. Scoffes, of Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, whose store was badly damaged by fire several months ago, has it in good shape again and has resumed business.

Mrs. W. H. Long has just returned from a six weeks visit to her parents, whose home is at the beautiful Bras d'Or Lake, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia.

Clarence Slinn, an active man in the wholesale trade, has taken a part of Walter F. Sheridan's store, 133 West 28th street.

George J. Polykranas is showing a varigated pink and white bouvardia, which is a novelty in this market.

Exceptionally fine stock of Columbia and other roses are now being received by Traendly & Schenck.

A. J. Anderson of Manhasset, L. I., is bringing in a large stock of good dahlias.

I. Goldstein is handling a fine quality of red gladioli.

A. F. F.

COLUMBUS, O.—T. D. Long, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was a recent visitor.

DECORAH, IA.—W. T. Symonds & Sons are preparing to build two new houses, three old ones having been torn down to make room for the improvements.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—The fall show of the San Diego Floral Society will be held as part of the county fair, September 24-27. No fee is charged for making entries.

COMMENTING on the Co-operative Seed Growers Association, recently organized by California seed growers, one well known merchant says that while co-operation is the order of the day, it seems difficult to make it operative and profitable.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December were steady, September 15, with cash offered at $30.25. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.30, September $5.60, October $5.55, December $5.60 and March $5.70.

Onion Seed From Canary Islands.

The American consul at Teneriffe reports, under date of August 26, that 70,000 pounds of onion seed have been invoiced at that consulate for shipment to the United States during this year. Much of this was from last year's crop, owing to the fact that there was a large decrease in purchases by the United States last year.

Brown Employes in Aerial Flights.

The employes of the A. J. Brown Seed Company, Grand Rapids, Mich., recently enjoyed a novel outing, consisting of aerial flights over the city, reaching an altitude of 2,000 feet, 24 persons participating. The plane was one of the Curtis models owned by the Chicago Air Line Transit Company, piloted by Capt. Price Hollingworth.

Seed Report From Holland.

Sluis & Grott, Enkhuizen, in their crop report issued in August, say that the steady advance in wages, fertilizers, etc., which continues, does not indicate a decrease in prices in the near future. Plantings, in general, are anything but extensive, and in consequence of the curtailment during the previous years, acreage of some varieties will be very small, if not failures. There are some seeds on the market that have not been grown from reliable stock, and precautions are urged in making purchases. Government restrictions have, for the greater part, been removed, and it is expected that the export business will resume its normal status. The weather during the spring has been very unfavorable, retarding development of biennials, although the winter did little harm.

Dwarf beans have been planted on a small scale, in some varieties the acreage being very small, and often the stand is far from favorable, some crops being quite poor and, in general, very late. Everything now depends on the weather during September and October. Plantings of English beans appear sufficient, with a fair stand, although many fields show unfavorable conditions, indicating a small yield. In beets, an average crop can hardly be expected, as all varieties seem to have been put out in a small way. The acreage of Brussels sprouts and borecole is also limited, but the stand is rather satisfactory. Cabbage stood the winter very well. Autumn weather was unfavorable, and owing to the doubtful situation, growers did not transplant to the full extent, with the result that acreages were considerably smaller than at first intended. Plants started to flower again in some sections, so that only a medium crop may be looked for. Carrot plantings of the better early and half-early varieties are about normal. Of the late sorts, the acreage seems sufficient for requirements. With an unsatisfactory spot here and there, the stand generally seems fairly good. Of the very small acreage of chervil planted, a sufficient crop is promised. With chicory occupying small areas, and a lack of sunshine, the crop will be small. An average yield of cornsalat may be expected from the small acreage planted. Normal plantings of cress promise a fairly good yield. Cucumber, in the principal varieties, appears sufficient. Lack of sunshine has been a retarding element, making it impossible to estimate the yield. Leek occupies a small area, and estimates as to prospective yield, are not available. Lettuce has also been planted on a very small scale. The acreage devoted to Dutch yellow and Blood-red flat onions is small. Other varieties are practically little grown. Parsley and parsnip both show rather good condition, but the plantings of both are small. Garden peas are limited to a small acreage. Of round peas, the planting is considered ample, but the opposite is true of the wrinkled varieties. The stand is fairly satisfactory, but also below the average, and in some cases poor owing to bad germination. Purslain has been sown on a small scale, and has been affected by cold, moist weather. Of the small acreage of radish reported, part of which did not succeed, the yield will probably not be satisfactory. Savory is limited, below the average and very late. Sorrel, scorzonera and celery are normal and stands appear rather good. The acreage sown in rutabaga is not important. A moderate crop is promised, although some plants commenced flowering again. A proportinately small, but ample area of swisschard has been sown and the stand appears in good condition. Turnip occupies a very small area with a stand below the average.

Plantings of flower seeds have also been very limited. In the early part of the summer they suffered from continuous drought and later the low temperature and lack of sunshine contributed to somewhat backward growth. September weather conditions now control the situation.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

FULL report of the convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America will be found on page 465.

Corn Borer Hearing.

It having developed that 600 acres of corn have been destroyed in the past six weeks, a hearing on the proposed corn borer quarantine was held at the state house, Boston, Mass., August 28, the meeting being attended by entomologists representing 25 states in addition to other interested persons. An appropriation will be asked from congress for $2,000,000 to be made immediately available to fight this pest, which it is feared, if not combated vigorously, will spread greatly during the year and cause great damage.

It has been determined that the pest feeds on such cultivated garden and flower plants as celery, Swiss chard, green or string beans, in the pod, beets with top, spinach, rhubarb, entire plants of geraniums and cut blooms of dahlias, gladioli and chrysanthemums, in addition to corn, popcorn, oat straw and rye straw.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets for the period September 9-15, indicate that most lines were fairly steady, with the exception of potatoes, which declined under increasing supplies, general values falling 25 to 50 cents per 100 pounds. New Jersey sacked Giants were 50 cents lower at shipping points, ranging at close $2-2.15 per 100 pounds f. o. b. with similar decline in eastern consuming markets and closing range of $2-2.50. Maine Cobblers continue fairly steady at $2.70-2.75 per 100 pounds sacked in New York and Boston. Minnesota Early Ohios declined to about the level of two weeks ago closing weak at $2.40-2.50 f. o. b., while carlots in Chicago declined sharply, closing at $2.30-2.40, compared with $3-3.25 last week. Idaho Rurals declined 75 cents in Chicago, closing at $2.85. California sacked white stock was firm at $2.25-2.50 f. o. b. shipping points. Onions showed disposition to strengthen slightly. Sales of best yellow stock are reported at $3.50-3.75 per 100 pounds f. o. b. in western New York producing sections. Eastern sacked yellow stock ranged fairly steady at $3.25-4 in jobbing markets. Middlewestern yellow and red stock advanced 25 cents, ranging $3.25-$4 in mid-west markets. California yellow onions strengthened to a range of $2.15-2.25 f. o. b. shipping points and reached $3.50-3.75 in eastern markets. New York Domestic cabbage settled to a range of $40-45 per ton bulk f. o. b. shipping points, closing with firm tone. Range in various terminal markets was $40-50. Wisconsin and Minnesota cabbage held about steady at $40-60 per ton bulk. Colorado cabbage weakened to $1 per 100 pounds cash to growers in producing sections and declined to a range of $2-2.50 per 100 pounds in consuming markets, although St. Louis strengthened to $55-60 per ton.

Pres. Vegetable Growers' Ass'n of America.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Glen Cove, N. Y., September 10 with President Adler in the chair. Fred Hewlett, Edward Martin, John Nevin, John McPhee and Peter Smith were elected to active membership. Five applications were received. The judges appointed for the exhibits, William Churchill, Thomas Scott and Chas. Young, made the following awards: Frank Petroscia, first for 12 potatoes and three heads of celery; G. W. Wyatt, first for one outdoor melon; Wm. Milstead, cultural certificate for three heads of celery. William Noonan was apointed manager of the dahlia show to be held at Locust Valley, October 2-3, and Harry Goodband was named as manager of the fall show scheduled for October 30-31. A letter of sympathy was ordered sent to the family of the late James Elmslie, a charter member of the society. The competition at the next meeting, October 8, will be 12 cactus, 12 peony-flowered and 12 decorative dahlias, any color. At the conclusion of this meeting, a "welcome home" party will be tendered members who gave their services in the world war. HARRY GOODBAND, Cor. Sec'y.

Pittsburgh.

HEAVY OVERSUPPLY BURDENS MARKET.

The local market is now suffering with the worst glut in years, especially in asters and gladioli. Dahlias have also played their part in flooding the market, with small chance of relief as long as warm weather continues, dealers not being able to handle them in quantity and buying only enough for immediate needs. In asters, there is no sale for any but the best, and shorts and culls are a total loss. Gladioli are being received from the north and the quality is fine. American Beauty is in lighter supply, but the demand has also diminished. Of the other roses, Columbia, Russell and Ophelia are the favorites, with Francis Scott Key and Prima Donna close contenders for second place, while the Killarneys, Sunburst and Maryland move slowly. Carnation receipts are not heavy enough to make them a factor.

NOTES.

William Ussinger, formerly with the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and Clifford W. Brown, have been added to the sales force of the McCallum Co. The former will travel the middle-west territory, and the later will look after local business.

Randolph & McClements had two large wedding decorations this week, one in Greensburg, Pa., the other at Youngstown, O., bronze colored dahlias being used largely in carrying out the arrangements. M.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

ORANGE and grapefruit juice in carlots is being shipped north from Florida.

DURING the season just closed, 6400 cars of peaches were moved from points on the Central Georgia railroad. Shipments exceed those of last year.

HERBERT CHASE of Colorado, who has has just returned from France, says, "If I should put in a year taking lessons, I could learn to drink wine."

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Ralph D. Cornell and Theodore Payne, well known landscape architect and nurseryman, respectively, have formed a partnership.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—Francis W. Glenn, manager of the Saddler Bros. Nurseries, of this city, dropped dead in Chicago, September 13. The deceased had been in the nursery business in New York and Illinois for the past 30 years. A widow survives.

American Association of Nurserymen.

It is announced that John Watson, 400 Nassau street, Princeton, N. J., former president of the association, has accepted the executive secretaryship.

E. F. Rockwell retired from the management of the market development movement September 1, and the office maintained by him in New York is discontinued. Mr. Watson, who from the first has been a promoter of this movement, and who in consequence is familiar with it, has assumed its management.

Curtis Nye Smith severed connection with the association July 1. A credit and collection service, similar to that maintained by him, will, through an arrangement with the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, be available to members from Mr. Watson's office. Legislative matters will be passed upon by a representative and active committee, which Mr. Watson will assist whenever possible. His proximity to Washington will be an advantage in this.

Charles Sizemore now becomes assistant secretary and traffic manager, though for the present his duties will remain substantially as before.

In taking the office as secretary, it is understood all interest heretofore held by Mr. Watson, in any nursery enterprise, has been relinquished.

Fruit Crop Estimates.

Apples.—The commercial apple crop for the United States is now estimated at 23,072,000 barrels as compared with a production of 24,724,000 barrels in 1918, according to the September report, as issued by the bureau of crop estimates through its fruit crop specialists. Improved conditions over the August report are noted in New York, especially in the Hudson valley section, western New York remaining practically the same. Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania show a slight increase over last month. A decrease in the Maine crop reduces the total prospects in New England from the August 1 condition. Most of the central states show a slight decline from the August report with the exception of Arkansas, which now promises one of the largest crops it has produced in recent years. The barrel apple crop promises 12,840,000 barrels as compared with 17,657,000 barrels, or 72.7 per cent of last year's barrel apple crop. The condition of the northwestern box apple crop continues good to excellent, with practically no change since the August report. The total commercial production of the box apple states promises to be 30,696,000 boxes, as compared with 21,309,000 boxes in 1918, or an increase of 44.1 per cent.

John Watson, Princeton, N. J.
Secretary American Association of Nurserymen

Peaches.—The peach crop of the United States is estimated at 29,461,000 bushels as compared with a final estimate in 1918 of 20,597,000 bushels, or 143 per cent of last year's crop. A decline in conditions from the August report is noted in New York, New Jersey, Michigan, Ohio, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Extreme heat and drouth in the southwest and brown rot infection in the eastern states are largely responsible for the decreased production in these sections. California is over-running earlier estimates as are also Washington and Idaho.

Pears.—The September estimate of the pear crop shows an increase over the August 1 condition. The California crop shows one point decline from the August report, but still promises the largest pear crop in the history of the state. Washington shows an increase, as well as New York and Michigan. The total United States crop is now estimated at 8,425,000 bushels, as compared with 7,589,000 in 1918, or an 836,000 bushel increase in production over last year.

Liquid Hydrocyanic Acid Fumiga tion.

The use of liquid hydrocyanic acid, readily accepted by fumigators, as a new means of fumigation of citrus trees, first used on a commercial basis in 1917, and which has since rapidly come into favor, is the subject of Bulletin No. 308, recently published by the University of California agricultural experiment station at Berkeley, under the title, "Fumigation With Liquid Hydrocyanic Acid."

The place where the greatest concentration of gas occurs under the tent from the liquid, is practically the reverse of that from the pot or portable generator. With the former method, the most effective killing is at the bottom of the tree, while with the latter, the most effective place is at the top. Aside from the scale insects, more than 75,000 ladybird beetles have been used in the comparative tests as an index of results. The use of these has given discriminating data concerning the diffusion of gas under the tent, as well as on the efficiency of the different methods of fumigation, and these data have been verified by extensive field tests.

While there has been a discrepancy of 10 or 15 per cent in the actual amount of gas used through the liquid method, the results in the field have not indicated any important difference on the scale insects. When the results in all parts of the tree are considered, it is necessary to use about 20 cubic centimeters of liquid hydrocyanic acid (96 or 98 per cent) to equal one ounce of sodium cyanide as given in the schedules of dosage now in practical use. Units representing 20 cubic centimeters may therefore be substituted for the ounces, and the atomizing machine should be graduated to deliver 20 cubic centimeters for each ounce called for in the schedules.

HAVE TIGHT GREENHOUSES BY USING

IT retains its elasticity indefinitely, prevents breakage of glass, and does not crack or peel. Withstands heat, cold and dampness. Will adhere to wood, iron, stone, etc. Beds perfectly, and lasts as long as the glass lasts. If the glass breaks, Elastic Glazing Composition can be cut out without injury to the wood, as it remains flexible. Can be painted over immediately, or left without paint.

PEONY PROFITS OF AN ACRE.

William A. Peterson, Chicago, in the Bulletin of the American Peony Society, Gives Valuable Information Regarding Roots, Flowers, Soil and Labor.

Factors Necessary to Profits.

I do not propose to discuss isolated cases of extraordinary profits obtained by producing new varieties of peonies or even by cornering the market on a rare sort. In fact stocking up heavily on some new "queen bee" of a peony show frequently finds the grower, five years later, offering the same at 20 per cent of the original cost. There may be a dozen American growers whose extensive catalogues and large advertising of several hundred varieties make their profit on their acre of soil a bonanza.

There are just two ways to make money out of peonies—either by selling the roots or the flowers. Leading up to the subject of profits, let us consider the three contributing factors thereto; first, the root; second, the soil; and third, the labor. The roots should be young and healthy. If divisions are used have them cut from plants not over four years old and remove all but two strong eyes to each piece of sound tuber. The use of one or two year old plants saves some time, but on a given investment the divisions are more economical.

Most people prefer blooms of solid colors, and mass together in lawn planting, or in bouquets, those of the same shade. The number of varieties carried, therefore, depends on the amount of land available, as one must cut enough blooms of a kind to make a shipment worth while, and furnish enough similar material to carry out a decorative color scheme. For example, a florist might want 500 Eugenie Verdier, the famous "baby pink," for a reception. The possible range of varieties comprise four very distinct colors; namely, white, light pink, deep pink, and red, which is the usual classification adopted for exhibitions and by the cut flower trade. In each of these four classes are three well defined blooming periods, the early, midseason and late. This makes 12 sections to be represented, as the goal set before each grower in selecting his varieties, and testing out the sorts to finally grow. Ultimately one may find it necessary to carry two absolutely indispensable sorts in some sections.

Choice of Varieties Important.

This building of a master list, into which each tested variety must fight its way by sheer demonstrated worth, is very absorbing. In comparing the painstaking records which we annually make, we sometimes find an outstanding variety, like Madame Forel, should be finally dropped, because other kinds have superseded it. In my personal study, in order not to be too exacting, and give new varieties every chance, I have really seven colors to divide the sorts into, viz.: 1. paper white, 2. cream or yellow, 3. blush or delicate flesh, 4. light or medium pink, 5. deep pink, and rose, 6. red, 7. crimson and deep red. In this way we have tried out some 1,400 varieties and at the present time are carrying less than 80.

Recommending varieties for other localities is not a very safe proposition, and I shall only give a few notes on how certain sorts conduct themselves at our nursery. We have discarded Meissonier because of its crooked stems; Madame Emile Galle, because of having no low lateral leaves, which prevents cutting it with a long stem, whereas, Octavie Demay, a dwarf-growing delicate pink, admits of cutting with a fairly good stem without injuring the plant, and is a wonder. So far, with us, the prize-winning Jubilee has a very weak stem. Golden Harvest is one of the mixed colored kinds that florists cannot send on a definite color order, unless the customer knows it by name.

Madame Crousse is tender in our climate and often skips a season in blooming. Because Richardson's Rubra Superba has proven very shy, we no longer carry it, while Richardson's Grandiflora is all that its name implies, and a very free bloomer besides. This is one of those unusual sorts that come into bloom over a long period, so one must have a good many plants to cut from to get a fair quantity of flowers at any given time.

Adolphe Rousseau is a wonderful "black," but too loose, and shows the yellow stamens too much. The greatly talked-of pink, Lady Alexandra Duff, is on the same order. Single blooming varieties attract some, but are not very suitable for shipping. La Tulipe is objectionable in bud, as the florists call it a "candy bud," whereas, the bud of Kelway's Venus, leaves nothing to wish for.

No matter how fine a sort may ultimately develop on the plant, if in the early stages of opening it is likely to "water-log," like Charlemagne, it is not worth carrying. Probably more Delicatissima are used at June weddings than any other light pink sort. The most popular selling red is Felix Crousse, with its perfect bomb shape and large guard petal, which always indicates a good storage variety.

Many will be surprised that we have finally dropped Edulis Superba. It does so well in many places, but on our records which we have kept annually since 1888, it is not nearly as dependable as M. Jules Elie, and generally not more than a day earlier. In some quarters Madame Ducel is grown, but with us, it is smaller and so similar in shade and time of blooming to M. Jules Elie, that we do not need it. We notice an increasing emphasis laid on the desirability of the fragrant varieties.

Soil.

Having settled what roots to carry, we will now discuss the best soil conditions. The soil should be rich, deep, well drained and with plenty of sunshine. For root propagation, a loose loam makes the tubers admit of better dividing, but the heavier soil, with even clay subsoil, produces the best blooms. Not only plenty of well rotted manure before planting should be plowed in, but also an annual mulch thereafter in the fall, but not covering the top of the crown or touching the stem. Pigeon, sheep or cow manure, and even some hard-wood ashes, make the best fertilizer for our prairie soil. Peonies are such gross feeders that a large quantity of fertilizer, if worked in thoroughly, can be well taken care of, but no manure should ever touch the roots. For most favorable results, there should be plenty of water during the blooming period, and toward the end of August, to make large eyes for the next season. Some of the foregoing remarks might be classified as labor rather than soil.

Labor.

The planting should be done during the early part of September, in rows three feet apart by a foot between plants down the row. In two years' time, if the bed is to stand for blooming, every other plant should be lifted, divided and planted elsewhere. If there is any question of the plants having any stem disease, during the month of September, cut off the old leaf tops level with the ground, and burn them up. The surest method of keeping the roots free from disease is to dig out and destroy every large plant among blooming ones that has no flowers; in fact, we have made it a practice for years, in all our standard sorts, of destroying, June 1, every peony plant two or more years old that has no buds. This avoids the possible spread of disease, and also prevents the perpetuating of shy blooming strains of peonies. As long as plants bloom, we need not worry.

PEONY FELIX CROUSSE.

The young shoots as they push up in the spring are quite beautiful and differ decidedly. At this stage of their development, we go over our fields and dig out and throw away every plant differing in appearance from others in the same variety. This gets rid of any possible mixtures, and is the last check in our system of keeping every plant true. I may be pardoned in mentioning here our ten-year old, unique guarantee of giving three for one for every plant blooming untrue to description.

Every three weeks, from May to September, we run a horse cultivator down every row, and just before freezing up, a "V" shaped potato plow to trench a furrow to draw the water away from the crown. Sufficient hand-hoeing during the summer must be done to keep the land free from weeds.

The labor of marketing the roots is mostly done in September, which is the proper time to move peonies. It is preferable for customers to do their own dividing as then the cut surfaces are fresh and wither less when put into the ground. However, many purchasers do not know how, and for that matter, we ourselves are often surprised at the poorly cut plants we sometimes receive. After digging, the tops are at once cut off, which prevents the roots withering, and in this dormant condition they can travel safely for several months. In all handling of the roots, great care should be taken to not injure or break off any of the eyes.

Marketing.

Regarding the marketing of peony blooms, long straight stems are essential. but the cutting must leave the plant to grow the balance of the summer with at least one, and better two, lateral leaves on each stalk left standing. Where every stalk has a bud, it is a good plan when disbudding the side buds for the cut flower trade, to also roll off a terminal bud on one or two of the weakest stalks, and thus give the plant more leaf area with which to breathe. The disbudding of all lateral buds, when the size of a pea, makes the terminal bloom develop larger. Just at what stage of unfolding to cut a bud, depends on the variety and how soon it is expected to open. Several carloads of peony blooms come annually to Chicago before Memorial day from points fully 600 miles away.

As soon as the stalks are cut, and most of the lateral leaves stripped off in order to give more of the sap remaining in the stem to the bud, they are gathered together in bundles of 13 of the same variety and size of bud. In units of 13 they can be sold either by the dozen or the hundred. The buds cut, when the dew is on them, carry better, but if they are to be wrapped in paraffiin or other paper, the petals must be thoroughly dry. If possible, it is a good plan after the bundles are tied up, to stand the stems in water for an hour before shipping in boxes.

For the benefit of those who want peony blooms much later than their normal season, and really one of the recent developments of this industry; it has been found that certain varieties when cut in bud, will keep in cold storage for six to 10 weeks, and upon their being taken out, will unfold in all their usual glory.

We have now followed our lady-love from the cradle to the grave. The subject under discussion naturally eliminated many other interesting features pertaining to the peony, all equally fascinating, such as the ancient history and use of the peony; the renaissance of its culture in Europe; some of its famous hybridizers; a comparative study of the different shapes and types of its blooms; the various styles and shapes of its petals; a classification of its fragrance; the duration of the individual bloom when cut and also on the plant.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Window and Porch Boxes.

There is nothing adds so much to the appearance of the dwelling as well cared for boxes of flowering and foliage plants and vines, and there has never before been such an opportunity to push their sale and help along their popularity as this season. In every large community, there has been an unprecedented demand for dwellings of all kinds, from the small city houses to the larger suburban residences with ample yards or more pretentious lawns. All of the suburban properties are furnished with porches, which almost require decoration such as these boxes of flowering plants afford. While in some sections of the country, their value in decorative effects is becoming recognized, and their use more general, there is still a very wide field in which their sale could be pushed to great advantage.

WINTER WINDOW-BOX OF EVERGREENS.

Years ago, John Burton, of Philadelphia, Pa., pointed out the immense benefit to the trade of the introduction of the Crimson Rambler rose, which when in blossom, was the most showy of all flowering plants, and at once created a desire in all who saw them to have plants for themselves. In their way, window and porch boxes are as striking and decorative as the rambler roses, and have the great advantage of lasting the entire season. Each well-grown box or other arrangement, will, with their perfection of bloom, create a desire in the householder across the street, around the corner or in the next block, to fix up his porch in like manner.

If all florists in every community would get together and agree to push window and porch boxes, or without such unity, each determine to make these a feature of his business, their use would soon become general. What a wonderful difference it would make in the appearance of the beautiful residences everywhere, if the sale of these boxes was only doubled. Such a condition is easily possible by a little extra effort on the part of the trade in encouraging civic pride to make their's "a city beautiful." This outward display cannot help but instill a greater love for flowers, which will extend to a desire for them in the house when their beauty outside has passed.

There is a splendid opportunity to follow up the bright colors of the summer with the evergreens of winter, which in their way, are just as showy and decorative during the cold, bleak months. While all this is very desirable, particularly from the view point of the florist, it will not come about by itself. Here and there some ambitious householder may force an order on the surprised dealer, but the fact that such an opportunity to beautify their homes exists, is foreign to most of them. Flower boxes must be demonstrated and sold just like victrolas, pianos, automobiles, etc. Three-fourths of the daily papers are taken up in advertisements of articles that people know all about. They are not being informed but just reminded.

The trade can put this across the same as many other things for their benefit, if they will make a noise loud enough to be heard across the street, but with many the whisper is so faint that it does not reach even the front door of the shop, and the throngs go by without an inkling of the good things awaiting them within.

Dahlias.

There are seasonable flowers for every month in the year, a period when some particular blossom is at its best. The time has now arrived for the dahlia, which for the next month, will be at its height, and provides, in quantity, the most showy and conspicuous of all the fall field flowers. Of late years, there has been wonderful improvement in the dahlia. The cactus and show varieties have been augmented with new and improved forms and colorings, some of them being tremendous in size. By disbudding, higher grades have been made possible, produced on long stems, until they are almost as effective as many of the chrysanthemums.

The out-of-town trade worked up by wholesale dealers in all the large cities, has necessitated new methods in packing and shipping, that have been so perfected, that flowers have been forwarded on 24-hour trips, and arrived in perfect condition.

The best practice is that of flowers being only sold on order, for varieties desired, which are forwarded to the grower, who packs each consignment carefully, delivering it to the dealer, who ships it out of town or transfers it to his local customers in the original boxes. The corrugated board boxes are packed three or four in a lath crate, making very light packages, yet sufficiently strong to carry safely.

Dahlias should never be allowed to remain out of water subject to drafts, which soon wilt them, and from which they never completely recover.

There is no flower which can be handled with more profit to the retailer than the dahlia. They are large and showy, and at the same time, many of them so refined in appearance, that if properly presented, they command prices that return a very good profit. In their great variety of form and coloring, they are available for all kinds of floral work. Very beautiful table decorations are made with the pinks, reds, and various shades of orange, combined with autumn leaves and other foliage. Plateaus of oak leaves as a foundation for the solid color or other combined shaded effects, are quickly arranged, are very decorative, and will maintain a fresh appearance for any evening's entertainment.

For the house wedding, they can be artistically arranged, there being shades of color to fit in with the decorative scheme of the halls or various rooms. When placed either in bowls, vases or vase baskets, they can be stood about on the mantels, on various side pieces of furniture, or with southern smilax arranged over doorways, around mirrors and on the banister railings of the stairways. The choice select grades, with long stems, are seen to advantage in tall floor vases, set in groups of palms, being almost as effective as chrysanthemums. Beautiful wedding bouquets are also made from selected flowers.

The dahlia held a most exalted position last season, when having the market for a time almost to itself, it was used in high class funeral work to an extent never thought possible. Wreaths and sprays in artistic arrangement, composed entirely of these flowers, relieved with various greens or autumn leaves, were considered as choice and beautiful as any other combination. They were also often the choice for the box of flowers sent in acknowledgment, or to cheer up the sick friend at home or in the hospital.

The dahlia requires somewhat careful handling. They should never be crowded or massed together in jars or vases, so that the flowers crush one another, or so low that some of the blooms are covered with water. They must not be left lying about on counters or tables, as they soon wilt, or if in water and subject to drafts, they suffer in the same way.

It is important to keep the supply about equal to the demand, so that little is left to carry over from day to day. Orders for cut flowers should always be filled with that day's stock, never with flowers of the day before.

Handsome window displays can be featured with choice varieties of dahlias; one day, all pink, another red, and again orange shades. These arranged with autumn leaves, or plants of high colored crotons and ferns, will make very effective decorations. Special sales of boxes of a dozen flowers, a number made up, and others empty, but tied up and decorated with a few autumn leaves, golden rod and a dahlia, as if ready to go out, will, with a price card, make a profitable showing.

Small vase baskets in shades to harmonize with the red, pink or orange, enough to fill the window, a number of them hanging, to occupy the space above, one color one day, another the next, will be found very attractive, and with the silent salesman price card, bring the people in.

A good plan to liven things up a bit, and bring in a lot of visitors, is to arrange an exhibition of varieties. Growers will furnish quite a collection, all named, which if nicely arranged, will prove a good drawing feature. Cards of invitation should be sent to the store's list of customers, who should also find a good selection of house plants and other seasonable stock.

By arrangement with the growers, orders might be taken for any of the varieties for plants to be delivered next spring at the proper time to set them out. Some storekeepers find this very good business. It has also been used by the department stores.

WINTER WINDOW-BOX OF EVERGREENS.

"Say it With Flowers" to Pershing.

The florists of Washington, D. C., took advantage of the Pershing parade to boost the slogan, "Say It With Flowers," at the same time performing a rather appropriate public service in furnishing the flowers with which to say to General Pershing that the people of the national capital welcomed him and his victorious army back to the United States. The idea was conceived that it would be rather clever if the florists donated from their stocks, sufficient flowers to make a pathway of blooms along the line of march. To make it more general, an appeal was made to the people to send flowers from their own gardens to the committee looking after the commercial end of the plan. Every retailer, wholesaler and grower made an offering, and the result was that the entire line of march from the capitol to the end of the route, more than 19 long blocks away, was showered with flowers by girl scouts. While dahlias predominated, all sorts of blooms were to be seen on the street. This was the first time that such a plan has ever been tried out. A big truck of C. L. Jenkins & Son, tastily decorated, and bearing the slogan, "Say It With Flowers," traveled up and down the route, distributing the baskets to the girls. The slogan went well with the thousands of people lined along the curbs and in the big grandstands and bleachers, and as a consequence, the truck and its occupants were cheered on numerous occasions. The appearance of the vehicle on the street was the opening event in the publicity programme of the Washington florists for the flower week to be held in November. There is little doubt but that the slogan will be remembered by the people who saw it. It is catchy—and this will help out when it comes to planting publicity later on. Those who were active in getting the float on the street were Z. D. Blackistone, George C. Shaffer, Lloyd Jenkins, O. A. C. Oehmler, J. Harper Hetherington, Adolph Gude, Jr., Otto Bauer, Albert Schnell and others.

Next Week In the Flower Shop.

Gladioli and asters are still quantity flowers and can be used to advantage in all spray and design work. The fluffy Comet asters are not so stiff stemmed as the others, but their light feathery appearance lends an elegance to many arrangements. A casket cover of either white or purple shades of this flower has a downy appearance not possible with any other.

Is there a mirrored mantel in the store? This wall decoration is a feature of many shops. At nearly all times, this shelf should be decorated with seasonable flowers, so arranged as to make an attractive display that visitors will notice and very likely talk about. Small vases on a rod, or otherwise suspended half way around the glass, filled with short stemmed flowers, will add to the arrangement.

A good sized oval cheval floor mirror, standing by itself, or in front of a screen or with a palm or two as a background, is a good store fixture.

WINTER WINDOW-BOX OF EVERGREENS.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" TRUCK IN PERSHING PARADE, WASHINGTON, D. C., Filled With Flowers, Donated by Florists of the Capital, Which Made a Pathway of Blooms Along the Nineteen Blocks of the Line of March.

Ladies, and also gentlemen, like to look at themselves, particularly after they have pinned on a corsage or boutonniere.

It is not too early to begin to push things a bit. People will take notice, and are quick to see that there is something out of the common in the window. Many stop and look, and some will come in to ask questions. All kinds of flowers are now to be had at comparatively low prices, particularly if the buyer takes a chance on a fairly good sized quantity. Feature a window of Premier; label it "the latest new rose." Arrange a basket or two of this variety artistically; put up several boxes of one dozen each, with a price card; tie up several empty boxes of the same size, with a little outside decoration. A window, tastefully arranged with these various articles, will likely dispose of a lot of the flowers, and bring new faces into the store, who will want to know something about this wonderful variety.

Plan frequent changes in the window, and as far as possible, have the stock ready the night before, so as to make a rapid change and catch the crowd going down town. It should be finished and out of the way before the shopping commences. Always have the explanatory cards printed and ready, as they are the speaking, and at the same time, silent salesmen on duty until taken off the job.

The Washington, D. C., florists' club started something in its inauguration of a "Say It with Flowers" week, October 6-11, to open up the season with a grand hurrah. This capital idea should be taken up and pushed in every city in the land. Let every retail florist decorate the front of his store. Greens of all kinds are plentiful; boxwood or evergreens in tubs will ornament the sidewalk, and are salable as well. A display of ferns in various sizes will be attractive, and there will be fewer to take in at night. Go across the street; take a good look at the store, and plan out a decoration that will make it easily the most attractive and showy shop of any in the block. Make an enlarged slogan, "Say It with Flowers," a feature. If this is entered into in a co-operative spirit by all the firms in the various cities, it will give the business the greatest boom in its history. In some cities, they are planning an auto parade with all the cars decorated, for one day of the week, each car displaying conspicuously the national slogan, "Say It with Flowers." Each store's customers should be notified of this special "opening of the season" week, and invited to call and see the shop in its gala attire. There should be a good stock of the best the season affords, both in plants and flowers, all featured with accessories to look most salable. All branches of the business should work together to make this movement a grand success. It will be the most unique and beautiful trade display ever planned.

National Publicity for Flowers.

A few inquiries are coming along in regard to the billboard which our committees hope to supply very shortly, but there should be many more. Anyone, of his own recollection, can point to a score or more sites owned by florists, which would furnish grand opportunities for display of billboard signs; and, surely, there are many owners of such sites who would not for a moment scruple to pay the $50 asked for a sign, especially as such a sign ordered alone would cost about twice as much. The question has been asked whether anything besides the slogan may be painted on the sign. Yes. If a purchaser insists upon it, his name and address may appear on the sign as long as the slogan is left intact and entirely separate. A proper ruling as to this will be made at the meeting of our committees next month. Philip Breitmeyer, at the Detroit convention, said "Billboards furnish the best way of getting publicity that I know of, and I have worked out the problem for five years or more." On the same occasion, Chairman George Asmus said, "Imagine 5,000 of these billboards on the principal roads and highways, the railroads and in other places, and what it will mean for our slogan, and for our business! An expert on this line told me that we were the most fortunate people in the world—that we had an asset—in these sites that would cost outsiders hundreds of thousands of dollars to get, as we already had the sites. I want to say that I have 200 orders for these signs right now from the men I have talked to about them." The men Mr. Asmus referred to were mostly located in Cook County, Illinois.

Shall Illinois become the prime mover in this most excellent project, when there are as many or more sites available in other states? This question is put to all these florists in other sections who are known to have sites, and who it is reasonable to suppose, would, in their own interests, be willing to use them for this laudable purpose. Our committees would like to hear from these florists without delay, as arrangements for supply must be completed at the meeting of the committees in Buffalo, October 15. Just notify your secretary whether one or more signs could be placed.

Every day now brings warm congratulations on the success of our campaign. The William Roethke Floral Company, Saginaw, Mich., in sending in an additional subscription, writes "The campaign has helped us, and we cheerfully pay, as business has been better this year than in former years." That is the right spirit—a willingness to pay for benefits received. More particularly is it appreciated when we think of the many who have not yet even sent in a first subscription. Often our personal representatives tell us, that when obtaining a subscription, a florist will say: "Yes, I have been intending all along to subscribe." We do not doubt it, but why should good intentions be prolonged to such a point when it is so easy to sit down, write and mail a cheque? We need the money to carry on the work—without it we must stand still. As W. W. Gammage, of London, Ont., said, when he announced at the convention, his promise that within two months he would swell the Canadian subscription to the fund with $1,000 additional. "Just think. The man who subscribes $10 a year, is only giving 20 cents a week. What does that amount to weekly? We throw more than that away in cigars every day—most of us, at least. Therefore, you who have not already subscribed, just consider that if you give $50 a year, it only amounts to a dollar weekly."

Why not get in line at once, and contribute whatever you think you can afford—make one, two, or three payments in a year, if it suits you better.

Opportunities in Plant Propagation.

Paper by Professor L. C. Corbett, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., presented at the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, 1919.

Our knowledge of plant propagation, and the factors limiting it, measures our ability to provide plant material for decorative and commercial uses. That such demands are well met you will say is attested by the extensive use of ornamentals, and by the great acreage of orchards and vineyards. Yes, we know how to propagate many plants; in fact, we know how to propagate most plants in one or more ways. Even a plant like horse radish, which has entirely lost its power of seed production, is extensively propagated vegetatively. We know many things about plants and plant propagation, but most of our knowledge of plant propagation is empirical, and some of it is not true.

For generations, we have been propagating plants from cuttings. The most of us think we know that a cutting must callus before it will root, and that the root develops from the callus, all of which is not true, but that in no way influences the success in propagating plants from cuttings. It merely indicates one of the great handicaps of our present and past work in horticulture. Plant propagation has developed as an art, has succeeded, has been self-satisfied, and many possessing great skill in the art, have considered their knowledge as a personal trade secret. This point of view has tended to foster and maintain the appentice system which prevails in England and on the continent. We have depended upon foreign sources, both for our propagators and for a considerable portion of our plant material. This, I believe, has tended to retard the extension of plant business in this country. It has certainly retarded the development of the art of plant propagation in this country, because investigators have not been induced to work in this field as a result of demands from the industries, as have many other branches of horticulture. It has retarded the introduction and improvement of valuable native plants, to which we must look for material to make beautiful wide stretches of our vast land, and to which the ordinary plants of commerce are not adapted.

These native plants present problems in plant propagation the same as do all other strangers and new comers. But beside the actual problems of propagation presented by wild plants worthy of introduction, the vast stretches of territory encompassed within the confines of the United States, and the great diversity of soil and climate represented within this domain, present problems of plant adaptation which all students of horticulture recognize, but which, I am sorry to say, have not received the attention they should. The only attempt at a systematic study of the adaptability of the commercial ornamentals to the great plains, and to the intermountain area of the country, and that is by no means a comprehensive study, is one jointly carried on by the forest service and the bureau of plant industry. While this study is more comprehensive than any heretofore undertaken, it is necessarily confined to forest ranger stations in the national forest, and to the limited range of species at the command of the bureau of plant industry. This is one aspect of the problem of plant propagation for this country which should be given more attention. It will take years at best to solve it, but unless it receives systematic attention at the hands of investigators and members of the trade, little worth while can be accomplished. Yet there is no information of greater value to the trade than accurate knowledge regarding the territory to which species and horticultural varieties are adapted. Many costly errors are annually made for lack of this knowledge, and every error of this character stands out as a striking monument to our ignorance, and marks the interment of many orders for nursery stock. Not only should such adaptability work be encouraged and extended for plants on their own roots, but many varieties can be rendered valuable assets in regions where they do not thrive on their own roots by placing them on congenial adapted roots. In the field of fruit culture there is no more interesting or vital problem. In some regions, the whole problem of fruit culture is involved in the adaptability of a stock. The vinifera grape industries of France and of the Pacific Coast are striking examples of what stock adaptation means to horticultural industries. Apple culture has been retarded in the northern section of the great plains area because we have no satisfactory hardy roots. The cultivation of fruits and ornamentals are both retarded in the irrigated as well as the semi-arid sections because many plants of value elsewhere are not alkali resistant.

Coordinate with the problem of plant and stock adaptability is the problem of congeniality. Here again, we are talking in a language without definite meaning, for no one knows what congeniality really is. We know that certain varieties and species unite easily and make permanent unions; such plants we say are congenial. We know, too, that certain plants work together with difficulty, that only a small percentage take, or that the unions are not good; the plants do not thrive and are as a rule short-lived. Such sorts are not congenial. In every region where adaptability problems require the use of stocks other than their own roots in order to render plants of value, there goes hand in hand with the adaptability this question of congeniality.

FLOAT OF HENRY F. MICHELL CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA., IN INDUSTRAL PARADE.

Drawn by Four Fine Percheron Horses, and with an Escort of Four Handsome Farmettes, it was Easily a Big Attraction in the Leading Event of Knights Templar Week.

Some day our nursery books will contain such entries as this:

Stocks for vinifera grapes—Phylloxera resistant stock, Hupestris St. George.

Phylloxera resistants adapted to alkali, adobe and sandy soils.

This, together with a list of varieties carrying the names of the stocks with which they are congenial as Muscat of Alexandria, congenial with Rupestris St. George, Lenoir, etc.

If one has adobe soil, and wishes to grow Muscat of Alexandria on a resistant root, it will be possible for him to determine that he must contract with his nurseryman to grow for him the desired number of plants in the proper combination of root and scion; that is, a stock congenial with Muscat of Alexandria, and at the same time adapted to adobe soil. Now that information in regard to such details as I have enumerated is being rapidly gathered, the practices of the trade should be modified to make plants carrying the combined good features available to the trade. This does not mean producing such material on a chance or speculation basis, but rather an order specifying the conditions to be met filed in advance so the plants can be grown to order. To a degree, such business methods are an innovation in the plant trade, but I believe the time is not far distant when the nurserymen and plantsmen, who desire to be of greatest service to the industries, will undertake to grow plants of a special character or combination on a contract basis.

I have said we have drawn our plant propagators chiefly from abroad. This is a natural result of the failure of the appentice system in this country and the tardy development of vocational institutions. Our colleges giving instruction in agriculture and botany should make it a point to train teachers for the vocational schools, which in in turn, will instruct the growing generation in the rudiments of the art of plant propagation. We should go one step further and request, as the nurserymen did, that these instructors give special courses in plant propagation. Such a request, made in good faith by so representative a body of plantsmen as the membership of the S. A. F., cannot help but produce an effect even greater than the offering of courses of instruction. It will, I am sure, stimulate investigation in this field.

The members of this society can be of great assistance to investigators in this field by putting up to them the problems that are of greatest interest and most pressing. The states, I am sure, will respond as far as their facilities permit in handling local problems, and the department of agriculture will give aid in the solution of regional and inter-state problems for which it has facilities.

The society can help in the solution of many of the problems of plant adaptation, by encouraging reports on new sorts from members, and by a committee to assemble and present such reports. There is a great mass of information in the possession of the membership of this society, and an effort should be made to assemble this information for the benefit of the industry, now that this country must depend more upon its own resources than ever before. A man possessing information which will be of value to the trade, but which, because of his environment, the possessor can not put into practice for the advantage of his fellows, should give such information to the press or to educational or investigational institutions in order that we may present to the American trade even a greater variety of plant material, of equal or better grade, than it has heretofore been offered.

Such an accomplishment is easily within the range of possibilities when the wealth of native material is considered, in connection with the fact that we have within the territorial limits of the United States a range of soil and climatic conditions which equal that of Europe from the Mediterranean to central Russia. No such opportunity has ever before been offered American plant propagators. It would be un-American not to grasp such an opportunity. Its possibilities are not all economic, for there is the possibility to broaden the love for and interest in things beautiful. Americans are no longer entirely consumed in the struggle for bread and meat; in addition, they desire and demand some of these things that go to make life worth while. It is in the work of increasing the interest of the public in things beautiful that the great opportunity of societies like this one rests. Much has been accomplished in teaching the value of cut flowers and decorative material, but much more can be accomplished. The work of our plant breeders, propagators, and introducers needs a little more publicity back of it to make it highly effective.

We have many individuals devoting their attention to plant breeding with great success, as the work of Dr. Van Fleet, E. G. Hill, and others amply proves. That we have the potential possibilities awaiting development in the field of plant propagation is illustrated more clearly and forcibly by one of the members of the trade, A. H. Hill, in his address January last before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society from which I quote:

"I was surprised, recently, when one of the editors of a horticultural paper said, 'Where are we going to get the patience, skill, and experience to grow stocks in this country?' Astonishing, such a statement as this, showing a lamentable lack of confidence in American enterprise, especially in view of recent American accomplishments in every line of activity.

"We have only to look back to the horticultural achievements of 30 and 40 years ago, when the Parsons Nurseries at Flushing, N. Y., were supplying the growers of Europe with choice, hardy varieties of conifers and rhododendrons, which are today, in many cases, the sorts grown in Europe for export to America. Thirty years ago, Robert Douglas, of Illinois, supplied the growers of Europe with a choice collection of American conifers.

"The United States department of agriculture, through the forest service, has established in various parts of the west, government nurseries for supplying young trees for reforestation. Each nursery has an annual output of several million young seedlings for forest planting. Eight individual states maintain nurseries for the growing of young trees to supply planting material for state controlled lands and distribution to property owners for forest planting.

"In recent years, fruit tree seedlings, to be used by American nurserymen for budding and grafting, have been produced on an extensive scale by nurserymen in Kansas. Upwards of 16,000,000 young roses have been grown annually by Ohio nurserymen. There are 15 commercial nurseries, making a specialty of the propagation of young conifers from seeds, cuttings, and grafts. A good assortment of young ornamental and flowering shrubs is being grown on a commercial scale by experienced propagating nurserymen through the east and central west.

"It is a matter of interest to many that the federal horticultural board has recently promulgated a very valuable protective measure to secure this country against depredations of European and Asiatic insect pests and diseases. While there are some objectors at present, we believe that eventually everyone will realize the wisdom of this action.

"It is preposterous to think of endangering our extensive horticultural, agricultural, forestry, and nursery interests, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, for a few thousands spent each year on imported nursery stock. It was only through quick, concerted action on the part of our department of agriculture that our American white pine forests were saved from utter destruction, by reason of the white pine blister rust which was imported on nursery stock from Europe.

"With all this energy being expended on the propagation of young stock, the American nurserymen are assured of a constant and increasing supply. There has already been established on the Pacific coast an extensive plant with over $1,000,000 invested for the culture of azaleas, bulbs, boxwoods, and other florists' forcing and decorative material which have heretofore been imported. I predict the next few years will see a number of decided changes, with American growers producing the stocks required for American needs, and the money which was sent to Europe will stay in America to build up and develop horticulture in our own country."

Mr. Hill has summed up the situation in a clear and forcible manner. Combined with this, there should go the work of education and investigation above mentioned to be carried on by the cooperation of state and federal agencies, and lastly, the society can do much to extend and popularize its own field and work by encouraging the amelioration and introduction of our own much neglected native ornamentals. I trust the society will find ways and means for encouraging each and every one of these worthy enterprises because of the great pleasure which will as a result come to thousands of our people as well as the profit which will accrue to the trade.

The opportunities in the field of plant propagation open to this society, briefly stated, are:

This society can act as a clearing house for the exchange of information on plant propagation among its members.

This society can assemble and publish information relating to the adaptability of plants to various regions and soil types.

This society can, through its publicity agents, do much to popularize native ornamentals worthy of introduction.

This society can, through cooperation with the educational and investigational institutions of the country, do much towards popularizing the work of instruction, as well as shaping the character of investigation in the field of floriculture.

We believe that this is an opportune time for the society to assume a leading role in such matters, not only because of the advantages that will come to the industry, but because of the satisfaction that will come to the public in general from more and better ornamentals.

The great field is among the owners of small and modest homes, both in the town and in the country, and now is the accepted time. Our motto should be, "Right forward into line—March."

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held at the City Club, New York, September 17. F. L. Atkins, chairman of the committee to outline a policy in regard to the establishment of rose test gardens, made a preliminary report. It was the opinion of the committee that the official rose test gardens should be established only in certain climatic zones. The department of agriculture at Washington is working on a zonal map of these sections. It was also the opinion of the committee that the American Rose Society should recognize any show gardens in public parks or public gardens, provided they are kept to a certain standard of excellence. S. S. Pennock, chairman of the committee appointed at the last meeting to formulate a plan for the dissemination of Dr. Van Fleet's seedlings, made a report of progress. He read a letter from Professor L. C. Corbett, of the United States department of agriculture, proposing such a plan.

It was voted to instruct the committee to arrange with the authorities of the department of agriculture at Washington for the testing of Dr. Van Fleet's seedlings in all the official rose test gardens of the society with a view to future dissemination.

The following committees were named by President Pyle and confirmed by the executive committee:

Central committee of the rose test gardens: J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; Dr. A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. A. Currey, Portland, Ore.; Charles E. F. Gersdorff, Washington, D. C.; Professor N. M. McGinnis, College Station, Texas.

Arlington, rose test garden, Washington, D. C.: Charles E. F. Gersdorff, Washington, D. C.; A. P. Greeley, Washington, D. C.; Miss Carrie Harrison, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Hartford rose test garden, Hartford, Conn.: J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; George A. Parker, Hartford: Alexander Cumming, Jr., Cromwell, Conn.

Cornell rose test garden, Ithaca, N. Y.: Dr. A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y.; D. E. Griffin Lewis, Syracuse, N. Y.: Charles G. Adams, Auburn, N. Y.

Portland rose test garden, Portland, Ore.: J. A. Currey, A. J. Clark and Alfred Tucker, Portland, Ore.

Rose Registration: Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; W. R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; George H. Peterson, Fairlawn, N. J.

It was moved and carried that a committee be appointed to foster in every way the cut-flower rose interests. The following committee was named and confirmed: W. R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.; Max Schling, New York; Henry Penn, Boston, Mass.

The report of the committee on rules and regulations governing the exhibition of garden roses was adopted.

Floriculture at Tennessee State Fair.

Although prizes were offered by the state fair association, there was not a single entry by the florists of Nashville at the annual event held in that city. There were, however, splendid displays staged by amateurs, both in plants and cut blooms, noteworthy being handsome ferns, geraniums and hanging baskets, as well as fine speciment roses, dahlias and asters. W. T. Stewart and E. M. Burke carried off several blue ribbons. The exhibit of the park commissioners was a most creditable one, most of the stock used coming from Centennial park. The decoration of the woman's building in which the display was made, was very effectively arranged, the memorial fountain offering a splendid center, around which were placed palms, ferns and large vases of cut cannas in the very perfection of bloom, showing the full length of stem. In the fountain, were several very beautiful specimens of Victoria Regina water lily, in four colors, pink, blue, red and white. These were planted and grown by the gardener of Centennial park.

McCallum Co's Dinner-Dance.

The McCallum Co., well known Pittsburgh, Pa., supply house, entertained its employes and their families, September 17, the occasion being another "general good time party" in the form of a dinner and dance at the Keystone Canoe club at Verona, Pa., those in attendance numbering more than 75 persons. The company has found that by mixing a little play with work, better results are obtained in the same amount of time, and that the work is more cheerfully done; in fact, the entire force works as one happy family. The rules adopted by the employes governing the evening's entertainment were as follows:

All employes will do as they please.

Employes will report any incivility on the part of customers.

Anyone coming to work before 10 a. m. will be discharged.

The firm will furnish free of charge, Mail Pouch, Camels, and Coca Cola.

Cut flowers will be furnished free of charge to all employes and their friends.

You will hereafter "work" the company four days a week instead of six.

Anyone wanting a raise can get it, by telling Mr. Boyd how much they want.

Employes will confer a favor by telling the management whether they intend to come to work the next day.

Do not drink the water from the hydrant. There is beer in the ice box.

DAHLIA EXHIBITION.

The exhibition of dahlias by the Horticultural Society of New York, September 20-21, was the best of its kind ever staged by this society. The number of exhibitors was not large, but they brought many varieties. A number of new sorts and seedlings were noteworthy.

Among the leading exhibitors were Mills & Co., commercial growers of Mamaroneck, N. Y., who took first prize for the largest and best collection, short stems, in the "open to all" competition, with A. E. Doty, New Haven, Conn., second. Mills & Co. took, in addition, three first and two second prizes, a bronze medal and several certificates.

Mrs. F. H. Allen, Pelham Manor, N. Y. (Jas Lenane, Gr.) took first for the best collection in the "non-commercial" competition, with F. D. Wheeler, Rye, N. Y. (J. F. Orr, Gr.), second. All told, Mrs. Allen took nine first prizes and one second. L. P. Hollingsworth, Mamaroneck, N. Y., took six second prizes. Other prize winners were: Mrs. C. H. Stout, Short Hills, N. J.; Thos. Skinner, Mamaroneck, N. Y., special for asters. Mills & Co. received a cultural certificate for a large red, named Paul Grample. George Schlagel, Brooklyn, N. Y. (S. J. Milosy, Gr.), received a certificate of merit for the new production named Mrs. George Schlagel. F. P. Quinby, White Plains, N. Y., exhibited singles, which received special mention. Mrs. T. Thomas, Short Hills, N. J., was awarded a certificate of merit and special mention. F. D. Wheeler received a special prize for a display of pansies.

There was a creditable attendance at the exhibition. The multiplication of varieties of dahlias—like the "making of books"—seems to have no end.

California Dahlia Society Show.

The fourth annual show of the Dahlia Society of California was held September 4-6 and was the most successful in the history of the society. President F. C. Burns announced that the attendance was beyond expectations. The exhibition was a wonderful riot of color and it would be difficult to surpass the general excellence of the displays. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. made a splendid show in the center of the hall and carried off the silver cup for the best general arrangement for effect. They made a fine showing of Dr. Tevis, their prize winner. They also staged Millionaire in great condition. Every thing that was worth while in dahlias was included in this exhibit. Large specimen Cibotium Schiedei were used here to great advantage. Frank Pelicano was in charge. The Bessie Boston Dahlia Farms showed a magnificent lot of blooms. They were of the greatest form and size and all were perfectly finished. The star attraction of this display was a vase of 50 blooms of their new seedling, Mabel Taft. This is one of the most promising dahlias seen here and its superb coloring attracts immediate attention. It is a sulphur orange center with outer petals of pastel pink. John Lewis Childs was another of the varieties that aroused much admiration. This is an orange tan, heavily striped and splashed scarlet with petals tipped white. John McLaren proclaimed it the best dahlia in the show.

Among the seed houses, the largest exhibit was that of C. C. Morse & Co., of San Francisco. This was arranged in a very attractive manner and contained an extensive collection of the best American and European novelties. This display was not entered for competition but was awarded a special prize by the judges for its general excellence. The California Seed Co. of San Francisco, had a large number of varieties which showed great cultural skill. This comprehensive exhibit was also awarded a special prize for its fine quality. The Fenton Dahlia Gardens had a beautiful showing of their best varieties and also made use of electrical effects in their exhibit to the greatest advantage. Louis Garabaldi staged a very creditable showing, his large vase of General Joffre being one of the features of the show. Bedford Bros. had an excellent exhibit and were well up among the prize winners. The Sea Cliff Dahlia Gardens, of which A. Hodgins is proprietor, was a consistent winner due to the general excellence of the blooms shown. Matador was especially admired. It is a very large decorative, pale salmon in color, and of wonderful substance. The Spencer Dahlia Gardens' exhibit was always the center of an admiring throng. Their new seedling to be introduced in 1920, Mrs. Edna Spencer, was the best thing in their display. Princess Pat, staged by the Star Dahlia Farm, was also the object of much admiration. R. McWhirter seems to have a promising novelty in this seedling. His exhibit won many first and second prizes.

Unusual interest was manifested in the "Garden Beautiful" exhibit sent by the inmates of San Quentin prison. The convicts were given bulbs last spring by the members of the society, and they certainly put up a wonderful exhibit for their first attempt. These flowers were all grown at the prison, and the transformation of a gloomy patch of ground behind prison walls into a beautiful horticultural area, is as inspiring as it is remarkable. The management of the entire show was in the capable hands of Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. The exhibition was a great success, financially and otherwise.

The Late Boniface Baumann.

Boniface Baumann, well-known grower of Niles Center, Ill., died Friday, September 19, at the age of 76, after an illness of a week. He was a florist at Niles Center for nearly 50 years, and of late was in business with his son, Herbert, which was conducted under the name of B. Baumann & Son, their specialty being carnations. He was highly respected in the community in which he lived, and leaves a wife and seven children: Mrs. Leo Weber, Mike, Matt, Frank, George, Edward, Herbert and Peter Baumann to mourn his loss. Herbert Baumann, who is confined to the St. Mary's hospital in Chicago, where he is receiving treatment for a broken blood vessel, near the heart, was unable to attend the funeral, which was held from the home to St. Peter's Catholic church the following Monday, with interment at St. Peter's cemetery. The funeral was largely attended, and floral offerings from the trade were much in evidence.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—The attractive new store of the Blossom Floral Co., at 110 West Wayne street, had its formal opening September 24, many visitors attending. Roses were given as souvenirs. Richard T. Blossom and Ruth Flick Blossom, the proprietors, announce that they will always have on display the best in flowers for all occasions where flowers are appropriate.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—The South Bend Floral Co. will move about October 1 to more commodious quarters at 122 North Michigan street.

CINCINNATI, O.—Gustav C. Mickley, formerly with the Hill-Heller Floral Co., will enter business for himself October 1 at 108 West Seventh street.

HOUSTON, TEX.—T. A. Pendarvis, of the firm of Boyle & Pendarvis, florists, is also a member of the sales force of the Houston Tire & Vulcanizing Company.

OKMULGEE, OKLA.—The Flower Shop, conducted by George W. Marshall, has been removed to 108 North Grand avenue. The new store is one of the finest equipped in the state.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Miss Lillian Bryant, who recently discontinued business at 1822 North Charles street, has opened the Chateau Flower Shop at North avenue and Charles street.

CINCINNATI, O.—A. J. Smith, a greenhouse proprietor of this city, has complained to the police that he was robbed of $5,000 worth of liquor, September 6, the property being stored in his establishment.

HUMBOLDT, IA.—The Ickes-Braun Mill Co., Chicago, has been given the contract to rebuild and enlarge the present range of the De Meester Floral Co., which when completed will be one of the most up-to-date in this section.

SEATTLE, WASH. — The Hollywood Gardens are now located in their new quarters at the corner of Second avenue and Stewart street. The store, with its new fixtures and up-to-date equipment, presents a fine appearance.

CLEVELAND, O.—The florists' club at its meeting September 8 elected the following officers for the ensuing year: H. P. Merrick, president; Frank Ritzenthaler, vice-president; George Bates, treasurer; James McLaughlin, secretary.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The establishment formerly conducted by Mrs. Kate Patterson at 306 West Saratoga street, has been purchased by J. M. Dassin, of Detroit, Mich., and is now being operated under the name of Quality Flower Shop.

RETAILERS say cold weather is needed to drive the flower buyers home.

BASKETS and other florists' supplies are said to be on the way from Europe in large quantity.

GREENHOUSE BUILDERS have been very busy all the year and unusual activity continues in this line.

A STATUE of Xochipilli, Aztec god of flowers, has been dug up by an American archeologist in a suburb of Mexico City, formerly the home of the Aztec race.

THERE are 6,300,000 automobiles now registered and the number is increasing at the rate of 100,000 per month, New York first, then Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

OPPORTUNITY still knocks at the doors of men—one firm of florists in a Chicago suburb made $60,000 the past season on an investment of less than $100,000.

War Takes Walsh Family.

A gardener named Walsh, of New Bedford, Mass., had four sons in the British army, and three daughters, ambulance drivers, also with the British. All joined the forces in Ireland, and all were killed. His wife, the only member of the family left, is in an asylum, through grief.

American Dahlia Society.

The American Dahlia Society held an interesting meeting at the Engineering Society building, New York, September 23, at which the outlook for the organization seemed very promising. The following officers were elected: Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., president. Vice-presidents: George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., north; George W. Kerr, Philadelphia, Pa., east; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y., Long Island; W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Colo., central west; Major M. F. Vanderbilt, Pacific Coast; Edward C. In conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York the society staged an excellent show, an account of which will appear in our next week's issue.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery at Buffalo.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery convention in Buffalo, N. Y., October 15-16, will be the most important meeting of retail florists ever held in this country. The great gain in membership the past year has been phenomenal. Secretary Pochelon states, that with the additions for the year 1919, the association now numbers over 1,000 active members, all co-operating with one another in securing and delivering orders.

Florists who attend this meeting of the brightest lights among the retailers of the country, will receive both inspiration and information that will be greatly to their advantage, not only in better selling of flowers by telegraph, but in all kinds of retail store management. There will be two days of business that has to do entirely with the retail store. All those who have attended F. T. D. conventions, declare they have received by far more pep and enthusiasm for the business at these meetings than at any trade gatherings. Retailers who desire to be up-to-date should, wherever possible, attend this meeting.

IMPORT PERMITS AMENDED.

The federal horticultural board, under date of September 15, 1919, has announced that Form 207-3, "Application for special permit to import nursery stock and other plants and seeds," has been issued, which will supersede Form 207-2, copies of which should be destroyed. Attention is called to several changes. Under the captions, "Novelty" and "Necessary Propagating Stock," there has been added Paragraph 4, which reads:

"State proposed method of propagation. (This information is especially needed for plants, the propagation of which is varied or unusual, but the information should be given as to all plants for which special permit is requested.)"

Attention is also invited to the bond, which it is now proposed to use. This bond has been changed from a two-year bond to one to continue from two to five years, depending on the kind and character of the stock, in the amount of $5,000, or in an amount equal to twice the invoice value of the stock if such value be less than $2,500, but in no case less than $100.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

ANNUAL MEETING AT NEW YORK.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the Chysanthemum Society of America, in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York, will be held in the Engineering building, that city, November 5-7, the business meeting of the society being announced for 8 p. m. on the evening of the first day.

In addition to the regular schedule of premiums, special prizes in 14 classes are offered, a list of which may be had upon application to the secretary, Charles W. Johnson, 2242 West 109th street, Morgan Park, Chicago. The prizes include numerous silver cups, gold, silver and bronze medals, and cash, the donors being the Chrysanthemum Society of America, the Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago and New York; the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.; Chas. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J.; H. E. Converse, Marion, Mass.; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; Stumpp & Walter Co., New York; H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Weeber & Don, New York, and the National Association of Gardeners.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character—not less than six blooms of each variety to be shown. Special attention is called to the rule that sports to receive a certificate must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 4, 11, 18, 25, and November 1, 8, 15, 22, 29.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

At 6 p. m., September 18, Leola, Pa., became the center of attraction for the florists of this vicinity, and they gravitated toward it via trolley and machine, until there were about 20 on hand. The host, W. B. Girvin, and his capable manager, John Shoenberger, piloted the visitors about the place. The first inspection was an immense plat of candytuft, grown for summer cutting. Next came the chrysanthemum houses, planted to pompons and standards, all of them in good shape, excepting one batch of Chadwick, which was badly used up by the "midge." Next were the carnations, of which only three varieties are grown, Supreme, Matchless and Mrs. C. W. Ward. They were uniformly good and producing flowers. One peculiar thing noted, was that a batch of Mrs. Ward, grown inside all summer, was not as good as those brought in from the field. Usually it is the opposite. On the side beds, were freesias and Godfrey lilies. This is the only place in the county where roses are grown as a shipping proposition, and they are well grown, Kaiserin and White Killarney as a summer blooming proposition, Ophelia and Columbia as winter bloomers. The area devoted to roses will be gradually increased, and the writer believes that eventually the place will grow nothing but roses. Mr. Girvin is one of Lancaster's model farmers, and the acreage of crops, tobacco and cereals, runs into three figures. Instead of maintaining a dairy, he feeds his steers each winter and thus gets plenty of good feeding material for his roses. The roses are fat and healthy all winter, and by spring, the steers are a picture for lovers of good stock.

The meeting was called at 7:30 on the porch. After the regular routine of business, the first matter taken up was a proposed trip to the dahlia show at R. Vincent & Son's Co., White Marsh, Md. Those having machines were asked to invite their more less fortunate fellows, all to meet at the chamber of commerce rooms in Lancaster at 7 a. m. sharp, from which point the run will be made, and it was announced on a card being sent out, that there would be no waiting, even for five minutes, for any one not on hand at that time.

Convention matters were discussed, by Harry K. Rohrer, Ira Landis and the writer, every one praising the convention. B. M. Wise, of the Excello Manufacturing Co., Cleveland, O., was the one visitor and he gave a pressing invitation to the members to come to Cleveland next summer, assuring us of good hotels and plenty of diversion along with our business propositions.

Flower show matters were discussed, and it was decided that we would not attempt anything along this line for presidential year, as former experience taught us that it was a bad time for shows.

President Weaver spoke of a trip to Allentown, which he found more of a flower loving city than Lancaster, but most of the flowers were asters. One feature which attracted him was the floral basins erected around each light standard of the city, and planted and taken care of by the park men, and he thought we ought to get busy and try and have this worked out in Lancaster.

Robert Pyle, of West Chester, has invited the club to make one of their fall or winter automobile runs to his place and he would have some of the Chester county men to meet with us and have a regular visitation over the county. This will be taken up at the next meeting of the club, which will be at the chamber of commerce rooms October 16, in the form of a social.

The ladies, finding the porch too cool for them, met indoors and Mrs. A. M. Herr gave an account of the ladies' doings at Detroit and a general social time was enjoyed until the wiseacres on the porch were ready to move, which was done by a motion to adjourn about 9 p. m.

FALL WEDDINGS NOW A FACTOR.

Fall weddings are now quite numerous, and the call is heavy for delphiniums and Lilium speciosum for decorative purposes. Lily of the valley is poor in quality and so high in price that most of the stores are substituting swainsona in bridal bouquets. The cut flower demand is good and brisk fall business is anticipated. Yellow and white chrysanthemums are plentiful, and roses are arriving stronger each day and showing better color.

NOTES.

The Boston Rose Conservatories are now cutting roses in several varieties. They have announced that their office now closes at 4 p. m., and 3 o'clock on Saturdays.

Welch Bros. Co. reports business shows much improvement over the corresponding period last year. Their florists' supply department is going strong.

B. A. Snyder & Co. have had a most satisfactory summer season and are now well stocked for the fall business.

The Waban Rose Co. has opened a retail branch in the Shepard-Norwell department store on Tremont street.

Norris Comley, of Bedford, is shipping some good roses to this market.

PRICES WILL NOT BE LOWER.

OFTENTIMES a little serious thought applied to one's business can save you a goodly sum of money. It is known all over the country that prices on everything, including supplies, will not be lower.

Economic conditions show clearly that prices will be higher for at least another year.

Don't you think you should buy now what you need for the coming season?

Not only has it been our aim at all times to sell large quantities of our goods at a small profit, but our prices are based principally on the cost of our raw stock of last year. It has always been our motto to sell our goods in large quantities at small profits.

Furthermore, we bought rather heavily to protect our customers against a rising market. We sincerely hope that you will take advantage of this opportunity to buy now and save yourself many dollars.

Pittsburgh.

INDICATIONS POINT TO BIG FALL TRADE.

Following the arrival of cooler weather, business shows daily improvement, with stock plentiful, and the best of it not hard to move at fair prices for the season. The supply of local gladioli and asters, grown by farmers, and sold direct to the retailers, is about done for, which is bringing a return of business to the wholesale houses. American Beauties are not arriving in large numbers, which is good as the demand is none too brisk. Of the roses, Columbia and Premier are the leaders in the selling, and quality is exceptionally fine, comparing favorably with midseason stock. Ophelia, Pink Killarney, Sunburst and Maryland move slowly. There has been a shortage of white roses, and all that are offered bring fancy figures. Carnations are few and far between, and are not much of a factor. The supply of greens is limited.

NOTES.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. reports the largest supply business in its history. The same report comes from the McCallum Co., both indicating that the retailers throughout the country have made money and are preparing for a big fall season.

The Alpha Floral Co. has stocked up with canaries and gold fish and the big East End store creates a fine impression. Business in general is reported better than last year.

The Liberty Florists have finished remodeling their store, which is now up-to-date in every respect.

E. J. McCallum, of the McCallum Co., and Homer Woods are in New York on business for the firm.

Ed. McGrath, of McGrath & Langhans has returned from a three weeks' trip in the east.

John Harris was confined to his home for several days last week with a severe cold.

M.

St. Louis.

DEMAND SHOWS STRONGER TONE.

Trade in general during the week has shown some improvement with further gains expected as the season advances. Stock of all kinds is in good supply, with a shortening up of asters, gladioli, etc. Roses are arriving in about the usual quantities, but show improvement over the summer cut. Dahlias do not appear as good as last year nor will the supply be as large. Lily of the valley has been enjoying a good call but the out-of-town stock has been of very inferior quality and the retailers have been obliged to discourage its use as much as possible. Greens are in good supply.

NOTES.

Alexander Lurie, for some time manager of the Missouri Botanical Garden, has resigned his position and announced his intention of removing to Cleveland, O., where he has a position awaiting him. Mr. Lurie has made many friends in this city, who will hear of his departure with regret, but wish him full measure of success in his new field.

Sam Roth, formerly with Grimm & Gorley and the Mullanphy Florists, has taken over the flower department in the Famous-Barr Co. store. He is now busy getting the place in shape for the fall opening.

The local florists are organizing a bowling league and expect to have four teams in the field. There are quite a few good bowlers in the local trade.

J. J. W.

Cleveland.

BIG SURPLUS CAUSES PRICE DROP.

Counters in the wholesale houses continue to groan under the weight of surplus stocks of outdoor flowers, principally asters and gladioli, and now dahlias of all colors and varieties have been added to the quantity arrivals. Roses have been quite plentiful and the street merchants have been busy moving the ever-increasing oversupply. Prices have dropped considerably all along the line. Carnations are beginning to arrive in larger quantities, but are cleaning up nicely. They are largely short stemmed but the quality of the flowers is good. Carnation plants have never been as scarce as this year or as high in price. Good lily of the valley and white roses are in limited supply. A few orchids are seen. Larkspurs, lilac, statice, etc., continue to enjoy a good sale. Greens appear to be equal to all requirements.

NOTES.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Louis November in the death of his mother, which occurred September 15 following a stroke of paralysis, while shopping in the downtown district.

The material for the new houses of the Brookline Floral Co. has arrived and it is expected they will be completed in about three weeks.

Miss Edith Connors, sister of Will Connors, of the Ohio Floral Co., was married September 16 to Francis I. Kelly.

Mark Emsley, of the J. M. Gasser Co., will be on the sick list for several weeks, due to blood pisoning.

J. H. Turnbull is in the market with his famous bronze dahlia. He is also cutting good swainsona.

STOCK IS NOT SO PLENTIFUL.

Stock is not so plentiful as it was last week, but at that there is enough to go around at somewhat higher prices. Roses are seen in quantity at all the stores, but are moving better, and prices have had a tendency to advance the last few days. American Beauty roses continue to hold their own, and there is always a good call for Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Milady, Ophelia, My Maryland, Champ Weiland, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney, Double White Killarney and White Killarney are to be had in large quantities, and there is a fair supply of Cecile Brunner available. Carnations are in good demand at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per 100 and clean up favorably everyday. Gladioli are still quite a factor in the market, but the receipts are gradually dwindling so that there are no great surpluses seen at the stores. There has been a heavy call for Mrs. Francis King the past few days, which caused a scarcity in this variety at times. Asters were in short supply the early part of the week, due probably to the fact that the growers could not cut, owing to the heavy rains. Fancy asters are scarce and bring high prices, but there appears to be large quantities of inferior ones on hand. Lily of the valley is selling at $12 and $15 per 100, and cattleyas at $15 to $18 per dozen. Smith's Advance and Golden Glow chrysanthemums are to be had, and the first white pompons made their appearance this week. Some chrysanthemums from California were received by one of the wholesale houses this week. Dahlias, daisies, snapdragons, calendulas and lilies are included in the offerings, together with strawflowers, statice, gypsophila and other miscellaneous indoor and outdoor flowers not already mentioned. Several store openings and weddings called for a good supply of stock the past week, and the number of funerals seems to be increasing. The health department's weekly report indicates an increase in influenza, which caused thousands of deaths throughout this country and Europe last year. Five deaths and 58 cases, compared with seven cases and no deaths for a corresponding period last year, is the official tabulation. While the influenza was a life-saver for the florists last fall and winter, everyone in the trade sincerely hopes that the death list will be small, if the epidemic really becomes serious, which leading physicians warn against.

NOTES.

Allie Zech, president of the Florists' Club, has been appointed chairman of the committee to solicit funds from the trade for the home service campaign of the Salvation Army. Some of the former workers for the Liberty Bond, Victory Loan and War Fund drives are unable to serve this time and are returning their kits, which means that new ones will be asked to volunteer to take their places and report to him. Those in the trade who wish to contribute to this worthy cause should mail or send their remittance to their wholesaler or direct to Mr. Zech, 30 East Randolph street, as the florists are expected to realize their quota and make the same brilliant showing as in the past. The Salvation Army followed the boys to the front line trenches all during the terrific struggle overseas and everyone now has a chance to show their appreciation for the splendid services they gladly rendered during the hour of need. Any soldier will tell you what they did and everyone will do well to think twice before refusing or overlooking their request for help. Make your contribution today.

Sam Seligman is calling on the trade here this week. He has tendered his resignation to Schloss Bros., New York, to go into business for himself under the name of Sam Seligman Co., with headquarters in the same city at 299 Broadway, suite 1024. He is well and favorably known to the trade almost everywhere and has the best wishes of his many friends for a great success in his new venture. Mrs. Seligman is here with him.

Allan Gerling, of the Bassett & Washburn store force, and Miss Theresa Korupp, were married, Wednesday, September 24, at 4 p. m. The happy young couple have the best wishes of all their friends for a safe and pleasant voyage down the turbulent seas of matrimony.

Herbert Stone has resigned his position with A. Lange to manage the retail florist store of the Everette R. Peacock Co., 4013 Milwaukee avenue.

Oscar J. Friedman, 520 South Michigan avenue, has sold his business to T. C. Fogarty & Co., who assume all liabilities and have purchased all the assets but the book accounts, which Mr. Friedman retains, assuming all obligations up to September 15. He also retains a minority stock in the new corporation, which will keep the name of Friedman for the period of one year. The deal includes the store known as the Ohio Floral Co., located at 509 South Wabash avenue. Mr. Friedman has been located on Michigan avenue since 1893, when he left the employ of Gallagher & Co., and is well and favorably known to the trade, which will no doubt be surprised by his action. Mr. Fogarty is also well known to the trade, having acted as buyer for Friedman for many years, during which time he made a large circle of friends, especially in the wholesale market, who wish him every success, for he has worked hard and been right with everyone he ever had any dealings with. Mr. Friedman will devote his entire time and attention to the furtherance of industrial underwritings. He closed three big deals the past month, one of which was that of Oscar Mayer & Brother, packers, for $1,200,000. Miss Casaretto will remain in the employ of Mr. Friedman. The first big order that Mr. Fogarty received since the store changed hands, was the Landis wedding, one of the largest this season. Mr. Friedman's friends in the trade regret to hear of his action, but all join in wishing him success in his new vocation.

Alfred A. Johnson, of the George Wienhoeber force, and Miss Louise Shrane, were married at the home of J. W. Stephenson, 2115 Harrison street, on the evening of September 17, Reverend Victor W. Thrall, pastor of the Covenant M. E. church, officiating. Just as the minister was ready to perform the ceremony, the fire department arrived on the scene. After finding out that there was no fire, the fireman retired to the room where the wedding cake was being cut, then the ceremony continued. Mr. Johnson is inclined to believe that the force at the store was responsible for all the excitement. George Wienhoeber and his assistants only smiled when accused of being the guilty ones.

Peter Baumann, formerly manager at Peter Reinberg's downtown store, has resigned his position to join the staff at the Chicago Flower Grower's Association store, entering upon his duties this week. He has a large circle of friends in the trade who wish him every success in his new position.

Eddie O'Neill, formerly with the Park Flower Shop, Cleveland, O., is visiting friends here this week, as is Lawrence Mathes, formerly with the J. M. Gasser Co., of the same city. Both have resigned their positions and are open for new ones.

T. E. Waters, manager of Poehlmann Bros. Co's. supply department, and J. C. Nielsen, one of his traveling men, returned this week from a business trip to Minneapolis, Minn. They journeyed home in Mr. Nielson's Dodge, making the trip in fast time.

Herbert Hansen has succeeded Peter Baumann as manager of Peter Reinberg's city salesrooms, having been promoted to that position this week. He will prove equal to the occasion, and his many friends congratulate him upon his success.

John Poehlmann is again attending to his duties at Poehlmann Bros. Co's. store after enjoying a well earned vacation fishing at Three Lakes, Wis. He caught the largest pike there this season, and brought it home to have it mounted.

Ronsley's store at 17 East Jackson boulevard is very inviting with its new coat of paint. A new balcony gives him about 50 per cent more room, which is quite an item when the high cost of loop rent is considered.

The Baumann family, of Niles Center, have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a loving husband and father, whose death occurred last week, an account of which appears in our obituary column this issue.

At A. L. Vaughan & Co's. store the receipts of carnations are gradually increasing, but are cleaning up nicely right along, owing to their high quality. Asters and gladioli are still seen in quantity here.

Wietor Bros. report a heavy call for carnations at the store, which are selling surprisingly well, owing to their fine quality, notwithstanding the large quantity of other stock offered.

Mrs. Baumgarten, of the Baumgarten Floral Co., Milwaukee, Wis., passed through here this week, on a four weeks' visit in the east.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports a strong demand for orchids this week, with choice cattleyas bringing as high as $18 per dozen.

Peter Reinberg booked orders for 39,000 field-grown carnation plants last week, which established a new record at this house.

Allan Humason, one of the promising young men in the trade, will join the ranks of the benedicts in the near future.

Visitors: Saul M. Rosenfeld, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York; W. A. Kennedy, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; W. J. Baker, Fort Worth, Tex.; N. A. Hansen, Niles, Mich.

DEMAND LIGHTER AFTER FESTIVE WEEK.

Business, the past week, was not as good as the preceding one. This was to be expected, however, now that the fleet festivities have abated somewhat. Nevertheless, there was enough demand to keep the stores fairly busy. Funeral work was good, and helped to use a large quantity of flowers that otherwise would have had difficulty in finding a market. The shipping trade is improving rapidly, and is helping to keep the chrysanthemum market in a firm condition. Chrysolora and Crocus are still the leading yellow varieties, with Crystal Gem the best white offered. All are good shippers, and large quantities are moving to distant points every day. There are only a few good pinks coming in. Pompons, in nearly all colors, are to be seen everywhere. These are being largely used in decorative work and for out-of-town shipments. There is little change in the rose situation. Columbia is quite prominent, and is being largely called for. The supply of Russell has not increased to any noticeable extent and prices are firm for good stock. There is an ample supply of all the other varieties, with the exception of Cecile Brunner. Irish Elegance is in fairly good supply and is a good seller. The one surprise of the week is the supply of violets. Owing to favorable weather conditions, they are beginning to arrive freely, and are meeting with a ready sale. The Princess of Wales is the only sort being offered as yet, it being too early for Giant. This latter variety is a wonderful keeping flower, and is the only kind used by the shippers. Carnations have stiffened in price considerably, and are bringing 75 cents a bunch or $3.00 per 100. There is quite a shortage of good stock, and more could be used if available. Lilium rubrum can be had in limited quantities. It is much in demand for funeral and decorative work, and owing to the short supply, is bringing high figures. The aster situation shows no improvement over last week. The supply is far too great for this market to absorb, and only extremely low prices are being paid the growers. There is also an oversupply of dahlias, and it is only the finest stock that commands anything like remunerative prices. Gladioli are nearing the end of their season after a wonderfully successful one. Some excellent stock is coming in, but not in sufficient quantity to go around. Water lilies keep arriving with the supply about equal to the demand. There is an ample supply of zinnias. The quality is not as good as in former seasons. Interest in this flower seems to have fallen away during the past few years. At one time, it was a quite prominent fall flower. Calendulas are plentiful and cheap. There is no lily of the valley in the market, and very few gardenias. The orchid family is represented by a few cattleyas now and then. Tritomas are to be had in large quantities, and seem to meet with popular approval. The supply of ferns and asparagus just keep up with the demand. Pot grown celosias are in great favor, and some fine specimens are to be seen in the various stores. Cyclamens are coming in slowly and sell very well. As a variety, some of the stores are showing some extra good gloxinias, which add greatly to their window displays.

NOTES.

Kenneth S. Murray, of Redwood City, is starting to cut from his new crop of roses. He is a great admirer of Columbia, and is growing it largely this season. He still grows quite a few Killarneys, which he finds indispensable for his retail trade. He has several houses planted to colored freesias, which is probably the largest stock of any grower in this vicinity. He also grows several houses of carnations, principally Enchantress, which variety does extremely well with him.

Percy Ellings, superintendent of the Lynch Nursery Company, of Menlo Park, is in town on a business trip. He says that his firm's chrysanthemum crop is coming along in good shape, and heavy shipments of the early sorts are now being made to the north. They are cutting a fine lot of Mrs. O. H. Kahn, which is one of the most popular bronze varieties among the retailers. They have a large acreage of Louise Manager Thomas Holmes, of C. C. Morse & Co.'s Market street store, has been showing some grand looking dahlias at their store this season. He has been the recipient of many congratulations over the splendid collection exhibited by his company at the dahlia show. He says that owing to the unprecedented demand, roses and fruit trees will be much higher this year than formerly. Counter trade is keeping up steadily at this store.

The E. W. McLellan Company, at Burlingame, has decided to enter the business of growing vegetables under glass, as well as flowers. They are planting tomatoes and cucumbers. They have already marketed a paying crop. This range is now producing heavily of all the standard varieties. They are greatly pleased with Rose Columbia, which on account of its pleasing color, is in great demand in this city.

Edward Schwerin has a large stock of decorative plants at his greenhouses for the coming season. Several houses are devoted to cyclamens, most of which are fine plants in nine-inch pots. Primula obconica is also largely grown here. There are sixteen houses of Adiantum Abrahamii, nearly all of which are in 10-inch pots. This is used for cutting. There is a fine lot of cinerarias coming in for the holidays.

Henry Maier, manager of the Hillsborough Nurseries, says that he has many landscape projects to start when the planting season opens up. He reports the inqury for all shrubs and plants to be far ahead of former years. He seems to think it is not going to be a question of price this coming season. The chief difficulty will be in getting stock. His greenhouses are all in the best possible shape for fall trade.

Domoto Bros. are sending in a large cut of roses from their greenhouses across the bay. They are cutting high grade Columbia, which is meeting with ready sale. The shipping trade is opening up quite early with them this season, and already a large amount is going forward to distant points. Their stock of Christmas plants, particularly poinsettias, are looking well, as are the begonias and other flowering sorts.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, is shipping a fine grade of carnations from out-of-doors at the present time. His soil and location are peculiarly adapted to the growing of this flower and he usually has a heavy crop marketed before the frosts set in. He will have a nice cut of orchids next month. His plant houses are looking well, and are filled with Christmas stock for his retail trade.

G. Rossi & Co. have their large range at Colma filled with a large stock of ferns and foliage plants. They produce aspidistras and Bostons on a large scale at this establishment. They also grow cyclamens extensively. Quite a lot of bulbous stock will also be planted this season, nearly all of which will be used in their shipping trade. They also carry a fine stock of bay trees and boxwood.

Joseph Logarmarsino, the prominent violet grower, is already sending in a large cut every day. He ships most of his stock to eastern and western points, and already reports many inquiries as to what stock he will have available for shipping this coming season. The Grant is his principal shipping variety. He has over six acres of this violet alone.

Podesta & Baldocchi are showing some splendid yellow chrysanthemums at their store on Grant avenue this week. They have been busy on decorations during the week, and used large quantities of Chrysolora and Crocus. They have a large and varied assortment of decorative plants on show, which adds greatly to the beauty of their store.

B. M. Joseph, on Grant avenue, does a large steamer trade, and says business in this line has been particularly good of late, owing to heavy travel to the Orient. His arrangements of baskets of fruit and flowers are novel, and at the same time, very attractive. Only the highest grade of stock is handled at this up-to-the-minute store.

Hayashi Bros.' stock of cyclamens are coming alone in fine shape for the holidays. They have many houses of stock in 9-inch pans, which will, no doubt, be excellent specimens later on. This firm has for years been specialists in this pot plant, and have been very successful in growing this holiday favorite.

At the E. Seveau store, on Fillmore street, we found all hands busy. They are handling a splendid lot of chrysanthemums, which they say have sold well during the week. They are also receiving a large cut of good gladioli stock and many seasonable flowers from Mr. Seveau's country home at Redwood City.

Julius Eppstein's store in the St. Francis hotel was very busy all week with decorations. Large quantities of gladioli and yellow chrysanthemums were used. He says the prospects for a fine fall business were never better, and is hoping that the supply of orchids will increase soon.

The Charles C. Navlet Company is showing a fine lot of pot grown specimens of bougainvilleas this week at their Market street store. Manager Picetti says trade is keeping up nicely with them, and prospects are excellent for a busy plant trade this coming season.

Andrew McDonald, who for a number of years has been in charge of the greenhouses of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is now head gardener at Cypress Lawn cemetery. Andrew is one of our best plant growers, and he has our best wishes in his new position.

Luther Burbank will be one of the principal speakers on the opening day of the land show, which will be held in this city during the first week of October. He will also be a large exhibitor of his new and standard fruits and flowers.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has just completed a large piece of landscape on Hyde street hill. Great quantities of foliage and ornamental plants were used in the work. It reflects credit on Donald McLaren, its designer

E. Schwerin, of Mayfield, who is probably our largest grower of bulbous stock, is planting his houses for next season's trade. He grows large quantities outdoors also, and disposes of his entire cut in this market.

J. A. Axell says the violet season will open in a few weeks, when he will begin shipping to eastern points in large quantities. He is already making large shipments of asparagus and chrysanthemums to the east.

P. Vincent Matraia and wife have returned from an enjoyable trip to the north. While in Sacramento, they were extensively entertained by M. H. Ebel, the prominent retailer on Seventh street.

F. C. Jaeger & Son have been busy all week on decorative work. This firm specializes on pot plants to a great extent, and a large stock of the best commercial varieties is always carried.

COOL WEATHER SHORTENS SUPPLY.

There has been a falling off in the supply the past week, due to the cool nights; the thermometer in low places was down to 48°, and in carnation houses registered 42°. This greatly shortened the rose crop, and as the asters and gladioli are distinctly on the wane, there was little, if any, surplus. The weather has been very favorable for dahlias, which are now to be had in quantity in all the standard varieties. Some of the specials are as fine as many of the chrysanthemums; in fact, much larger and with as long stems as Golden Glow and Smith's Advance, the only varieties now on the market. Anything select in roses is in demand at good prices. Three-fourths of the shipments are short grades that can only be used in funeral or small basket work. This is the usual condition for the season, as growers are not cutting any more wood than they can help. Very good American Beauties are offered which bring top prices for the season. There is an increase in carnations, some fair flowers, but stems short. Cattleyas have been very scarce; nothing is offered at less than $1, and for anything choice, $1.50. A dozen together is a large quantity.

OPTIMISM.

There is a strong feeling of optimism among all the trade of the city. The growers of foliage and flowering plants, all feel there will not be stock enough of the staples to go around, as advance orders are larger than ever before. The quality of the various stocks was never better. Ferns, in all sizes, are exceptionally fine. They have never been in better demand or held at higher prices. Dracænas, crotons and pandanus are superb. Cyclamens are rounding up each week, showing a great advance. Specialists of this plant all point with pride to advanced tables of this stock as being the best they have ever had. Peppers, begonias and poinsettias are other staples that are looking very promising. The retailers are well satisfied with the outlook. The early fall weddings have commenced, and quite a number of these important social events are booked for the first two weeks in October. Then will follow the debutante teas, which promise, this season, to be greater in number than ever before.

NOTES.

At the special meeting to consider the advantage of a "Say It with Flowers" week celebration in early October, all seemed unanimously in favor, but were at variance as to ways and means of carrying it out. The several opinions expressed will be gone over by the committee appointed, and a workable plan presented to the club at its meeting, October 7.

carrying a large rake on her shoulder, who marched along at the heads of four magnificent white Percheron horses, which pulled the float, easily attracted more attention than any of the other exhibits.

Benney Gibbs declares that growers could do much to help the situation, when flowers are plentiful, by carefully grading their stock, and only sending in that which it is reasonable to suppose will be salable. Sending along the rubbish, in the hopes that it will bring something, is only throwing money away.

One of the first of the "Say It with Flowers" billboard signs is coming to this city, Robert A. Craig engaging one from George Asmus as soon as the idea was presented at the convention. It will be placed on their Market street front, in full view of the elevated road.

Mark Mills declares that the retailer that does not get on the job early this season, in placing his Christmas plant order, is likely to find the best stock all bought up, as he is certain there will not be enough to go around.

Wm. K. Harris and Mark Mills, who made a record in their catches of the finny tribe the past summer, are now back and settled down to business. Superintendent Prince has kept on the job, and the greenhouses never looked better.

The dahlia and vegetable exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, held in Masonic hall, Ardmore, Pa., brought a strong competition in all the entries. The display of dahlias was particularly fine.

S. S. Pennock is in charge again at 1620 Ludlow street. During his vacation, he tried tarpon fishing off Block Island, but without success. Good catches were made, however, of blue fish and others.

A bricklayers' strike has held up the building operations at the Frank M. Ross store on 52nd street, for six weeks. It is getting to be a serious matter, which entails considerable loss to Mr. Ross.

BUSINESS IS SLOWLY IMPROVING.

There are yet dull days, but for that matter there are dull days in all seasons. Although there has been no great advance in prices, there is a better movement in stock than there was a few weeks ago. During the past week, the supply, particularly in roses, was lighter than it had been for some time. In the last days of the week, prices on the best rose stock advanced. There is now fine stock of the new rose, Premier, on the market. We have been cautious about writing an opinion of this rose, as the summer is not the time to judge a rose. But if Premier can turn out the quality that has been seen during the past week, and keep it up, it is all right. Good Columbias and Ophelias also continue to arrive. Although the various types of Killarney were once popular, it now appears that, excepting the whites, and particularly the Double White Killarney, they have been superseded by the newer varieties. The popularity of Mrs. Russell and Prima Donna seems also to be on the wane in this market. Orchids, which dropped in price a short time ago, are up again, and are likely to be held at good figures when the society season has fairly begun. A few chrysanthemums continue to arrive, but they are not factors. In gladioli, asters and dahlias, there is an abundant supply. There is a movement in all of them, the asters, on account of their superior usefulness in funeral work, taking the lead. There are quantities of large and showy dahlias on the market, and their variety in color makes the show windows of the retailers look gay. They fill a niche, so to speak, in the decorative scheme, but their season is quite long enough to please the trade and too many are shipped to this market. As there has been no frost, quantities of other outdoor stock continue to arrive, noteworthy being the hydrangea blooms, which have now taken on the pink shade. Very little lily of the valley is seen or heard of, but the white bouvardia is noteworthy. In lilies, L. rubrum is the only one seen in quantity, and it is generally poor.

September 22.—Business is fairly active today and prices on all good stock are firm.

NOTES.

T. K. Godbey, of Waldo, Florida, has written to one of our contemporaries that he favors Quarantine No. 37. He has also sent a phototgraph of an Azalea indica that was grown in Florida, which he says has greatly increased in size in 15 years. He further states that he has carefully looked over the list of excluded plants and bulbs, and fails to find any that cannot be grown successfully in the south. If he is correct, the south has a great horticultural future. But let us get down to brass tacks on this proposition. We have heard something similar to what he writes on previous occasions. It is now some years since we were told that bulbs could be successfully grown at Bellingham, Wash., also in Virginia. Recently attempts have been made to grow plants and bulbs for the trade at Eureka, California. Growing "successfully," means in our vocabulary, the growing of good stock that can be placed on the market, when needed, at prices that are not prohibitive. We have never noticed any great stir in the plant and bulb trade that had been caused by the above mentioned efforts, but if stock can be successfully grown as here outlined, now is the time to get busy.

An event of considerable interest, September 19, was the arrival at this port, from Hamburg, Germany, of the S. S. Jason, of the Kerr Line, with a considerable cargo. There have been other arrivals from Germany, but this is the first ship, since the war ended, that has brought an important cargo, as there were 4,500 bags of sugar beet seed on board. Toys and various other articles comprised the remainder. The officials of the Kerr Line say that they have had no trouble in doing business, "despite the fact that the peace treaty is not yet ratified." That is enlightening. In an attempt to bludgeon the people of the United States into accepting a League of Nations, that we believe a majority of them do not want, it has been stated that we would have to go "hat in hand" to Germany, unless the league is accepted. That is in line with the stories that ignorant nurses have sometimes related to scare children, but the people engaged in trade are grown ups.

It will cause satisfaction among the florists to learn that regular passenger travel across the Atlantic has again been established, as the "steamer business" of florists, before the war, was no small item. Over 20 passenger steamships are now in regular service. Of these, nine are British, six French, the Nieuw Amsterdam and Rotterdam the two largest Dutch steamers; three Italian, and one Scandinavian-American. Other passenger steamships will soon be put in service, among them, let us hope, some flying the American flag. Considering the great things that were promised for the Hog Island shipyard, we should not now be in the tail-ender class.

That lively young fellow, Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society, arrived in this city, September 19. Stopping long enough to take a bite and a sip, he started for Storrs, Connecticut, to attend the field day, September 20, on the society's trial grounds at the state agricultural college, where he was well pleased with his reception, and the work that has been done. Back to New York, he attended the dahlia show of the Horticultural Society of New York at Bronx Park. He, of course, stops here for the meeting and exhibition of his own society.

The honored name of Burns is familiar to everybody that can read, but the Burns family of our acquaintance, is more practical than the lamented poet is said to have been. A. S. Burns, Jr., the grower of Spring Valley, N. Y., recently purchased a new $5,000 touring car, and by way of trying it out, came down to this city and took his father, A. S. Burns, Sr., and his brother, H. H. Burns, on an extended trip to Southampton and other Long Island points.

J. W. Hauser, the retailer, and wife, are on an extended tour of eastern Canada. When last heard from, they were in Montreal, but it was expected that they would continue their trip to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. They are fine people, and doubtless our Canadian cousins will give them a warm welcome.

Vaughan's Seed Store received unusually heavy shipments of bulbs the past week, 1485 cases French bulbs on the S. S. Roma and 1192 cases Dutch bulbs on the S. S. Norman Monarch.

New York Federation of Societies.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs was held at the state fair, Syracuse, September 10. The meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock with President F. R. Pierson in the chair. Eighteen delegates were present from the affiliated organizations. President Pierson spoke of the three projects in which the federation is especially interested at this time, viz., the erection of a horticultural building at the state fair grounds, Syracuse, the erection of experiment greenhouses for the department of floriculture at Cornell University; and Plant Quarantine No. 37. In regard to Plant Quarantine No. 37, President Pierson stated that the organization had already gone on record as in opposition to this quarantine, and therefore it was unnecessary to discuss it further. In regard to the horticultural building, he thought that the time was ripe and he outlined the general policy which should be adopted in the campaign for the building. He was optimistic that the building would come in the near future.

A resolution was passed urging the necessity of an immediate consideration of a horticultural building, and a committee consisting of D. Lumsden, Ithaca, chairman; Dr. Erl Bates, Syracuse; Madison Cooper, Calcium; F. A. Danker, Albany, and A. Cowee, Berlin, was appointed to confer with the state architect regarding plans for the building.

Dean A. R. Mann was present at the meeting and outlined the policy of the College of Agriculture in regard to the completion of the college buildings. He stated that in this programme, one of the first items was the range of greenhouses for investigation in floriculture. It was his opinion that the trustees would approve of a bill for this range, and when it was introduced the federation should use every effort possible to secure the appropriation. Dean Mann stated that there should be frank expression of opinion from the commercial interests regarding the ways in which the college could best serve them, for the college existed to be of service to the people of the state. He hoped that all farmers' organizations would tell the college authorities what they want done. He also hoped that it would not be necessary to wait eight or 10 years for the floricultural range.

Dr. E. M. Mills, of Syracuse, chairman of the committee to encourage organization of amateur rose societies, reported that Rochester now has a very live organization. At the first meeting, 51 members were present, and he understood there are now 105 members. Buffalo and Elmira are also considering the organization of societies. He hoped Utica and Albany would soon come into line. He reported a very live organization in Auburn. It was moved and carried that the secretary write the secretary of the Auburn Rose Society and the Rochester Rose Society asking them to become members of the federation. It was also moved and carried that the arrangements for a meeting of the federation with an affiliated society should be left with the secretary.

It was moved and carried that a committee of three be appointed to confer with Professor Lumsden in regard to changes in the premium list of the New York state fair. F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown; E. A. Slattery, Buffalo; and J. Prouty, Baldwinsville, were appointed on this committee.

The opinion was expressed that there should be a closer relationship between the affiliated organizations, and in order to bring this about, it was moved that notice be given that at the next annual meeting the constitution would be changed to provide for an executive committee, the personnel of which should be composed of the presidents of the affiliated organizations. In view of the necessity for such a committee at the present time, the president named a special executive committee to consist of the presidents of the various affiliated organizations.

The following officers were elected: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, president; Dr. Erl Bates, Syracuse, first vice-president; Charkes Vick, Rochester, second vice-president; Hugh McCarthy, Syracuse, third vice-president; F. A. Danker, Albany, fourth vice-president; W. H. Workman, Oswego, fifth vice-president; W. A. Adams, Buffalo, treasurer; E. A. White, Ithaca, secretary.

Steamship Sailings.

The various ocean steamship lines have resumed general passenger service and it is reported that upwards of 5000 persons sailed from eastern ports for Europe during the week ending September 20, reopening for the retail florist an important branch of Telegraph Delivery business Representatives of the steamship companies say ocean travel will be heavy for many months and all florists can materially increase their individual receipts by helping to revive the delivery of flowers on arriving and departing steamers.

If your card is not already in our Telegraph Delivery Department, send it now. The price is $1.50 per single column inch, less discount of 30 per cent on yearly contract.

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

VISITED NEW YORK: J. C. Vaughan, Chicago.

A SHIPPING strike is reported at Marseilles, France.

PROSPECTS are for an average crop of watermelon.

EARLY fall business in the seed stores is reported good.

THE price of bags at Chicago, September 24, was $62.00.

THE crop of dwarf beans is expected to be much below normal.

THE dealers are all busy filling orders for French and Dutch bulbs.

PRESIDENT MILLER, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, is returning from Japan, having reached Vancouver September 22.

VISITED CHICAGO: John A. Schrenker, Jr., representing the J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; C. P. Keeney, Leroy, N. Y.

THE outlook is for a large crop of small gladiolus bulbs, on account of the long continued drought in most of the growing sections.

MAGNOLIA, N. C.—The weather has been very dry here, and bulbs are suffering for want of rain. Large sizes are sure to be short unless good rains come soon.

TOMATO SEED.—Delaware growers report 70 per cent of their acreage a failure. New Jersey growers abandoned 30 per cent of their fields. Ohio prospects are fair.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district show an advance of 15 to 25 cents over the selling prices quoted last week, when the figures were $2.25 for reds and yellows, and $2.75 for whites.

ANY seed dealer who is putting up a new building that he figures on using for the next 50 years, should keep in mind the necessity for a good landing place on his roof for all his customers' aeroplanes.—Nicholson's Notes.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade September 24, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.00 per 100 pounds. September, $12.00 bid, $12.25 sellers; October $11.90 bid, $12.50 sold for March.

TOLEDO O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December were steady, September 22, with cash offered at $29.80. Timothy was five cents higher, cash being offered at $5.40, September $5.75, October $5.67½, December $5.77½, and March $5.90.

LEROY, N. Y.—C. P. Keeney reached home this week in good health and fine spirits, from a three months' trip in the western seed growing districts. He reports the seed pea conditions unprecedented. The garden bean yield in the Greeley district, he says, is six-fold to nine-fold, and in certain parts of Idaho from 18-fold to 20-fold.

New York Seed Trade.

The bulbs just received from Europe are reported of good size, except mother bulbs of narcissus, which are below the average. All are well cured. The trade demand continues good. Local jobbers are making haste to unpack for local distribution.

Arrivals on the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam September 23, included J. J. Sluis, of Sluis' Seed Store, Chicago; Sidney Bayersdorfer, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Harry A. Bunyard, this city.

The S. S. Norman Monarch, which arrived last week, brought in 23,000 cases Dutch bulbs.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

At the W. Atlee Burpee Co's. establishment, a warning is being issued regarding the early-flowering or winter-forcing sweet peas, the seed stock of which in all the choice varieties is likely to be soon depleted. It appears, that owing to the war and the scarcity of labor, the acreage in California devoted to the sweet pea crop was greatly curtailed last season, in addition to which, owing to unfavorable conditions, the vines did not make their normal growth. All of this has greatly reduced the seed harvest. Hybridizing at Fordhook and at the company's seed farms in California, has been carried on very successfully, resulting in some fine colors in the late or summer-flowering, as well as in the improved early-forcing sorts. David Burpee, who had planned to go abroad this month to get into personal touch with the European seed growers, has found it necessary to give up the trip this year, owing to the uncertainties of the return voyage, latest advices indicating that he might have to remain three months to secure passage.

J. Otto Thilow is greatly pleased that the bulbs for Henry A. Dreer, Inc., arrived on time and in such good condition. Orders will now go out without the laborious night work of the past two years. A window display of splendidly colored crotons and choice ferns and other foliage plants was a feature at this establishment.

The H. F. Michell Co. places great value on its pavement display. Philip Frued, who has charge of the retail plant department, says he would not take $100 per day rent for the space for just an ordinary day. He feels that most or nearly all of the sales from the pavement stock are made to passersby, who had no intention of purchasing, but who stopped to admire, and in many cases took a plant home with them. He at all times has the front of the store in mind, the windows are invariably well dressed and frequently changed. Price cards are always conspicuous and have much to do in helping the sale.

American Seed Trade Association.

Burlap.

The agreement of the Calcutta jute mills to work only four days per week will be continued until December 31. This plan has been in operation since March 1. Advices received in New York are to the effect that, beginning January 1, 1920, and until March 31, of that year, the schedule will be five days per week. Reports from the Dundee market state that there is little prospect of delivery on new business before December. There is an upward tendency on jute prices in anticipation of buying by Germany in the near future. At New York, burlap prices continue to advance, but the market is not active.

Geraniums and Lettuce.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly inform me if geraniums and lettuce can be grown successfully in the same house at the same temperature; also the names of the best single and double commercial geraniums according to color?

Ohio. F. H.

There is no good reason why geraniums and lettuce could not very well be grown in the same house. While geraniums, to make the greatest progress, should have a little more heat, we can arrange for a little more time, and get a better product. When grown with lettuce, owing to the lower temperature, geraniums require very little water in winter. "Keep them dry," should be the watchword. Towards spring, the temperature naturally will be corrected, and they will respond all the better for their cool treatment.

In regard to varieties, we are at present not actively engaged in bedding plants, but we used to produce them heavily. We understand that very few changes have occurred in 10 years in this line; hence, the old standards are as popular as ever. To head the list, we place S. A. Nutt, double crimson; Scarlet Bedder, bright scarlet; Alphonse Ricard, orange red; Francis Perkins, double pink; Jean Viaud, double rosy pink; La Favorite, double white; Mrs. E. G. Hill, single salmon.

There is as a rule, only a limited demand for single types, hence these should be produced only sparingly. And it is much better to have a few varieties, in large numbers, than a large assortment, in few numbers. Motto: A few standard kinds well done.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period September 16-23, indicate moderate price changes and decreasing shipments. Potatoes were nearly steady. The tone in consuming markets was slow and slightly weaker. Jersey sacked Giants held nearly at last week's closing range of $2-$2.15 per 100 pounds f. o. b. and were nearly steady also in eastern terminal markets with closing range unchanged at $2-$2.50. Maine Cobblers ranged $1.95-$2 per 100 pounds f. o. b. in bulk at shipping points. Jobbing prices weakened slightly in New York and Boston reaching $2.35-$2.60 per 100 pounds sacked and bulk while other eastern and middle-western markets ranged $3-$3.50. Minnesota Early Ohios sold slightly lower, closing at $2.35 f. o. b. sacked for field run stock. Minnesota Red River Ohios ranged $2.30-$2.45 f. o. b. shipping points. Carlot sales in Chicago strengthened to a closing range of $2.30-$2.40 sacked. The tone of the onion market was firm and price changes mostly in upward direction. Western sacked yellow stock continued fairly steady at $3-$4 in leading jobbing markets. Middlewestern red stock was quoted $3.10-$3.20 f. o. b. shipping points and ranged $3.40-$3.60 in middle-western consuming markets. California yellow stock strengthened further to a range of $2.40-$2.50 f. o. b. shipping points and advanced 50 cents in New York, reaching $4-$4.25. New York domestic cabbage declined further closing at $32-$34 per ton bulk f. o. b. shipping points, but continued about steady in terminal markets at $40-$50. Wisconsin and Minnesota domestic stock declined steadily, closing at $24 per ton bulk f. o. b. and holland seed at $25. Consuming markets quoted northern domestic stock at $40-$55, but carlots in Chicago sold at $30-$35 per ton bulk.

Potato Wart Disease Eradication.

In answer to the question, "What does the potato wart look like?" Dr. E. W. Olive, field assistant in plant disease survey, United States department of agriculture, describes the disease as follows:

"When small the growths on the surface of the potato tuber resemble warts; but when larger the outgrowth reminds one of a small, more or less spongy cauliflower light brown in color, later becoming dark or even black. Finally the whole diseased potato may disintegrate into a black, crumbly, decayed mass. Remember that the outgrowths when young are wart-like, or like small spongy cauliflowers attached to the potato tubers. Do not mistake the small round, solid little tubers, which sometimes grow out from a potato, especially from scabby or badly diseased specimens.

"In September, 1918, a diseased potato was sent from Highland, Pa., to Professor J. G. Sanders of the Pennsylvania department of agriculture, and he recognized it at once as something important. He took it to Washington, and the United States department of agriculture pronounced it as the serious European wart disease. A hasty survey of the situation showed that it was largely confined to little back yard gardens of the anthracite coal miners in a restricted region in Pennsylvania.

"It is believed that the disease was imported from Europe, possibly from England or Ireland. In 1912 the federal horticultural board, in the hopes of keeping the disease out of America, prohibited the importation of potatoes from those countries where the disease was known to exist. Before the embargo went into effect, however, several million bushels of the crop of 1911 had been brought into this country from Europe and distributed throughout the east. Possibly, then, the potato embargo of 1912 was an act of locking the door after the horse was stolen!

"When the department of agriculture agents were searching for the disease in Pennsylvania, one Irish woman with characteristic sense of humor, showed all her neighbors one of her large diseased potatoes as a new variety of cauliflower which grew underground.

"Of course, the disease is a fungous growth and affects only the potato; a person might eat it without injury in the least, but the chances are that they would not, for the warty out-growths are ordinarily cut off in peeling. In fact, in Pennsylvania the worst spots were often right by the back door where the potato peelings had been thrown out to the chickens. If the peelings had been cooked first, the disease would of course have been killed.

"Sometimes the warty outgrowths appear on the stems above ground, but generally the sole effect is on the tubers, in severe cases causing them to turn into a black, crumbly decayed mass. The crop in some of the small gardens in Pennsylvania was practically a total loss. While the vines might appear fairly healthy and promising above ground, the disease might exist and be detected only at digging time.

"It is easier to prevent the wart disease than it is to control. If it once gets into a field, it is hard to eradicate. Therefore the United States department of agriculture, through the plant disease survey and county agents, and the state experiment stations all over the country, are co-operating in an effort to find the disease if it is present."

LONG DROUGHT SERIOUSLY FELT.

Since June 20, this section of the country, has suffered from unusually dry weather, the rainfall between that date and August 20 being but one-half of an inch. All growing crops have suffered in consequence, and thousands of acres of corn on sandy soil have simply dried up, many fields being practically a total loss. Vegetables are, of course, scarce and high in price. Outdor flowers, such as asters and gladioli, were very poor, although the late plantings of the latter are now showing excellent quality, the rains of the past week having been of great benefit to them. Business during the past two weeks has been quiet, and the growers are taking advantage of the chance to get their places ready for winter.

NOTES.

Edgar Weber, Wm. Henley, James Cowan and Fred Winter motored to Crawfordsville, September 16, to attend a meeting of the state association.

Fred G. Heinl has returned from Detroit, Mich., making the trip by motor, accompanied by his family.

Henley Bros. have their rose and carnation houses in fine condition. The rose stock is especially good.

Cowan Bros. have rebuilt three of their houses and added an office at their establishment.

Heinl & Weber have two houses of poinsettias which promise well for Christmas.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

NURSERY STOCK in many lines is already short of requirements, especially ornamentals.

BRAINTREE, MASS.—The Blue Hill Nurseries have been incorporated by Julius, Victor and Nina Hourlin, with a capital stock of $45,000.

Pacific Coast Prices Advance.

The California dealers in fruit trees and roses report that advance quotations sent out by growers indicate that fruit trees, which formerly retailed at 35 to 50 cents, will have to bring from 85 cents to $1 this year if the dealer is to have a fair profit. Field-grown roses will also probably retail at 75 cents to $1 each. A number of nurseries are said to have no more stock to offer, owing to the unprecedented demand. One of the largest nurseries in Oregon is reported to have bought up all the fruit trees in California that it could secure to supply the heavy demand in the north.

J. T. L.

Ass'n of American Cemetery Supts.

As we go to press, the annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents is in session at Cincinnati, O., the dates being September 24-25, previous announcement of which appeared in our issue of August 23, page 302. In addition to a well arranged programme of topics of timely interest, the local convention committee, composed of William Salway, Carl E. Kern, J. C. Cline and M. M. Jones, have arranged for entertainment of the visitors, which will add to the pleasure and success of the meeting. The attendance on the opening day indicates a large and representative gathering, whose deliberations should be fruitful.

The present officers of the association are: W. H. Atkinson, Trenton, N. J., president; H. S. Adams, Jamaica Plain, Mass., vice-president; W. B. Jones, Pittsburgh, Pa., secretary-treasurer.

Firs.

The number of fir trees that can be successfully grown in this climate for many years is not large. One of the handsomest here is the white fir of western North America, Abies concolor. There are fine specimens of this beautiful tree in the Arboretum raised here from seed planted in 1874 and now about 60 feet high, with the lower branches resting on the ground, and solid masses of gray-green foliage. As handsome and as promising in this climate is the Japanese Abies homolepis, or, as it has been more often called, Abies brachyphylla. This a large tree on the mountains of central Japan with dark green leaves silvery white on the lower surface and violet-purple cones. It has proved perfectly hardy in this climate. The largest specimen in the Hunnewell pinetum is now 55 feet high with branches sweeping the ground. The Arboretum trees are smaller but already produce their handsome cones. A variety of this tree, (var. umbellata) with green cones and rather lighter-colored leaves, is established in the Arboretum where it has grown rapidly, the largest specimen raised from seeds planted in 1891, being 35 feet high. Abies cilicica from Asia Minor and A. cephalonica from southeastern Europe are hardy trees in the Arboretum and now promise to grow here to a large size. Abies Veitchii from Japan is still a handsome tree in the Arboretum, but it is doubtful if it carries its beauty to old age. A. amabilis and A. grandis from northeastern North America are handsome young trees here, and A. nobilis from the same region just keeps alive here as a nearly prostrate shrub, although in Methuen, in the extreme northern part of this state, there are handsome and healthy specimens of this fir nearly 30 feet high.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Henry W. Busch, Detroit, Mich.
Vice-President American Association of Park Superintendents.

Henry W. Busch, Detroit, Mich.

VICE-PRES. AMER. ASS'N. OF PARK SUPTS.

Henry W. Busch, elected vice-president of the American Association of Park Superintendents at the annual meeting of that organization at Hartford and New Haven, Conn., August 24-26, a report of the proceedings of which appeared in our issue of September 6, page 368, is 43 years of age, 15 of which have been spent with the department of parks and boulevards of Detroit, Mich. The park department of that city has but one commissioner, whose appointment is subject to the pleasure of the mayor. All positions of a subordinate nature are under civil service rules, and Superintendent Busch has served under various administrations. In Detroit, there is a saying, "Commissioners may come, and commissioners may go, but Busch stays on forever."

Included in the Detroit system is the famous Belle Isle park, an island of 704 acres, lying in the Detroit river. It was purchased in 1879 for $200,000 and today is valued at $17,000,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.

MARKET SHOWS HEALTHY CONDITION.

Market conditions for the week ending September 20 were the most satisfactory of the month, marked by a considerable increase in funeral work and other sales, and a shortening up in supply. The demand was in excess of the receipts, with the result that prices advanced. The outdoor supply is lessening, and the quality is also suffering. In greens, the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

The large Grand avenue department stores, as well as those on Wisconsin street, who had fall openings last week, again featured very tasty window displays, the work of the A. F. Kellner Co. The variety in the grouping fully demonstrated this firm's ability as decorators.

The younger element—and some of the older ones—will get together and make merry at a harvest dance in costume, which will be held at Keipper's park, September 27.

The regular meeting of the florists' club will be held October 2. Some legal points pertaining to labor will come up for discussion at that time.

Heavy rain, with high winds, followed by hail, visited this vicinity, September 20, but at this writing, no damage to glass has been reported.

Visitors: M. B. Latham, Racine, Wis.; H. Larsen, Menominee, Mich.; M. Hensen, St. Paul, Minn.

DAHLIAS NOW FEATURE STOCK.

Market conditions during the past week have shown considerable improvement. Gladioli are on the wane, and dahlias which are taking their place, may be had in abundance and in many fine varieties. The stock offered this year is excellent, due to proper handling, the result of the good work of the wholesalers in educating the large growers, varieties being shipped separately, packed 50 in a corrugated box, and such lots are sold in the original packages, eliminating unnecessary handling. Red and white roses are still scarce, but very good pinks are to be had to supply the demand, although some of the growers have to cut them before they are fully open.

NOTES.

A fine piece of landscaping, placed in the court house plaza for the Odd Fellows' convention, caused much favorable comment by the public. The work was planned by Charles R. Jones, superintendent of Druid Hill park.

The S. S. Pennock Co. handled 100 American Beauty roses last week, which were secured from out of town, and delivered to the customer in about five hours after the order was received.

Robert Halliday is spending some time in Ocean City, N. J., where it is hoped by his many friends, that the rest at the seashore will bring a speedy return to health.

STATE FAIR BRINGS GOOD BUSINESS.

"Fair week" proved quite a boon to the florists, with thousands of visitors being entertained in various parts of the city. Corsage bouquets were much worn and proved quite a factor in the demand. Stock in general has been arriving a little more freely. There are many good roses on the market at present, notably Columbia. Carnations will soon be plentiful. Dahlias are coming along nicely and funeral work keeps up to its usual high standard.

WEDDINGS MOVE CONSIDERABLE STOCK.

Business during the past week has been good with a considerable movement of cut stock occasioned by several weddings. Asters are shortening in supply and prices are now firm. Roses continue to arrive at a good rate and are easily moved. A few chrysanthemums were shown but their poor quality did not entitle them to much favor. Fall bulbs have been received and are selling well, especially Paper White narcissus.

NOTES.

Mrs. P. F. Conley is cutting excellent asters. Boston ferns at her establishment are also showing excellent growth.

John Trottier, of the Westminster Greenhouses, has a new Essex car.

PROTECTS YOUR CROP

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting and Exhibition at New York, September 23-25.

Best Show in Society's History.

The American Dahlia Society held its annual meeting and exhibition, mention of which was made in last week's issue, page 518, in conjunction with the eighty-eighth fair of the American Institute of the City of New York in the Engineering building, that city, September 23-25, and President Vincent, the officers of the society and Secretary W. A. Eagleson of the board of managers of the American Institute have every reason to be proud of the successful exhibition. One may state without hesitation that it was the best show ever held by the society, and the finest display of dahlias ever seen in New York. The doors were thrown open to the public at 7 p. m., September 23. Throughout the day, while rain was falling, sometimes in torrents, an outlook not auspicious for a large opening attendance, Manager William Rickards and his assistants and the exhibitors were hard at work staging the displays, but the doors had not been open an hour before the hall was thronged with admiring visitors.

Two hundred years ago or more, Milton wrote:

"Wherefore did nature pour her bounties forth
With such a full and unwithdrawing hand,
Covering the earth with odors, fruits, and flocks,
But all to please and sate the curious taste?"

A century later, Cooper wrote:

"The earth was made so various, that the mind
Of desultory man, studious of change
And pleas'd with novelty, might be indulged."

It must be conceded that man himself has done much to assist nature to "sate the curious taste," and in the production and hybridizing of dahlias we have a noteworthy example. The great variety in size, form and color of this flower will continue to be a source of wonder and admiration to inquiring minds. Confining ourselves strictly to this exhibition, although the hall was large—to be exact, two halls were thrown into one—all the available space was taken. Limited room was given to gladioli, roses, fruit and vegetables, but by far the larger part of the exhibits were dahlias. The standard sorts of this flower are generally known, but the variety in types and colors seen in this exhibition were almost bewildering.

The show and exhibition varieties, as a matter of course, were prominent. With so much good stock, it is not easy to particularize. In the variegated types, there were novel features. One, named Contrast, is a bright pink to the tips, which are pure white. Another, Freckles—appropriate name—reminded us that Thanksgiving is near, as it is spotted like a turkey's egg. The singles were not very prominent, as it is well known that they are bad shippers. Some of the older favorites were seen in good form, but new varieties and types come so fast that it is almost unsafe to classify new and old. We will mention a few that were good: Nina, Kalif, Mrs. Charles Baeck, Dutchess of Brunswick, Judge Mareau, Mrs. Addison Pratt, Glory of Argonne, General Pershing, Victory, Conquest, Cactus, Delice, Thais, Yellow King, Princess Julianna, Mrs. Hugh Dickson, and King of Autumn.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., had a table of his new and large crimson dahlia, Mandaina, which will be disseminated next spring.

Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., made a good exhibit of King of Autumn and other varieties, but not in competition.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., made fine exhibits of his new roses, Madame Butterfly and Frank L. Dunlop.

W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Colo.
Vice-Pres. of the American Dahlia Society, Representing the West.

The Duckham-Pierson Co., Chatham, N. J., exhibited fine stock of the roses, Premier, Columbia, Hadley, Mrs. Charles Russell and Ophelia.

The judges for the exhibition were as follows: Professor George Fraser, Storrs, Conn.; J. C. Clark, Riverton, N. J., and John S. Vincent, White Marsh, Md., for the American Dahlia Society. For the American Institute: Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; William Turner, Rumson, N. J., and James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.

In an article published in the garden section of the New York Sun, September 28, referring to the exhibition, there was the following: "One unfortunate circumstance only is to be recorded, and that is that an inferior dahlia was given the name of the late J. Harrison Dick, secretary of the society. This dahlia seems to have been selected by force of circumstances. It is not one that will ever become popular, nor can it be recommended either for amateur gardeners or for florists' purposes. It is to be hoped that the name will be withdrawn and given to a much more worthy subject."

The Business Session.

The annual meeting of the society was held in the Engineering building on the afternoon of September 23. President Vincent delivered his address and the reports of Secretary Pepper and Treasurer Austin were read. The report of the nominating committee, composed of George L. Stillman, George W. Kerr and James Duthie, was read by Mr. Stillman, recommending the following slate, which was elected: Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., president; George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., first vice-president, representing the north; George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa., second vice-president, representing south and east; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y., third vice-president, representing Long Island and New York; W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Colo., fourth vice-president, representing the west; Major N. F. Vanderbilt, San Rafael, Calif., fifth vice-president, representing the Pacific coast; Wm. J. Rathgeber, New Haven, Conn., treasurer; Edward C. Vick, New York, secretary. Executive committee: I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y.; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Richard Appel, New York; C. Louis Alling, New Haven, Conn., and W. C. Noonan, Locust Valley, N. Y. Nomenclature committee: Professor George Fraser, Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs; James Kirby, Huntington N. Y.; E. Stanley Brown, East Moriches, N. Y.; I. N. Sailor, Richmond Hill, N. Y.; N. Harold Cottam, Wappingers Falls, N. Y.

Professor Fraser reported for the judges on the dahlias planted in the trial garden at Storrs, Conn., and stated that 45 varieties had been planted of which 25 had scored high enough to be awarded certificates. A detailed report will be made later.

A strong resolution was passed, endorsing the opposition offered by other societies to Plant Quarantine No. 37, and directing the secretary to send copies to the federal horticultural board and the secretary of agriculture.

On the evening of September 23 President Vincent and Secretary Pepper arranged for a dinner at the Hotel Grand which was thoroughly enjoyed by the officers of the society, the judges of the exhibition and a number of the society's members. Among those present was President-elect A. L. Miller, of the Society of American Florists.

Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.
Vice-President American Dahlia Society, Representing the East and South.

President Vincent's Address

Once more, my friends and fellow members of the American Dahlia Society, we are gathered together in this great city of New York, but under much brighter conditions than a year ago, and we believe that our efforts to make the present exhibition the greatest in the history of the society have been realized. The past year has been an eventful one in many ways and a number of unexpected problems have arisen for us to solve, but we have aimed to meet conditions to the best of our ability and have succeeded to a certain extent, and we believe that the prospects for our future are bright.

Membership.—As a result of the war, labor shortage and other factors, especially the change in secretaries, our membership during the past year did not increase as expected or double in numbers as was our earnest desire, to make the organization one of the strongest in the United States, or as strong as our kindred societies. We hope, however, that peace, happiness and prosperity may endure forever, and that the people throughout the world may become more anxious to see their homes decorated with beautiful flowers than with the trophies of war. Under the happy auspices of peace, may I ask every member of the American Dahlia Society to earnestly strive for the upbuilding of the organization, but let us not be selfish, but help other societies as well as our own, especially the parent body, the Society of American Florists, whose slogan is "Say It With Flowers" and whose members are doing everything possible to increase the love for and a greater use of flowers. Kindly do your part and you will help the world to be brighter and more beautiful.

The American Institute.—Thanks to the kindness and help of the American Institute of the City of New York, we are again able to meet under the most favorable conditions and invite our friends and all dahlia lovers to enjoy with us the company of its officers and others connected with this splendid exhibition. We thank the officers and management for their liberality and kindness and sincerely hope that our exhibitions under their auspices may continue to grow and prosper as the years go by so that we may educate the public to the beauty of nature in the use of flowers.

Bulletin's "Inquiry Department."—As president of the society I receive numerous inquiries by letter as to varieties suitable for different purposes, planting, manuring, insect pests, the handling of bulbs, etc. Some of these queries are easy to answer, while others, to one like myself, who "does not know it all," are puzzling. If answered by letter, it is only the individual or club that is benefitted, whereas if asked and answered through the society's Bulletin, many may be helped. Therefore, I suggest that our next year's Bulletin contain an "Inquiry Department."

Funds.—The returns from the memberships are not up to expectations, There are several reasons for this, but we are hoping for the best in every way, and I think our treasurer's report will show up fairly good. A few years ago, several of us started a permanent fund,

Edward C. Vick, Newark, N. J.
Secretary American Dahlia Society.

DAHLIA PRINCESS JULIANA.

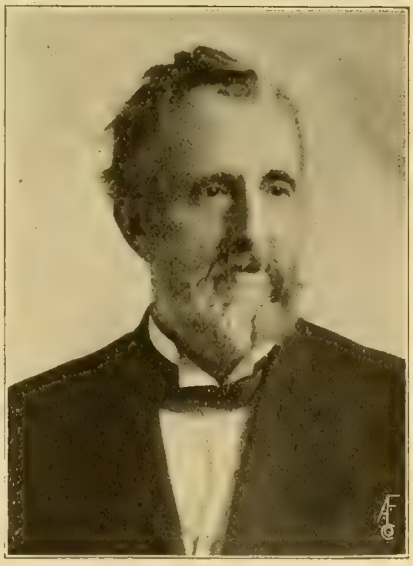
but this matter has not been pushed as it should have been; in fact, few of our members knew of it and its advantages. I sincerely hope that the present meeting will bring results to the end that we will have an increase in the number on the life membership roll. The California Dahlia Society, which is affiliated with our organization, is certainly doing wonderful work, and its members are surely interested, according to reports in the Bulletin. We also have the support of a number of garden clubs and other bodies of similar character, several having joined during the year, and we expect more will affiliate with us in the near future.

New varieties.—The increasing number of new varieties has made extra work for the society in preventing duplicates being placed on the market or flowers similar to those already in existence. In the last few years, since the formation of our society, there has been increased interest in the propagation of seedlings. Some of these, even those introduced by amateurs, are the equal to any that have ever been produced, while others, however, have been given names, although having no special qualities whatever over existing varieties. Our friends on the Pacific coast, as well as our members in other parts of the country, have produced some beautiful flowers that are distinct from any grown elsewhere. It appears from Plant Quarantine No. 37 that we will have to depend on this country for new varieties and I here say that I believe that we are equal to the situation and can hybridize and produce new types that are as good as any raised any place in the world.



Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.
President American Dahlia Society.

Nomenclature Committee.—The nomenclature committee of the society met in New York last spring with a view to classifying some of the hybrid types that have been introduced within the past year or two, a feature that puzzled the judges at the shows during that time. There has been a change in the formation of new types and hybrids produced for which no class has been formed. We believe that we have this straightened out for the present, but no one can say how long it will last, for we are only at the beginning of dahlia breeding and some astonishing novelties may be looked for in the near future.

Trial Grounds.—Some years ago after the organization of our society, we established trial grounds under the supervision of Professor Hall, at the New York experiment station at Geneva. Professor Hall, through sickness, had to relinquish the care of it, and the necessity of having one not too far from New York, confronted us. Professor Fraser of Storrs, Conn., undertook the work, although it was impossible to accomplish very much the past season on account of limited time. The results show for themselves as per report of the committee, which will be given at this meeting. We hope, with cooperation of members, another season, to be able to show the progress of the trial grounds to better advantage and for the good of all concerned by giving a complete list of the best varieties for the garden, for cut flower purposes and also the elimination of all old and practically useless varieties. We want the help this coming season of all our members, not only to increase our membership, but to increase the interest in the planting and the cultivation of dahlias. The dahlia stands for loyalty, and if you love the flower, and who does not who has any love for the beautiful, then be loyal to her cause, and "Say It With Flowers," and dahlia flowers whenever in season.

If you have a spare bulb, give it to your neighbor who has none, with the request that he plant it, and if he is successful, you will have made another dahlia lover and possibly a member of the society. We want members, and we want to see the dahlia growing in every home garden, wherever possible, so fellow member, not only grow dahlias, but talk dahlias, and the results will follow.

And now in conclusion, as your retiring president, I want to thank all, both officers and members, for your forbearance, courtesy and kindness to me as your presiding officer during the past year. We have striven together to bring the results we see before us today, and we can return to our homes, rejoicing that we have made this world look brighter and better to someone by seeing the beautiful coloring of nature as exhibited here today in this wonderful exhibition, and may the education given, be the means of making more homes and gardens beautiful and Godlike.

Secretary Pepper's Report.

Although taking office only on January 1, superseding, by appointment, Mr. Lewis, whose business duties prevented him longer acting as secretary, this report covers the period since our last annual meeting. While then quite unfamiliar with the details of the society's work, I have, through the very kind assistance of my brother officers and members of our directorate, endeavored to carry the society's work forward, and am pleased to report, that in spite of the somewhat adverse conditions experienced very generally in the commercial world, the society has had a fairly successful year.

The roll of membership at present contains 310 names, of whom 202 have already paid their dues for 1919. Four have asked to be dropped from the roll at the close of the year. Compared with last year's record, a slight advance in membership is shown, and, everything considered, the society is to be congratulated on having fully maintained its strength during a most trying period. The great and continued interest of our esteemed member, Geo. L. Stillman, of Westerly, R. I., in the society, has been demonstrated in the number of applications for membership sent in by him; and our worthy president, R. Vincent, Jr., has also rendered material assistance in this direction. Inasmuch as in all lines of amateur and professional work there is much personal association one with another engaged in it, it is a matter for regret that a very small proportion only of our new members join through the solicitation of our older members, generally. If each member would take it upon himself or herself to procure one new member during a year, the membership would be doubled in a very short time.

The society has published three issues of the Bulletin since our last annual meeting, and two more are anticipated before the close of the year, one about the end of the present month, the other in November. Thereafter, under instructions from our executive board, publication of the Bulletin will be continued bi-monthly. It is intended to enlarge the scope of the publication, making it more educative in character, and opening departments in the conduct of which our members are invited to join. The great improvement in the different forms of our cherished flower, and the various methods of advancing both quality and form now in practice, should furnish details for discussion which would make the six issues of the Bulletin during a year highly interesting. The circulation will, in future, be sufficiently valuable to advertisers to induce advertising patronage sufficient to at least defray a goodly portion of the expense of printing, which nowadays is a serious item, as most of us know who have anything to do with the production of printed matter. Our Bulletin is an important factor in our success, and if its scope can be enlarged a little, the resulting benefit to the society would be very great.

Our trial garden at the Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, has proved to be highly successful in its first year's operation. Those of your officers who had the privilege a day or two prior to this meeting to examine the exhibits planted in the garden can testify as to the great value of this splendid adjunct to our work, and the efforts of Professor Fraser to make the garden the success that it is, should be rewarded with the most hearty thanks of our membership. The report which Professor Fraser will make covers the results of his work and the awards recommended.

Your executive board has met several times during the year just closed, and at their meetings the various details of our work have been thoroughly discussed and directed. Rules for the conduct of our trial garden, and an official scale of points for judging dahlias were framed and adopted, as published in the Bulletin. The meetings of the board were well attended, and held at no slight sacrifice of time on the part of members, some of whom came long distances to attend.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Hollywood Gardens' New Home.

The accompanying illustration shows the handsome new store of the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., which was opened to the public, September 2, in the Washington Annex building, the corner location being an ideal one in the center of the shopping and theater district and directly opposite the city's leading hotel. One of the attractive features of the store, which is one block north of the former location, where the business was so successfully conducted for the past 10 years, is the fine window display, both on the entire front and side of the establishment, which also provides excellent light for the interior. The prevailing colors in the store decoration are peacock blue and light yellow, which as a background to the flowers offers a most pleasant effect. The store throughout is equipped with every modern convenience, and has 1,000 square feet of basement floor space where all commercial and design work receives attention. William Holmes, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., is manager of the decorative department. The Hollywood Gardens is one of the oldest members in the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, representing Seattle.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

There is no one feature that applies to the sale of cut flowers that has so greatly benefited the retail branch of the business as this combination of live-wire storekeepers. It looks very simple and easy now, but it took men with vision and energy, men who were, in the early days, up against the stone wall of indifference, and but for whose foresight and progressiveness, the whole scheme would still be in the visionary stage. All honor is due C. B. Whitnall, Henry Seibrecht, the late J. A. Valentine, Wm. F. Gude, Albert Pochelon, Irwin Berterman, and other of the pioneers, who surmounted all obstacles, and finally made practical the selling of flowers by telegraph and placed the association in its present enviable position.

The organization, under the brilliant leadership of President W. F. Gude, and that indefatigable worker, Secretary Albert Pochelon, has doubled its membership in the past three years, and thereby greatly increased its efficiency. With its 1,200 or more members, representatives of the business in every state in the union, there is being created new business of a magnitude that would not have been thought possible a few years ago.

The retail florist who does not tie up to this live wire organization, is missing one of the greatest aids to the creating of new business, as is the member, who after joining, sits tight and waits for the orders to come in. "He's a hustler," is generally the description that is given of the successful business man, one who is not satisfied to wait for the trade to come in, but who goes after it in every legitimate way. His success is in proportion to his energy. The F. T. D. sales system, or the creation of new business, by the machinery of the organization, is set in motion by each individual member in his own store. It has to be kept running to make it pay. Its capacity is unlimited, there being absolutely no clogging of its well-oiled wheels. There must, however, be a congenial atmosphere in which to get the best results. An enthusiasm and belief in its possibilities, that finds expression in publicity, so that every patron of the store is sure to know of this instantaneous, nation-wide delivery of cut flowers.

This absolutely necessary co-operation cannot be too forcibly presented to all members; the fact that flowers can be delivered to any city, town or community in the United States or Canada, within the hour or two hours, is known to comparatively few flower buyers, many of whom would be only too glad to make use of this service.

Every order successfully carried out means new customers for the association; the sender or recipient are alike enthusiastic over its novelty, and are sure to speak of it to their friends.

The extent of the business is variously estimated as now amounting to from $1,500,000 to $3,000,000 a year. This is a volume of trade that has practically been created and made possible by the association. In this, as in every new co-operative movement, there are little difficulties and annoyances that have to be overcome and smoothed out. They are much the same as are constantly occurring in one's own store. Customers sometimes expect to pay $1.50 per dozen for roses when the price is $3. Following a diplomatic explanation, they take the money's worth, of these or something else and go away better informed and satisfied. It is the same with the order received by telegraph. One cannot give $3 worth for $1.50, but the common sense way out, is to furnish $1.50 worth of the flowers desired, or substitute something that will make as good a showing as possible for the money.

The small order is a bugaboo to many who are prone to make a mountain out of a mole hill; they are glad enough to take small orders for home delivery themselves, for in their careful execution they are building up their trade, and should therefore welcome them from association members, as when satisfactorily filled, they are almost sure to increase their local trade.

Orders, as far as possible, should be made to read: Not specified quantities, but money's worth of the article desired. Many are continually doing things that they themselves condemn. An order received for 12 red roses, or two dozen carnations, without stating price, will at once call attention to the unbusiness like method of sending orders. It is always best to look your telegram over before sending, as one just received, and see if the order could be intelligently filled and delivered in your own store without further instructions.

The greatest care in orders should be given to correct spelling of names and initials; also, street numbers, north, south, east and west, and the state in which the city or town is situated. Spell the state out, as so many abreviations are similar.

Every order by telegram should be immediately verified by letter, as frequently this notice, arriving in time, contains in detail information that makes for the better execution of the order.

When orders are received, there should also be an immediate acknowledgement by mail, that the order is understood, and will receive best attention. This is of great assistance to your correspondent at times, which frequently occur, when the party receiving the flowers does not promptly acknowledge them, and there is then doubt as to whether the order was properly carried out.

Responsibility of all members has been established by the guarantee fund, but it is up to every retailer to improve and establish his credit by the prompt payment of all bills immediately on presentation. Carelessness in this important matter is nearly always attributed to inability, and future transactions are viewed with distruct.

The schedule of telegraph rates to all principle cities, which can be secured from the companies, should be on hand for immediate reference. When orders are for localities in which no members of the association are listed, it is best to send in care of the nearest member, rather than trust the message to uncertain addresses, which may be returned the next or several days later as undeliverable.

Next week in the Flower Shop.

As the season opens up, it will be some time before business gets to running smoothly, several days of brisk demand being followed by depressions that are quite discouraging. These conditions will not worry the man who is on the right track, who keeps in touch with his customers and whose stock, while not over abundant, is kept fresh and well displayed.

Goldenrod is now at its best, and while a wayside blossom, is well worth carrying. Many nice decorative effects can be arranged with goldenrod and fall asters, which are also coming in.

Hydrangeas are coloring up; they will soon be at their best, when greens and reds are found on the same head of bloom. They are cheap, and can be used in store and window decorations with good effect.

Dahlias will be the leading flower for the next three weeks. Select certain varieties. Delice is a fine pink, Minnie McCullough a good orange, and Jack Frost a real velvety Hadley red. Autumn King is a large fancy variety, one of the best. There are many other standard every-day sorts, several of which should be carried in stock. The recognized best wholesale method of handling dahlias, is to sell only on orders, which are packed at the dahlia farms, and delivered direct through the dealer to the stores, without repacking. Retailers then receive what they desire, and get the flowers in the best possible condition. In the old way of selecting 25 or 50 of a variety from a box of 200, at least 25 per cent of the flowers were more or less bruised, and the remainder, lying on counters in the wholesale house, open to the air, soon wilt or lose their fresh appearance. Dahlias are a little difficult to handle. They must be kept out of drafts, and not so crowded in vases as to bruise or crush one another. Any impact is almost sure to cause an injury that will discolor the flower. Feature a window of small vase baskets, filled with all one color dahlias, such as the orange-shaded Minnie McCullough, or Country Girl, a narrow ribbon bow on the handle, with a sprig or two of autumn leaves, and there is something at once attractive and salable. This can be repeated in other colored flowers and baskets. For variety, fill a lot of boxes with one dozen in each. Tie up a few empty boxes with a trifle of outside trimming, such as a sprig of autumn leaves, a spray of fall asters, and a nice dahlia. Arrange these with the filled boxes. They will make a showy window. A conspicuous price card will soon start them off on their way to "Say it With Flowers."

A wedding window is now in order, as the first two weeks in October is generally the period for many of these social events. While the orders for such occasions are generally given considerably ahead, yet for various reasons, many leave the decorations to the last, and there is yet time to make a bid for this work. A bride's shower bunch, a couple of bouquets or hat baskets for the maids, little baskets for the flower girls, and a decorated kneeling stool, will at once suggest the wedding. A card, "Wedding decorations our specialty," will suggest and cause a more careful inspection.

A card, calling attention to some little special the store is offering, sent to the list of customers, is almost sure to give an extra impetus and bring new business.

A fern special, describing plants in popular sizes for room decoration, may be just what is required to give the finishing touch.

The great variety of dahlias, now in the market, are worth a special invitation. It will be easy to get a few flowers of a number of varieties, with some especially large ones, as single specimens. These, each variety labeled, will attract attention, for which orders for the plants can be taken for delivery next spring.

It is getting near the time of the annual convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery at Buffalo, N. Y., October 14-15. Each recurrence of the annual meeting of this body of retailers is, on account of its rapidly growing membership, more interesting than the last. As a factor in obtaining new business, it is most important, and any retail florist who does not tie up to this organization, and feature its well laid plans for nation-wide delivery of cut flowers, is putting aside one of the greatest helps to his business. Get on the wire today. It will pay you.

National Publicity For Flowers.

The fall advertising in connection with our campaign commences with a two column display in the issue of Collier's Weekly for October 4, the circulation of which is over a million copies. Other prominent weeklies will be used at the start, and principally throughout November. The monthlies will be used throughout December, their dates of issue being early in November, so that Thanksgiving and Christmas business will be featured, colored pages being used in the Metropolitan Magazine, Century, Atlantic Monthly, Harper's, Scribner's, Review of Reviews, World's Work and Munsey's.

ONE OF J. BOLGIANO & SON'S FLEET OF TRUCKS.
They Were First Prize Winners in the Baltimore Automobile Parade.

Bolgiano's Prize Winning Trucks.

The fleet of automobiles of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., in the big automobile parade in that city, September 20, in which 1600 trucks were entered, one of which, is shown herewith, were the prize winners for the best decorated vehicles. The Bolgiano garden float, which led the fleet was very unique. It was composed of a miniature garden, which contained asparagus, beans, carrots, lettuce, beets, cabbage, endive and tomatoes, laid off in rows, and actually growing. The tomato vines showed quantities of fine rosy, red fruit. Flowers were not overlooked, as one corner of the garden was devoted to flowering plants, all in full bloom. Working the garden was an attractive young lady, attired in the garb of a farmerette, assisted by a farmer boy, who was propelling a wheelbarrow filled with vegetables, presumably just having picked them from the garden. The front of the truck was beautifully decorated with flowers and vines. Each department of Bolgiano's Seed Store was advertisingly represented by a truck in their fleet. A large two-ton vehicle carried a full load of poultry food and following this came a truck with a load of coops of live poultry. Other trucks followed, displaying articles of interest to the poultryman, also lawn grasses, implements and fertilizers for the lawn, window boxes, palms, ferns, and bulbs for home decoration.

Our committees would have gone much further, had their original plans been possible of accomplishment. It is not their policy to contract for more publicity than the funds in sight will warrant. Space in the mediums used is very expensive, and a $20,000 appropriation is not made without considerable thought. The committees' work, as laid down, is handicapped by the very slow materialization of subscriptions. The influx of contributions may be quite good for a week or two, then comes a lull, showing that many florists are not bothering themselves with this great and important matter of publicity for flowers. There are probably 13,000 florists who can well afford to subscribe, who have as yet shown no disposition to do so, although they must admit that the campaign has been wonderfully effective. East and west, north and south, our slogan has become well implanted in the public mind, and it is up to every florist to render assistance to keep it there—and this means, that he must contribute according to his means.

This should not be allowed to be a campaign of the few, as all are interested in proportion to their investments. There has been no dictation as to how much a florist should give—that is a matter entirely for him to decide. In other lines of business, where campaigns such as ours are conducted, contributions are on a specific basis, and no difficulty is experienced in collecting the fund aimed for. And we should have no difficulty; if every florist in this country should contribute only $5, our fund would be easily completed. As it is, several of our wise and up-to-date members of the trade have contributed one hundred times this amount. You gentlemen who have not subscribed might well ask yourselves why they have done this. It could not have been that they alone were likely to benefit, but rather that the interests of the whole industry would be advanced. Are you willing, are you satisfied, that others should bear an expense which is incurred as much for your benefit as for anyone else in the trade? We are sure you are not. Instead of spending $20,000, this fall, we ought to be in a position to spend $50,000, and the money would be forthcoming if you did your part. Just give further thought to this very important undertaking and send in the contribution which we know your conscience prompts you to send—be a "regular fellow" and let us add your name to our honor roll.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Spokane Dahlia Exhibition.

More than 3,000 dahlia blooms, representing upward of 200 varieties, were on display at a recent exhibition of this flower in Spokane, Wash., there being two extensive collections by professional growers as well as a number of good entries by amateurs. The city park department had an excellent display, the arrangement being in the form of an oval bed with a fountain in the center, among the noteworthy varieties being City of Portland, George Walters and Hortulanus Witte, the flowers being excellent in form and attractive in color. Mrs. C. E. Bartholomew, of Springdale, and Mrs. J. N. Nankernis, of Moscow, entered large assortments and J. P. Graves showed a number of well-grown specimens. Mrs. J. N. Othmer, of Spokane, presented a new seedling variety, North Central, the flower being a mulberry red in color, and Charles Wurrs, also a local exhibitor, featured Jean Sharmat, yellow and orchid lavender in color.

TRADE SHOWS CONSISTENT GAIN.

Business improvement is manifested daily, sales comparing favorably with those of a year ago, the figures of which were in reality abnormal, and those of 1917 would perhaps give a better basis. Outdoor stock, with the exception of dahlias, is getting poor in quality and the supply is short. Receipts of American Beauty have been very small, although the quality is good and prices range from $6 to $40 per 100. Columbia, Russell and Premier are of fine form, but the supply does not meet requirements. All roses clean up daily at good figures. A few carnations arrive, but they are not of the best, the stems being short and flowers small. A few of the early chrysanthemums are also seen, the number being limited. Asters are practically a thing of the past, and their end in most cases will not be regretted. The gladioli supply has shortened and the few received bring good returns. Dahlias are now the backbone of the market and will continue to rule until frost. Some of the finest specimens ever seen in this market are being received each day from New Jersey. Yellow daisies have made their appearance, but as yet they are small and do not move any too well. The supply of greens is adequate. The steel strike has not as yet affected business in this city, but a falling off in shipping orders to nearby towns has been noticed. At present, prospects seem bright for a settlement and the return of the men to their work.

NOTES.

The Lambourne Floral Co., of Alliance, O., are now cutting some of the finest Russell, Columbia and Premier roses seen for some time.

John Mitchell, of the Alpha Floral Co., and John Harris, of Harris Bros., have returned from a trip to the mountains.

E. C. Ludwig is still cutting outdoor gladioli at his farm in Butler county.

OCTOBER PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

Business in all branches has shown improvement during the month, and prospects for October are good in every way. Receptions and parties are being resumed after the usual lull during the summer months, and all of the florists are expecting a good season as a result. Funeral work has not been quite as active as earlier in the summer. On the whole, the tone of the trade is satisfactory, and prospects are considered bright. Rains, which have fallen recently, have helped the growers, and there is a fair quality of stocks on hand. Receipts are now confined almost exclusively to roses, which are in good supply and are much better than the earlier offerings. They include Sunburst, Premier, Russell and Ophelia and sell from $3 to $5 per dozen. The first chrysanthemums are now on the market, and are rather small. They come from local growers, and move at the rate of about $4 per dozen. Gladioli are now practically over and only a few are offered. Dahlias are arriving in good quantities and are selling well at $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Cactus varieties are expected soon. Asters are practically gone. Sweet peas and carnations are now found at the local florists in good supply, and sell readily. Some demand is reported for other seasonable lines of flowers. Greens are rather plentiful.

NOTES.

The Munk Floral Co., South High street, will give each lady who attends the coming luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Deshler hotel, a small bouquet of flowers. The ladies will be the guests of honor at the luncheon.

It is expected that the sale of the Fairview Floral Co., located on the Henderson pike, will soon be announced. Negotiations have been in progress for some time. The purchaser is said to be Norman R. Coslett.

T. J. Ludwig, florist, 82 North High street, is having a good run on roses and dahlias and also on other seasonable stock. He predicts a good business during the fall and early winter.

The opening of the football season at the Ohio State University always stimulates the demand for chrysanthemums, and already there is quite a business traced to that institution.

BETTER DEMAND AND IMPROVED QUALITY.

The market is showing a decided increase in trade all along the line. The large flower buyers who have been out of town all summer are returning, and a better grade of stock is now in demand than for some time past. There has been a steady call for funeral work, which has helped to move a lot of stock that otherwise would be unsalable for other purposes. The chrysanthemum now has the center of the stage, and is in great favor. The demand continues brisk, and growers and retailers alike are receiving good figures for their stock. Chrysolora, Crocus and Crystal Gem are the predominant varieties offered, although a few good bronze and pink are noted occasionally. Pompons are not so plentiful as last week and clean up nicely. Shipping trade is reported as having opened up in favorable shape, and large consignments leave the city daily for distant points. While there is a large cut of roses, first class stock is on the short side. There is a fine grade of Ulrich Brunner arriving, which is the only long stemmed rose to be had. There are no Russell to speak of, and no American Beauties at all, Columbia and Ophelia are most in evidence, but there is plenty of room for improvement in the stock offered. Red roses are quite plentiful and move slowly. There are no white roses to be had. Cecile Brunner is again on the short side. There are very few good carnations coming in. Good prices are being received for whatever stock arrives. Asters are beginning to show the effect of the long season, and only a poor grade of stock is coming in. Gladioli may still be seen everywhere. They have had an unusually long season, and with few exceptions, have been a profitable crop. Red and pink are the only colors available. Dahlias are still abundant, but are cheap and little called for. Gardenias are very scarce and bring firm prices. Cattleyas have begun to come in in larger quantities than for many months, and are selling well. These popular flowers have been out of the market so long that their reappearance is hailed with delight by all the stores. Violets are increasing in supply rapidly, and are proving very popular. Princess of Wales is the only variety offered as yet. The stems are somewhat short, but this does not seem to detract from their favor. The supply of outdoor flowers, such as delphiniums, scabiosa, etc., is getting short, showing that they will soon be out of the market. Some fairly good sweet peas are to be seen occasionally. Cut cyclamens are to be had in limited quantities and are popular. There is a nice supply of Cibotium Schiedei in various sizes that are much in public favor. Celosios in various colors are also being seen everywhere. There is some excellent Primula obconica being sent in, which is greatly needed, as the supply of flowering plants has been very limited for some time. Cyclamens are being sent in in greater quantities now than for months, and move readily at good prices. All varieties of Boston ferns can be had. There is always a steady demand for this stock. There is an ample supply of palms, but they are not in much demand just now. The cut of adiantum and asparagus is beginning to shorten up considerably, as at the present writing there is just about enough to go around. All other green goods are plentiful.

NOTES.

Ferrari Bros. are in with a greatly needed cut of Cattleya labiata. Their stock is in the finest possible condition, and there is every indication that they will cut heavily from this time forward. The rose houses are also looking well and a steady cut is being sent into this market every day. Manager Victor Ferrari says his gardenia houses will soon have a large crop ready to cut. He is enthusiastic over the prospects for a heavy business this season.

The many friends of W. V. Eberly, for many years manager of the California Nursery Company, at Niles, will be overjoyed to learn that his wife, who wandered away from a hospital at that city while undergoing treatment for a nervous disorder, has been found. She was discovered in a vineyard at Livermore, very weak and emaciated, but is now on the road to recovery. Mr. Eberly had offered a reward of $1,000 for news of her whereabouts.

The Art Floral Co. has had a very busy week. During the early part there was a continuous delivery of baskets of flowers to President and Mrs. Wilson at the Hotel St. Francis. Large quantities of the choicest chrysanthemums and orchids were lavished on the president and his wife by admirers. The firm kept up a beautiful window display every day.

The dahlia show held at Santa Rosa last week was a decided success. Many of our prominent dahlia specialists were in attendance and put up fine displays. The chrysanthemum show will be held during the latter part of November and promises to be as successful as its predecessors. J. S. Sweet will be the manager. He has conducted all the former shows with much ability.

C. Kooyman & Co. report that the sales for florists' bulbs have been far ahead of former years. This, they claim, is undoubtedly due to the excellent prices that growers of bulbous stock, such as freesias and gladioli, have received for their crop during the past season. The trade in supplies of all kinds is steady.

At Darbee's, on Hyde street, the shipping of fall stock is beginning to assume large proportions. Chrysanthemums are the principal item going forward now, but violets will be ready to ship about the middle of next month. Mrs. Darbee grows a large part of the violets she uses in her shipping trade.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. were called upon to supply large quantities of orchids and chrysanthemums to the presidential party. They were fortunate in securing a large cut of Cattleya labiata from their grower, all of which was used in baskets presented to Mrs. Wilson. JAMES T. LYNCH.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the florists' club, September 23, brought a good attendance, and the interest manifested by the members gave indications of a season of unusual activity. Complete reports were made by the chairmen of the various committees in charge of the affairs in connection with the convention of the Society of American Florists and the meeting of the American Gladiolus Society in this city, and the payment of a few belated bills was ordered. The question of a week to be devoted to the advancement of the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," was fully discussed, and the merits of such a feature were appreciated by all, but the time selected by the clubs in eastern cities was considered impractical here, because of the great scarcity of flowers so early in the fall season. November was considered more suitable, and the plan will be carried out at that time by the club.

Robert Plumb, chairman of the judges who passed upon the recent exhibits of the public school children, reported in detail on the displays made by the scholars of flowers grown by them from seeds furnished by the Twentieth Century Club. Numerous prizes were awarded, consisting principally of plants donated by the florists' club, as well as many members individually.

Philip Breitmeyer made a strong appeal to members to work actively in the club's interest the coming season and made many suggestions for adding interesting features to the club's activities.

A series of entertainments throughout the season was a suggestion by Treasurer J. K. Stock that was heartily approved. Harry Taylor, the newly-elected secretary of the club, made his initial appearance in that capacity and read some trade paper excerpts of timely importance.

The cigars were passed in the name of A. J. Stahelin, whose home was gladdened by the arrival of a baby girl last week. Mrs. Stahelin and the little daughter are both doing nicely.

Joseph Streit, manager of the bowling team, announced the opening of the season occurred September 25 at the Broadway alleys.

NOTES.

Robert Plumb went to the hospital September 24 to undergo an operation on his ear. He has been a sufferer for some time from the ailment which it is hoped the operation will eliminate.

Robert Rahaley and A. J. Stahelin went to Shingleton, Mich., September 23 to enjoy a week's fishing.

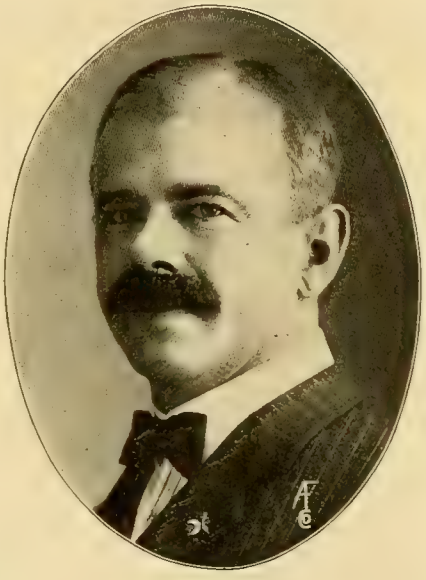
DEMAND IS SPASMODIC.

Business during the past week has not been up to standard, although there have been spasmodic flurries at times. Chrysanthemums are becoming quite plentiful and now sell at $1.50 to $3 per dozen, the offerings being Smith's Advance and Golden Glow. Dahlias this season have been a failure due to excessive rain. Gladioli are now passing out. Cattleyas arrive in small numbers and are readily disposed of at $18 to $24 per dozen. Oncidiums bring $4 and $5 per 100 flowers. Lily of the valley is now held at $17 per 100. Roses are quite plentiful and reasonable in price. Carnations also show improvement. Easter lilies are now out of the question.



The Late J. B. Deamud.

NOTES.

The florists' association of this city will hold its next meeting at the Parker House, October 7, with a dinner at which music and entertainment will be a feature. Mr. Hicks, of the chamber of commerce, will talk on subjects of interest to the trade.

Henry Wheeler, a successful orchid grower, has returned from the Rangley lakes, where he spent the summer with his family.

Hamlin & Co. have opened their new store in the Littler building, after considerable delay resulting from the labor situation.

Thomas Roland is now shipping quantities of cyclamens, begonias, crotons and ferns from his Nahant range.

John J. O'Brion's store reports good cut flower and plant sales. He is preparing for a busy fall season.

Houghton & Gorney are enjoying good business with a large demand for funeral work.

John J. Cassidy reports good business, with numerous large funeral orders.

John B. Deamud.

John B. Deamud, for many years prominent in the Chicago wholesale cut flower trade, died at Pontiac, Mich., September 25. Falling from a tree in his orchard at Caro, Mich., last autumn, he sustained serious injuries, including a broken shoulder-blade. He seemed to improve for a time, but his condition had been growing steadily worse from last March to the end.

Mr. Deamud was born in Dunville, Ont., January 12, 1866. In 1869 the family moved to Saginaw, Mich., where he engaged in the grocery business after school. At the age of 19 he moved to Chicago, entering the employ of J. C. Vaughan, and while there visited Europe in his employer's interest. In 1893 he entered into co-partnership with O. P. Bassett, under the name of J. B. Deamud & Co., handling the products of the Bassett greenhouses. This arrangement was terminated in 1895 and the following year he opened the Illinois Cut Flower Co., afterwards the J. B. Deamud Co., remaining at the head of that concern until January 1, 1914, when he returned to Vaughan's Seed Store. He was a life member of the Society of American Florists and practically identified with the important work of the national flower shows at St. Louis and Chicago. At the local exhibitions of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, before the war he rendered valuable assistance and was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand in the cause of horticulture.

In 1890 he married Mrs. Elliott (Miss Wilder) who, with one son, Wilder S., survives, also his father, who resides at Caro, Mich., a sister, Mrs. Scott, of Detroit, and a brother, William H. Deamud, of Port Huron.

Funeral services, conducted by the Masons, were held at Lane's chapel, West 63rd street, Chicago, with burial at Oakwoods cemetery. The trade was well represented and the floral offerings numerous, the latter including a beautiful wreath of Gladiolus Myrtle from Harry C. Rowe, this variety having been named by the raiser, A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., after Mr. Deamud's daughter-in-law.

THE American propagator and plant grower has his opportunity now.

THOSE who have neglected the coal supply must hurry up now and pay more.

GLADIOLI have brought materially higher prices in the cut flower markets the past two weeks.

Personal.

Professor J. C. Blair, of the horticultural department, University of Illinois, has been touring the horticultural sections of Colorado, Utah, California, Oregon and British Columbia, and expects to return to Urbana about October 10.

F. T. D. Convention Headquarters.

The Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has been chosen as official headquarters of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association during its meeting in that city, October 14-15. Reservations for accommodations can be made through S. A. Anderson, chairman of the hotel committee, 440 Main street, Buffalo, who requests that owing to the fact that such accommodations are rather limited, it will be to the advantage of all desiring reservations to make application at once.

Denver Chrysanthemum Show.

Chrysanthemum and rose growers from all parts of the United States are invited to exhibit novelties of chrysanthemums at the annual chrysanthemum show to be held in Denver, Colo., October 29-31, under the auspices of the Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulture.

The society is offering a $50 cash prize for the best varieties of new chrysanthemums, novelties since 1917, and a $25 prize for second best; also, a $25 cash prize for the best 50 flowers of the new rose, Premier, grown in Colorado.

The show will be staged in the large municipal auditorium, and is supported by the city administration, as well as by the leading society people of the city. The Denver flower show is an annual affair and unique, in that it is free to all. No entry charge is made to the exhibitors, and no admission charge to the public.

Exhibits should be addressed to the secretary, charges prepaid, and he will see that they are properly staged. Adam Kohankie, superintendent of Washington park, Denver, is manager of the show, C. R. Root, of the Colorado Seed Co., is president of the society and of the flower show committee, and S. R. DeBoer, 208 Tramway building, is secretary in charge of the exhibition.

Society of American Florists.

COLLEGE SECTION MEETING.

During the convention of the Society of American Florists held in Detroit, Mich., a small group of college florists held a meeting in one of the ante-rooms of the exhibition hall. Professor H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, was the temporary chairman. He suggested that the college florists form an informal organization within the S. A. F. Members present were heartily in favor of this, and proceeded to elect a president and secretary-treasurer. Dr. A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., nominated H. B. Dorner for the office of president and Mr. Dorner was unanimously elected. Alfred C. Hottes, of Ohio State University, Columbus, was nominated for the position of secretary-treasurer and elected to that office. An informal discussion was held, in which an attempt was made to formulate the aims of the organization, which may be briefly stated as follows: The college florists should be able to meet together each year to hold discussions relating to the problems of teaching and investigation in floriculture. The organization would give an opportunity for the florists to present to the investigator his problems, and for the college man to cooperate with the florist in making plain to him the ideals toward which instructional work and investigation are carried on in the colleges.

It was suggested that all those members of the S. A. F. who are engaged in teaching definite floricultural courses or conducting research in floriculture in the universities and colleges, would be eligible for membership. Professor Dorner also suggested that a booth be maintained at the annual conventions, at which place some members would be present to answer questions relating to the problems of the florists.

Those present at the meeting were H. B. Dorner and E. C. Volz, University of Illinois; E. J. Wilde, of Pennsylvania State College; A. C. Beal, of Cornell University; Jas. Whiting, of Massachusetts Agricultural College and A. C. Hottes, of Ohio State University.

It is hoped that all instructors who are engaged in teaching definite horticultural courses, will correspond with the secretary, so that they may be notified of any developments in the work of the college section.

ALFRED C. HOTTES, Sec'y.

Thanks Friends for Flowers.

Mrs. J. B. Deamud and her son, Wilder S. Deamud, desire us to tender their heartfelt thanks to many friends for the beautiful floral offerings on the occasion of the late Mr. Deamud's funeral.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE.

Business is very good at this writing and stock in all lines is cleaning up nicely at much better prices. American Beauty roses are selling at high figures with hardly ever any surplus to speak of. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier are also commanding very satisfactory prices. Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney, Ophelia, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Hearst, Montrose, Champ Weiland, My Maryland and the other varieties grown for this market not already mentioned are in strong demand and are good property this week. Gladioli are in short supply, with Mrs. Francis King bringing $4 to $5 per 100. Asters in the better grades are selling fast, but there appears to be plenty of the inferior grades obtainable at $1 to $2 per 100. Carnations are selling fast at $2 to $4 per 100 with the customers looking for more. Chrysanthemums are having a good call and fancy Golden Glow have sold for as high as $4 to $5 per dozen the past week. Pompons clean up quickly at good prices. A few dahlias are seen, but they are not much of a factor in the market. Orchids are more plentiful, but continue to bring high prices and the same holds true for lily of the valley. Calendulas are seen at some of the stores in good sized quantities together with a limited supply of snapdragons. Daisies are included in the offerings. Outdoor stock has seen its best days and the buyer is now devoting his attention to indoor grown flowers unless he is able to pick up a bargain in asters or gladioli. Greens appear to be plentiful and the first shipments of boxwood have made their appearance. Business has been very good notwithstanding the strikes and everyone is enthusiastic over the outlook for a brisk fall and winter trade.

NOTES.

Peter Papes, of the Central Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., is spending a few days here this week. Peter Duris returned September 29 from a visit in Ohio.

Ed. Martin, who has been on the sick list for several months, is back on the job at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store.

Lawrence Mathes left this week for Akron, O., to take a position with The Heepe Co. of that city. He was recently with the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., and at one time with the Wieland-Risch Co.

President Miller of the American Bulb Co., is at Seattle, Wash., superintending the distribution of four cars of lily bulbs, including those for their Canadian customers.

E. P. Neiman, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo., passed through here this week on his way home from the east, including a visit at his old home at Pottstown, Pa.

At Joseph Foerster Co.'s store chrysanthemums have made their appearance in quantity, especially Golden Glow, which appears to be at its best this season.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. have no complaint to make in regard to business, the demand being surprisingly heavy with a nice cleanup in stock right along.

Herbert Baumann, who was confined to the St. Mary's hospital for several weeks, has recovered sufficiently to return to his home at Niles Center.

Frank Hagen, of the John Kruchten Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his brother, Otto, whose death occurred recently.

Kansas City, Mo.

SHORTAGE IN SUPPLY NOTICEABLE.

The local supply is now limited, much stock being received from outside markets. With a fairly active call, it is at times difficult to fill all orders properly. Ophelia and Russell roses are quite plentiful; in fact, they are forced to take care of the bulk of the demand. Asters and gladioli have about finished their season, and the few that remain are not much of a factor, with the exception of a few late varieties. Carnations are arriving, but only a few each day, and the quality is none too good. Dahlias are improving with the cool weather, both in quality and quantity. Chysanthemums are in, but are none too numerous. Some good pot plants of begonias, cyclamens and similar stock are to be had.

NOTES.

The Amateur Flower Growers' Association, and the Kansas City Gardeners' Association, held their annual show at the Hotel Muehlebach, and the event proved a great success, especially in the exhibits of Chinese woolflowers, dahlias, roses, asters, hardy phlox, zinnias and coxcombs. The displays of fruits were also most excellent. After the awards were made, the exhibits were sent to local hospitals.

H. Kusik & Co. report very good business, but the supply of stock hardly sufficient for requirements. Ophelia and Russell roses and gladioli were features here. Heavy orders for wire work indicate that out-of-town customers are stocking up for the winter.

T. J. Noll & Co. report roses coming in more plentifully, but still short of requirements. Carnations and chrysanthemums are among the offerings at this establishment.

W. J. Barnes had a heavy call for funeral work during the week, as well as numerous orders for bouquets to be sent to hospital patients. He is cutting some excellent late gladioli, fine dahlias and tritomas.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop opened September 29 under the management of H. R. Neff. It is complete in its appointments and should draw good patronage.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. reports stock more plentiful and sales improving. At Pleasant Hill, 2,500 square feet of glass are being added to the pot plant range.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a big week in funeral orders. Stock is now coming in better and wedding orders are more numerous.

A. F. Barbe is cutting good roses and reports an increase in funeral work during the week.

John Klauss, of Greenwood, Mo., is sending in fine cuts of roses.

Visitors: P. A. Manson, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; L. H. Archias, Sedalia, Mo.; L. R. Bohannon and wife, Chicago; George A. Kaupp, Nevada, Mo.; M. Lambert, La Porte, Ind.; J. A. Brown, Capitola, Calif. E. J. B.

DEMAND IN GENERAL ESPECIALLY GOOD.

With an unusually strong call for stock to be used for funeral work, September 22, the week opened up with a scramble for flowers which continued throughout. The demand in general was excellent for this time of the year, but good stock was by far short of requirements. While the cut of roses is fair, it is the other lines which are decreasing instead of helping along. The supply of carnations is still limited, and although a good many have short stems, the most are sold before they arrive. White and yellow

NOTES.

After being torn up and closed since the first of May, North avenue, one of the highways leading west out of this city, is now completed. The Heitman-Oestreicher Co., located on this street, report quite a financial loss during the reconstruction, especially during the sale of pot stock during May and June.

Following the doctor's advice that complete rest was imperative, we refrained before this of breaking the news of the illness of Mrs. John G. Heitman, who suffered a paralytic stroke of the left leg and arm, August 25. We are pleased to report that she is progressing nicely.

The harvest dance held September 27 at Keipper's park, was well attended and everyone had a fine time. The party gathered at the Gust Rusch & Co.'s store, where pedestrians thought a mask ball was on. Autos conveyed the party to their destination.

Alexander Klokner, now of Wauwatosa, but a pioneer in the florist business of this city, is offering his range, dwelling house and garage for sale.

The new life members of the Society of American Florists in this vicinity report the arrival of their diplomas, all framed, last week.

Mrs. Nick Zweifel underwent an operation, not of a serious character, at a local hospital, September 22.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER BRINGS SHORTAGE.

While the demand during the week has been fairly active, there has been a scarcity of supply due to cool, rainy weather. Gladioli and asters are poor in quality. Roses are now showing good form, with American Beauty alone, not up to the usual standard. Much activity in social circles is apparent for the fall season, as advance orders are being booked in goodly numbers for the teas of the debutantes as well as numerous balls.

NOTES.

Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, of Cleveland, O., is in this city in the interests of advertising of the F. T. D. convention. Her mission was very successful and liberal notices and display will be features in the local papers.

A debutante reception and dance, September 19, gave S. A. Anderson a large decoration, in which garden flowers were used in profusion, in addition to American Beauty and other roses and polypodium.

BUSINESS APPROACHES FALL PROPORTIONS.

The weather here for the past week has been fair, and at times rather warm, with the result that demand has not yet awakened into its customary fall activity. On the whole, however, business has been making very satisfactory increases, and is picking up day by day. Market conditions are fair. Flowers are plentiful, and their quality is good. Asters have been extremely plentiful this season, and stock has been exceptionally good until last week. From now on, they will rapidly disappear from the market. Roses have been good stand-bys all during the summer, and some fine cuts of Ophelia, Columbia and Milady have been made. There always seems to be a good demand for them. One of the best stocks now are rubrum lilies which are of excellent quality and color. There are a few gladioli still on the market, but they are going fast. There has been an unusually heavy call for wedding bouquets and decorations of late, which are welcome orders, as they generally run into money. The call for funeral work has been heavy at intervals.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

At the October meeting of the retail florists' association, the big question that will come up for discussion will be Sunday closing. In June, when the present club was organized, 26 florists after a thorough discussion of the matter, decided to close their stores on all Sundays throughout the year with the exception of those that happened to fall on Mothers' day, Easter and Christmas. They solemnly signed their names to an agreement to this effect. Since then, due to one pretext or another, there have been some defections from the ranks, almost entirely in the outlying districts. This threatens to destroy the entire movement, and again open all the stores. This would be very discouraging to those progressive florists who want to observe Sunday as a day of rest, and who desire to raise the business to the same plane others are on. The public is now educated, and florists are experiencing little difficulty in switching Sunday orders to Saturday.

NOTES.

Max Spanner has entirely redecorated the interior of his Madison Avenue flower shop, and it looks very attractive. The color scheme is gray and black instead of the previous pure white. Max states that business is beginning to pick up.

Schramm Brothers have repainted the exterior of their store on Cherry street, and the place now looks very attractive. They are also remodeling one of their greenhouses and installing a new boiler.

DAHLIAS NOW THE BIG FACTOR.

Dahlias now reign supreme and are available in any quantity or variety. Aside from them, no other flower is plentiful. Orchids are off crop at present, as in the other eastern cities, and for bridal bouquets there is very little to suggest in white, except roses, which are few in number and poor in quality. The demand for the Hebrew New Year brought a call for quite a lot of stock as usual, cleaning up the market of everything that was fit to use. A few white chrysanthemums were seen during the week, the advance guard of the season.

NOTES.

Great preparations are being made by the entertainment committee of the florists' club for the meeting, October 21. This is to be a big get-together party, and it is the aim of those in charge to have every florist, his mother, sister and sweetheart present. It promises to be the greatest florists' night ever heard of in this city.

Tickets have been issued for the annual dahlia show at the farm of Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., at Cowenton, and preparations are being made for a large attendance. The trip by automobile is a good way to enjoy a pleasant afternoon. Try it!

FINE DAHLIAS NOW RULE MARKET.

Reports of the past week's business are very encouraging, stock in general having sold up very well each day. Roses, in particular, were scarce and in good demand from both local and out-of-town buyers. Dahlias, which are now a great factor, were never finer at this season. Owing to the success of last year's crop, growers have paid particular attention to their plants, giving them all the helps possible, and finally disbudding for large flowers and long stems, the percentage of which, in all shipments, is greater than ever before. The daily shipments are large, but all good stock is sold at satisfactory prices. Shipping methods are improving. Some growers are putting up de luxe packages, lining them with green or white waxed tissue. The commission men do not trust or wait for express delivery, but meet the boats at the ferry, and in this way, save several hours. Some growers bring their stock in direct from the farms on their own trucks, thus insuring careful handling and early delivery. There are still quite a few asters, but the dahlias will soon crowd out all except the purple. Carnations are increasing in quantity and quality. There are a few Easter lilies. A very useful flower is the blue fall aster. These long, graceful, feathery sprays are beautiful in all kinds of work, and find a ready sale. Gladioli are almost over. Chrysanthemums are increasing, but the earlier sorts have to fight for a place with the choice dahlias. The first of the single violets are in but they have little to recommend them but the fragrance. Cattleyas are still very scarce. Greens of all kinds are in good demand.

September 29—There were large shipments of dahlias of excellent quality, the weather being very favorable to their growth. They met with good demand at satisfactory prices. Roses are more plentiful but there is still a shortage of the better grades. There is a call for lily of the valley, but it is almost out of sight in this market.

LOCAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Chairman Grakelow is well satisfied with the progress that is being made in the plans for the local publicity campaign. Every retail florist in the city should be present at the meeting of the club, October 7, and will be if the committee's plans do not miscarry. The matter is being gone into thoroughly, letters having been received from a number of the middle western cities, where such campaigns has been most successful, giving detailed accounts of their methods and experiences.

NOTES

Cardinal Mercier, the Belgian prelate, met with a "Say it with Flowers" welcome from the florists of this city. The automobile which was waiting at the North Philadelphia station to convey him to the center of the city, was elaborately decorated with flowers contributed by the wholesale houses. Charles H. Grakelow's initiative, in welcoming with flowers all distinguished visitors, was again put in motion, in which idea he was backed by the trade, and in consequence the cardinal was delighted, and expressed himself as very much pleased at this evidence of their good will. Such demonstrations with flowers, as were seen in New York, this city and Washington, to welcome General Pershing, and these for Cardinal Mercier, are evidences of the get-together spirit of the progressive members of the trade, who while they are holding up the fair name of their cities, are also presenting flowers as a decorative and necessary feature for all such occasions. All such demonstrations have a value far above their cost in popularizing flowers. Mr. Grakelow's idea, and it is one that cannot be commended too highly, is a "welcome to our city" with a beautiful basket or vase of flowers for the head of all organizations or societies who hold their conventions here.

The H. H. Battles window, and that of his Century Flower Shop, next door, are examples of decorative schemes that are wonderful in their color effects. This is more particularly true of his elegant store, than that of his popular priced flower shop, where there are no strictly decorative displays except those made of choice decorated flowering and foliage plants, baskets and vases of cut flowers, all featured for quick sales. The interior of the store, in which the high ceiling is canopied with hundreds of small vase baskets, of which there are always a number filled and ready for immediate delivery, is in its many inviting and salable features, an example of the up-to-date shop, as it ought to be.

The frame of half the large new 600 foot rose house at Roelefs, for the Jos. Heacock Co., is finished, and glazing was commended, September 26. It is expected the entire structure will be completed before November 1. Exceptionally choice Hadley roses for the season are a feature of their present offerings. A large addition to their stock of cattleyas was made recently. The plants are well established, from which good crops are looked for the coming season.

W. J. Stokes, an outside local salesman for the H. F. Michell Co., was stricken with apoplexy, September 26, which caused death in a few hours. He leaves a wife and two children. A system of group insurance on the lives of all their employes, has just been put in force, the premium for which is paid by the firm. Mr. Stokes' family will be the first beneficiary of this insurance, receiving the sum of $600. The amount varies with the years of service.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will hold its annual fall exhibition at the First Regiment armory, November 5-8. A national publicity booth is to be one of the features. K.

BUSINESS OF FAIR VOLUME.

Business was fair during the past week, but not particularly active. There was a heavy rain storm September 23, the remaining days being fair. Fine autumn weather keeps many of the best flower buyers out of the city. The supply of roses has not been heavy. The specials have cleaned up fairly well, but the shorter varieties have been slow, as asters and dahlias have been extensively used in funeral work. Orchids continue high priced. There is a marked increase in the supply of chrysanthemums, Unaka, Smith's Advance and Golden Glow being about the only varieties that are on the market in moderate quantity, and it will be as well if the supply remains moderate until the dahlias are well cut out. The aster supply is on the wane. While carnations are not plentiful, there seems to be enough arriving to supply the demand and some of them are good for the season. A very limited supply of lily of the valley is on the market. It is held at high prices, and the buyers are not falling over each other to get it. It has been scarce and high for so long a time that they seem to have turned to the white bouvardia and other stocks. Of course, there are occasions when lily of the valley is bound to sell, if it is on the market. The trade in general, seems hopeful as to the prospects of the season about to open, but as an old timer used to say: "Do not count your chickens till they are hatched, then look out for hawks."

September 29. — The week opened with splendid weather, which, as previously noted, is not particularly favorable to our business. The supply of roses continues light, but there is about enough to supply the demand, which is also limited. More orchids are arriving, and prices are weaker. The chrysanthemum supply continues to increase, but they move slowly. That will be the situation until the dahlias, gladioli and asters are out of the way.

NOTES.

Miss Helen M. Totty, only daughter of Charles H. and Mrs. Totty, of Madison, N. J., sailed from this port for France, September 20. She won one of the scholarships offered by the French government to American girls. She takes up her studies at the French college, October 1. Miss Totty will be pleasantly remembered by many who have met her with her parents at the conventions of the Society of American Florists, and we join in wishing her a safe and prosperous voyage across the ocean, and the wide sea of life.

"Johnny comes marching home again." Among the latest arrivals from overseas are Harry Bunyard, who went over for the Y. M. C. A.; George Polykranas, Jr., who enlisted in the American army two years ago, when he was 16 years old, and Adam Krebbs, formerly employed by Leo Klein, who has gone back to his old place. Down on Cortlandt street, Louis Scott, a brother of the late John Scott, is back with Peter Henderson & Co., after a year on the other side in the American army.

James C. Clark, of the Henry A. Dreer establishment, Riverton, N. J., accompanied by his daughter, attended the dahlia exhibition, and acted as a judge. He states that his father, John Clark, long connected with the United States botanical gardens, Washington, D. C., is now living in Scotland, and though 89 years old, is yet quite active. Many florists, who in the past, have visited the botanical gardens, will have pleasant recollections of Mr. Clark.

A. T. Bunyard, the retailer, has recently returned from an automobile trip that extended to Montreal, Quebec. Mrs. Bunyard and children accompanied him. An unfortunate incident of the trip was that their eight-year-old son was stricken with appendicitis and had to be operated on in a Rochester hospital, his mother remaining with him.

Alfred Kottmiller arranged a fine decoration, September 25, at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, for a dinner given by the Nippon Shipping Company. It was a Japanese decoration, chrysanthemums and other national features being noteworthy. One of the guests, now on a visit to this country, is said to be the "Rockefeller" of Japan.

Treasurer F. R. Austin, of the American Dahlia Society, has progressed from the amateur to the commercial class, being now president of the Peacock Dahlia Farms, Berlin, N. J. He is also president of the Tuckerton, N. J. bank.

Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., and Roman J. Irwin, of this city, accompanied by Fred Brown, of Cleveland, O., have gone on a hunting trip in the wilds of New Brunswick, Canada, and expect to be absent for a month.

The past week brought the Jewish New Year, and many of our friends of that ancestry and faith, have been enjoying the holidays. In some sections of the city events connected therewith, increased the demand for cut flowers.

Dean & Co., of Little Silver, N. J., are sending to the market good stock of the pink chrysanthemum, Unaka. Daniel Dean, of this firm, was a visitor in the wholesale district, September 27.

J. C. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, who for the present is making his Barclay street store his headquarters, visited the cut flower district, September 25.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held on the evening of October 13. We have not yet received the programme, but it is safe to say that there will be something doing.

The veteran, John Weir, is now buyer for Charles Abrams, of Brooklyn, and it brings him nearer to his own home when the day's work is done.

Alfred Van Praag, of the Van Praag Floral Co., has returned from a vacation of several weeks, spent in Maine and New Hampshire.

The first violets of the season came in to B. S. Slinn, Jr., of the Cut Flower Exchange, September 23. They were good for the season.

Among the visitors to the dahlia exhibition, were Emmett Dove and wife, growers, of Rockville, Maryland.

Aubrey S. Nash, of Hentz & Nash, Inc., has returned from a vacation spent in the Catskill mountains.

Charles H. Totty, visited Bayshore, L. I., September 25, and lectured before the Bayshore Garden Club.

A. Hanig, buyer for Trepel & Bershad, of Brooklyn, is said to be quite ill of influenza. A. F. F.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, October 1, was $62.00.

SUGAR BEETS in Nebraska will run 10 tons to the acre this season.

RAINS in the west have materially improved the fall seeding conditions.

NEW YORK.—A. L. Don, of Weeber & Don, was on a seed inspection trip last week.

VISITED CHICAGO: Emil Mauser, Zurich, Switzerland, in this country with the Swiss commission.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, expects to visit the United States the latter part of October.

TEXEL ISLAND is producing the healthiest daffodils in Holland, where, generally, the disease of daffodils is increasing annually.

IT is said 80,000 bulbs of northern grown Lilium candidum were shipped from Paris to America this season. Owing to shipping troubles these came late.

COOPER, TABER & CO., of London, England, are reported to have established offices in Holland in an effort to overcome the vagaries of Dutch bulb minimum prices.

CONGRESSMAN J. W. FORDNEY, of Saginaw, Mich., is chairman of the ways and means committee, and will have charge of all tariff revision in which the horticultural trade is interested.

WATSON S. WOODRUFF, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., accompanied by Mrs. Woodruff, will sail on the S. S. New Amsterdam, October 4, for France, where he will combine business and pleasure during a stay of two months.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are about the same as last week, $2.25 for reds and yellows and $2.75 for whites. Ninety per cent of the sets are now in storage, some late deliveries being due to the gathering of tomato and bean crops.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December were steady, September 30, with cash offered at $29.75. Timothy was unchanged, cash being offered at $5.40, September $5.70, October $5.57½, December $5.62½, and March $5.70.

GILROY, CALIF.—John B. Scherrer, formerly assistant professor of horticulture at the New Hampshire College of Agriculture, and later at the University of Pennsylvania, is now with the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., of this city, where he will devote his time to stock selection.

DARMSTADT, GERMANY.—Paul Anding, nephew of the late Ludwig Heyn, proprietor of the firm of Conrad Appel, whose death was reported in our issue of September 13, page 450, has succeeded to the business. Associated with him are P. Krauter, L. Hinkel, A. Fuhrlander and Hans Walter.

Illinois Seed Law.

Outline of seed law and regulations prepared by the department of agriculture, seed inspection, Springfield, Ill.

Those who have anything to do with the buying and selling of the following farm seeds: Red clover, mammoth clover, white clover, alsike clover, sweet clover, alfalfa, timothy, Kentucky blue grass, brome grass, orchard grass, meadow fescue, oat grass, rye grass, vetch, rape, corn and millets, will be interested in knowing the provisions of the Illinois seed law, which became effective July 1, 1919.

The law does not prevent the sale of impure seed but provides for the proper labeling or tagging of the seed sold or offered for sale.

When any of the farm seed referred to above is sold or offered for sale for seeding purposes within the state, the label or tag should show the following information:

(1). Common name.

(2). Noxious weed seeds present in greater numbers than 1 to 5,000.

(a) No one or more of which is in greater number in the aggregate than 1 to 1,000 of such farm seed.

(b) No one or more of which is in greater number in the aggregate than 1 to 500 of such farm seed.

(3). Per cent of other weed seeds present.

(4). Per cent of inert matter.

(5). The name and address of vendor, also name and address of purchaser.

Agricultural seeds or mixtures when sold to dealers for recleaning or held in store for cleaning purposes do not come within the law.

The information for the above mentioned label or tag can be obtained by an analysis of the seed. This analysis can be made by the dealer himself or by a seed analyst in the employ of the United States department of agriculture, state department of agriculture or a wholesale seed house. The seed law provides for the analysis of seed by the department of agriculture, through a chief seed analyst, who has an office and laboratory in Room 428, DeWitt Smith building, Springfield, Illinois. Samples of not less than two ounces should be taken so as to represent the entire lot of seed as nearly as possible.

When sample is taken, place it in a strong manilla paper bag or cotton sack and wrap securely to prevent being torn open in mails. A small cotton sack is better than most envelopes.

The law provides that five samples of farm seeds sent by one individual, firm, or corporation within a year, will be analyzed free.

The law also states that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association, to sell or have in his or its possession, for sale, any farm seed whether named in the law or not, which has been artificially loaded or weighted with sand or dirt or other similar material, to add to the weight or quality of such farm seed.

Seed corn sold or offered for sale in lots exceeding 10 pounds requires, according to law, a different label or tag showing:

(1). The full name and address of the vendor so selling or offering same for sale.

(2). The common accepted name of the variety.

(3). The name of the county and the state where grown; also the year in which said seed corn was grown.

If the above facts are not known it should be so stated on the label or tag.

The penalty for a violation of the law is a fine of not less than $5.00 nor more than $100.00.

A short course in seed analysis will be given by the Illinois Agricultural College at the same time as their regular short courses which are usually held the latter part of January each year. Full information regarding this course can be obtained by writing to department of agriculture, University of Illinois, Urbana.

Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association.

The twenty-seventh annual convention of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association was held at the Cadillac hotel, Detroit, Mich., September 24-25. There were more than 160 members present when the opening session was called to order by President Christian Breisch, of Lansing, G. A. Brown, of the Isbell Bean Co., Detroit, who was assigned to respond to the address of welcome scheduled for the mayor, found he had to do double duty, making both addresses, owing to the absence of the city's chief executive. Then followed the address of President Breisch, who, upon concluding, appointed Frank Nowlin, of Albion, J. N. McAllister, of Caro, and Edward Aymer, as a nominating committee, and A. L. Chamberlain, Port Huron, W. I. Biles, Saginaw, and M. G. Murphy as a committee on resolutions. Frank Gerber, president of the National Canners' Association, Fremont, sent the greetings of his organization, which were read by Secretary Frank B. Drees. Guy W. Rouse, president of the Worden Grocery Co., Grand Rapids, gave an address on "Present Day Merchandising," in which he said in part: "The adjustment of the present critical condition of the country will be made not by the capitalist, but by the business men. Any agency proposed for the purpose of adjusting prices by legislation or governmental interference will fail, as only the old principle of supply and demand will right the question of prices now disturbing the country. The socialist is wrong and also the fraternalist, and the labor unions have their limited rights—and the I. W. W. also try to adjust matters, but they are on the wrong track. All are nursing schemes that will not work out fairly. The unrest in the world today is the result of the agitation of the socialist leaders of Germany. No group of men can lead us as well as the business men. We want Michigan beans to occupy the highest position in the markets of the world and to do that we must raise the present inspection standard to a higher point, make a broader market and increase the popularity of the Michigan brand.

Nathan Simpson heartily endorsed the views of Mr. Rouse and explained the evil element referred to as unfortunately injected into the farmers' nonpartisan league of North Dakota, which has its being because of the methods of the bankers in that state in making a charge of five per cent per month for loans made to them, practically usury. Mr. Simpson, referring to Michigan beans, said: "There is just one enemy of the Michigan bean grower—the bear who tries to depress the price. A cost accounting system is needed by the farmer who works from 10 to 16 hours a day, buying his requirements at retail, while he sells his product at wholesale."

A telegram was received during the session from the California Bean Growers' Association, asking help to combat the importation of Japan grown beans, stating that only the day previous, 5,000,000 pounds of beans arrived on the Pacific coast from that country. A protective tariff is asked for. Replying to a telegram, Congressman Thomas W. Fordney, of Saginaw, who had been invited to be present, that gentleman gave the assurance that the ways and means committee at Washington, will at its meeting in February next, give the bean industry of this country the needed protection.

George Booth, Pittsburgh, Pa., speaking on the subject of "Present Day Merchandising," said that from the brokers' standpoint, the integrity of the jobber is highly important, so that the broker may, with full assurance, vouch for the grade offered to dealers. F. G. Furrin, secretary of the New York Bean Jobbers' Association, gave an outline of the work of that organization and tendered the Michigan association the courtesies of his office in furtherance of greater efficiency.

A letter was read from A. C. Bedford, chairman of the executive committee of the International Trade Conference, announcing a meeting of that body with a commission from England, France, Belgium and Italy, to be held at Atlantic City, N. J., October 20, which the president of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association was invited to attend.

M. J. Hart, Saginaw, chairman of the advertising committee, made his report and submitted a plan for the raising of a fund to advertise Michigan grown beans to the world. His plan would be a charge of 10 cents per 100 pounds to the grower and five cents on a like basis to elevator owners to maintain the fund. His project included a system of branding the Michigan product and popularize it by a national advertising campaign. As the growers' association did not have a representative present, the plan, though warmly supported by many was rejected for the time being. In the discussion of this subject it developed that the 1919 crop will be about 3,500,000 bushels, of an estimated value of $12,000,000 to $14,000,000.

At the Thursday morning session, a discussion on "Management of the Packing Room," was led by A. L. Chamberlain. He advocated proper conditions in the picking room for efficient work, these to include good light and sanitary conditions and a close scrutiny of the work. His talk was highly commended as most timely and valuable.

J. M. Coup, Saginaw, led the discussion of "Inspection System," which showed the operation of the Michigan standard of inspection, which is rarely corrected, reversed.

The new sales contract, which was presented by H. E. Chatterton, Mt. Pleasant, chairman of committee on revision, which in the new form was thought by the committee to be an improvement in some respects over the old contract, brought a spirited discussion, at the conclusion of which Judge E. L. Beach, of Saginaw, attorney for the association, pointed out the defects which made it impossible of adoption or its being sustained in practice or the courts resorted to. A motion was made to continue the present form of contract with some minor changes, and this was carried.

The membership committee reported the application of 71 regular memberships received during the year as well as 13 associate memberships. These were, upon the approval of the committee, admitted.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

TOLEDO, O.—Heckinger Bros., with the addition of a new house nearly completed, will have three acres under glass, devoted to vegetables.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Cucumbers, bushel baskets, $2.25 to $2.50; celery, Michigan, crate, 75 cents to $1.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 10 to 12½ cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00; tomatoes, per box, 25 to 50 cents.

New York, Sept. 29.—Celery, per doz. roots, 20 to 75 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $1.00 to $2.50; mushrooms, $1.00 to $3.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, carrier, 50 cents to $2.75; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $2.00.

Vegetable Storing Methods.

Many of the root crops, such as parsnips, salsify, horseradish, rutabagas, and winter radishes require the same general treatment for storage, according to J. T. Rosa, Jr., in the weekly agricultural service letter of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia. They should be kept cool and somewhat moist. They are not injured by freezing, and are usually left in the ground until after the first freeze in autumn. Another group of vegetables, handled in the same general way as the foregoing, but which are more tender to cold, are beets, carrots, kohlrabi, leeks and turnips. The first two mentioned are subject to excessive wilting or shriveling in storage unless they are kept moist. This is often done in the house cellar by burying the roots in barrels of moist sand, which will keep them in plump condition until spring. This group should be harvested before heavy freezing. To have all the foregoing crops tender and in the best of condition for table purposes at storage time, they should be sown in the late spring or early summer, according to the length of the growing season. All of the root crops should be dug carefully, and the tops should be twisted off some distance above the crown, instead of topping closely with a knife. The roots may be placed in storage in bulk or in smaller containers. All of the crops are good keepers, and are very desirable as winter vegetables. Frequently, it is desirable to leave a portion of such crops as parsnips, horseradish, salsify and rutabages in the ground over winter. In this case, harvesting is simply deferred until spring.

Celery, which matures late in the fall, can be stored green, and blanched by the process of storage. The stalks are dug with a spade, and a large portion of the roots left on each plant. These are set side by side in a shallow layer of soil or sand in the bottom of an empty hotbed or in a corner of a cool cellar. The soil is kept moist, but the plants must be kept dry, otherwise decay may set in. The plants should continue growing slowly, and since the storage place is dark, the stalks will soon become blanched. Celery is also stored extensively in trenches two feet deep and three feet wide, the green plants being set closely on the bottom of the trench, which is roofed over with boards and banked with earth.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

SPOKANE, WASH.—The Inland Fruit Growers' Association will hold a conference in this city December 2-3, in conjunction with the state horticultural association.

HALIFAX, N. S.—Apple crop estimates show a decrease from earlier predictions. It is expected that the crop will be approximately 1,300,000 barrels, a marked increase over 450,000 barrels last year.

SPOKANE, WASH.—The annual meeting of the state horticultural association will be held here December 2-3, among the prominent speakers secured for the programme being G. Harold Powell, whose topic will be "Standardization."

Tree-Doctoring Quacks and Powders.

Attention of the horticultural department of the University of Missouri, Columbia, has been called to the fact that some of the so-called "tree powders" are again being advertised and sold in the state. The advertisements or agents for these materials generally claim, that if holes are bored into the trees, and then certain quantities of the powder are put into them, the trees thereafter will be free from insect and fungus injury. The theory is suggested that the poison will be taken up by the sap, distributed throughout the tree, and act as a specific against all kinds of insects and diseases. Sometimes it is claimed that the material will also act as a fertilizer and tonic, and thus lead to greater productiveness. It is generally the amateur that is made the victim of these cure-alls, for the experienced commercial grower has learned to leave them alone. However, each year there are enough amateurs misled by the claims for them to make their manufacture and distribution profitable to a good many. It might be stated that the grower should place no reliance in these fake remedies. Good sanitary methods of orchard management, coupled with thorough spraying treatment, constitute the means of controlling the insects and diseases of the orchard; and they alone should be relied upon.

Gordonia Alatamaha.

With the exception of the witch hazel, which in this latitude is a shrub rather than a tree, this gordonia is the last tree of the year to flower in the Arboretum, and its pure white, cupshaped flowers, resembling a single camellia flower, can now be seen on the plants on Azalea path and on Hickory path near Centre street. This handsome little tree has an interesting history. It was discovered by John Bartram, the famous Pennsylvania traveler and botanist, in 1765 near Fort Barrington on the Altamaha river, in Georgia. John Bartram's son, William, visited the locality in 1778 and collected seeds and roots of this tree, and Dr. Moses Marshall, who visited the locality in 1790, was the last botanist who has seen it growing naturally. Many botanists have hunted for it in vain in the neighborhood of Fort Barrington, but without success, and this tree has been preserved by the plants and seeds collected by William Bartram and his descendants. Many of these are growing in gardens near Philadelphia, and there are large and very old specimens in the neglected arboreta of the Brothers Painter, at Medina, and of John Evans, in Radnor township, Delaware county. Good plants may be seen in Fairmount park, near the Horticultural building, and in a few private gardens near the city. This gordonia has been an inhabitant of the Arboretum for many years, where it flowers in sheltered positions every autumn. Late in the season, the leaves turn orange and scarlet before falling.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

SUPPLY IMPROVES IN QUANTITY.

The supply of flowers has improved considerably, although some dependence is still placed on arrivals from northern markets to help take care of the large daily demand for funeral work. Dahlias are very fine and useful for all purposes. The annual feature of fall weddings is now beginning to loom large, making a very good demand. Chrysanthemums are not in yet, the growers having purposely held them back for a more propitious period. Roses are coming splendidly, and are of good quality. Carnations will soon take their place on the scene. Good business in general is reported from all sources.

M'INTYRES SUE FERTILIZER PLANT.

The McIntyre Floral Co. has entered suit and asked an injunction restraining the Prairie State Fertilizer Co. from operating its establishment, the complaint stating that the defendant company has erected its plant adjoining the range of the McIntyre Company, which consists of 36 acres, commercial greenhouses and buildings for the homes of the owners and employes, all of which are being damaged by the dust from the rock being ground for the defendants product, which covers the glass, excluding light from the plants and enters the residences causing a loss to the contents as well as affecting the food. It is further stated that the noise of the mill at night disturbs the rest of the complainants. It is also asked that the court determine the amount of damage already sustained by the complainants, and that a permanent injunction be granted prohibiting further operation of the fertilizer establishment.

WEDDINGS CREATE BIG ROSE DEMAND.

Cool, crisp, autumn weather has improved trade conditions materially, and the business is good. There are numerous weddings, resulting in a heavy call for white roses. Other colors of all kinds are of splendid quality and the supply unlimited. Gladioli are plentiful, and the same is true of asters, but the cold, frosty weather has made the latter look rather rusty. Garden flowers are still coming into the market. Cecile Brunner roses are still very plentiful; in fact, there is an over-supply. As the season for fall social functions has not begun, there has been little call for corsages. Dahlias have begun to come in, and the quality is very good. Asparagus and galax are plentiful. Primroses, cyclamens, etc., find ready sale.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Rose Society was held September 22. The question arose, "Can Rochester Growers Compete With Other Rose Growing Communities?" John Dunbar, president of the organization, was unable to attend, owing to an injury recently sustained. Mr. Schoenfelder, an amateur rose grower, presided. Colin T. Ogsten gave as a reason why good roses are not grown, poor sunlight in December and January, because this city is in the cloud belt. The society has engaged experts to speak at the meetings this fall.

Horace J. Head has returned from a successful business trip in the territory extending from this city to Albany.

Mrs. Owens has returned from Cleveland, O., and is again at the store of Alberts, the Florist.

Jacob Thomann & Son are the proud possessors of a white tritoma which is quite a curiosity.

James Vicks' Sons are making a specialty of Boston ferns at this writing.

CHESTER.

Cleveland.

OUTDOOR SUPPLY FAILING FAST.

The recent rains and cool weather have had a bad effect on all outdoor flowers which are now arriving in steadily diminishing supply. Asters are on their last legs and but a few good ones are now to be seen. Dahlias, are, however, in good supply, and the quality is excellent. Gladioli are shortening up. Roses have been shorter in supply during the last week than for some time. The demand, however, is better, owing to the shortage of outdoor stock and prices are beginning to stiffen. Lily of the valley and white roses continue limited in supply. Orchids are also a scarce item. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

Charles Russell has purchased a new automobile, one of the classiest seen in this city so far. Joseph Strycek is also the possessor of a new "super-six."

The Hebrew New Year created a splendid demand for stock of all kinds.

Mrs. G. Lorenze, the florist of Pearl road, is now Mrs. James, the wedding ceremony taking place last week.

Visitors: R. E. Blackshaw, La Porte, Ind.; Frank Johnson and E. Galavan, Chicago.

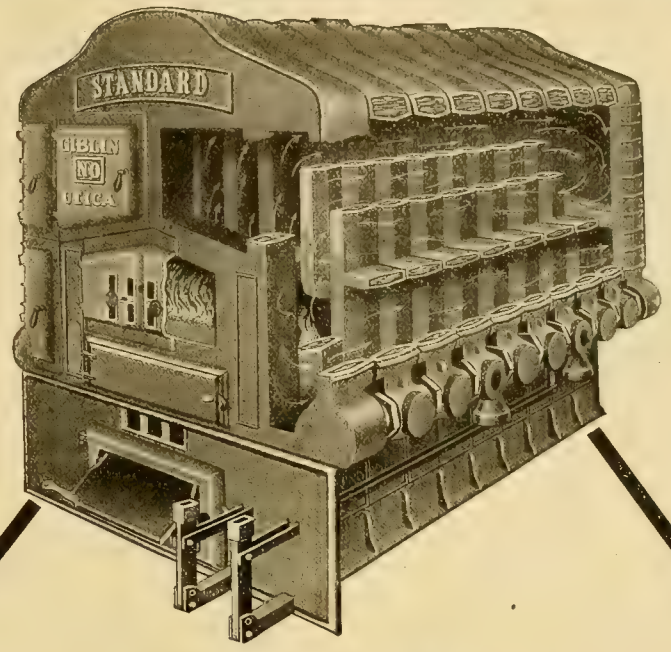
OSCALOOSA, IA.—The range of the Kemble Floral Co. here was destroyed by fire September 12, the loss being estimated at $25,000.

EAST HAVEN, CONN.—John A. Long, who was injured in an automobile accident about a year ago, and whose health was also affected by overwork, is now in a sanitarium for treatment.

Get Your Banker's Advice



Giblin Green-house Heaters

SUPPOSE every morning during the cold season you entered your greenhouse you found three nice, clean, new ONE DOLLAR BILLS on the bench, and they were yours "for keeps."

HOW WOULD YOU FEEL?

The cold season would probably have 150 mornings.

THEN you would have 450 nice ONE DOLLAR BILLS, $450.00.

DO YOU WANT THEM? LISTEN!

Manufacturers of other Greenhouse Boilers admit that $5.00 per day per ten thousand feet of glass heated to 60 degrees in zero weather is a reasonable fuel cost under present coal prices.

WHAT IS YOUR FUEL COST?

WE SAY it ought to be $2.50 per day and can prove that fuel for our boilers costs but this amount.

IF YOU use another boiler and have 12000 square feet of glass, your cost per day is probably $6.00. Change to our boiler and your cost per day will probably be $3 00, so 150 days will give you the $450.00. Again we say:

DO YOU WANT IT?

WHY the difference? It's in the CONSTRUCTION and draft travel.

Besides, you cut out the NIGHT WATCHMAN and save his WAGES.

DO you want to save $100.00 on the FIRST cost of a boiler or $450.00 EVERY YEAR.

Do you doubt these statements?

Let us tell you the facts, figures, names and places.

Autumn Care of Plant Stock.

Preparing to Meet the Spring Demand.

The florist who has to make preparations for a large stock of miscellaneous plants for his spring trade, whether he is connected with a cemetery, public or private institution, or operating his own greenhouses, always has a big job on his hands at this season of the year to get enough stock together before the first killing frost, so as to meet the requirements of his business. It is not safe delaying this work any longer. We may expect frosty weather any night, and though it may not be actually a killing frost, it will chill the plants, causing them to drop their foliage, which makes them hard to propagate. As is always the case at this time of the year, the plants are now looking their best, and it seems a pity to disturb them in any way to make cuttings, but if it is not attended to very soon, there will be trouble, particularly with the more tender varieties.

Up to September 15, a great deal of this fall propagating was being done outdoors in frames, but from now on, it must be carried on in the propagating house. The first thing in order before any propagating is attempted, is to make the right kind of preparation, and give the house and benches a thorough cleaning out, bearing in mind two very important factors connected with propagating at this time of the year, the first being that very little, if any, artificial heat is necessary for the rooting of the cuttings. The second is that this is the season for the rapid growth of fungus which attacks cuttings and causes them to rot and damp off. Cleanliness about the house, and a clean, fresh propagating sand are two very essential features that should, therefore, be provided for.

Tender Plants.

Under this heading are all plants which are most easily affected by the changed weather conditions from summer to autumn, and as such, need first attention. Many of them also suffer considerably when lifted from the open ground and transferred to the greenhouse to be carried over winter as stock plants, so that whenever it is possible it is best to arrange for a good stock of young plants by propagation. In this class are included the different varieties of alternanthera, coleus, achyranthes, petunias, ageratum, heliotrope, fuchsias, lantanas, Impatiens pilea, cuphea, sweet alyssum, begonias, and any others of the tender bedding plants. With a little care, all of these root quickly at this season of the year, the principal consideration being to give them attention before they get chilled outdoors.

Geraniums.

Some of our gardener friends tell us, that owing to the very dry season throughout the central west, their geranium plants have not made as good growth as in former years, and that the stock for cuttings is going to be very scarce. While it remains warm and pleasant, it is not as necessary to take the cuttings of geraniums as it is of the more tender plants, but it is not too soon to begin, and there should not be any letup in getting a good supply beyond the needed requirements, into the sand. Geraniums are not very difficult to root under the proper conditions, but there is always an uncertainty about the cuttings taken from the outside. One season a fine stand of rooted cuttings will result from our efforts, while another season, under apparently the same careful treatment, a considerable number of them will go back on us, so be prepared and allow a good margin over your actual needs. Geraniums, having during the past few years, proved to be good property to have, and when in good condition, are easy to dispose of. From now until frost ruins the plants, is the best time to root geraniums from the outside. They will root much better now than during the month of August or early in September. The principal points to be considered are to use a clean, sharp, fresh sand for the propagating bed, avoid close conditions in the house, and after a good watering in at the time the cuttings are put into the sand, they will need to be watered very little until rooted. Another plan that works very successfully for rooting geranium cuttings at this season, is to place some fine soil in the bottom of shallow flats, fill up with sand, and insert the cuttings the same as in the cutting bench; then stand the flats on the side shelves of a light greenhouse. One very important feature in following this plan is that the cuttings can be allowed to remain in the flats for a considerable time without harm until a chrysanthemum bench becomes available to pot them up.

Even though there does not seem any signs of a killing frost for a while yet, it is none too soon to get tender pot plants under cover. Any Boston ferns, begonias, hydrangeas, chrysanthemums or any other flowering or foliage plants, intended for the greenhouse, should now be potted up and placed inside on the greenhouse benches. There is nothing to be gained by leaving them outdoors any longer. They can be given cool conditions inside, with plenty of ventilation; then, if sudden changes to bad weather occur, they are under control. It is much better to handle this stock gradually, than it is to leave it until the weather becomes such that there is danger of it freezing, and it has to be brought in in a hurry. Be careful in the lifting of these plants. Do not let them remain laying around after lifting them out of the ground before potting up. Use a good, live, but not over-rich soil. Do not pot into extra large pots, and be sure each pot has good drainage. After potting, the plants will need to be well watered in, but after this is done, care should be exercised in the watering so that the soil remains fresh and sweet for the plants to get a quick root-hold. One of the most serious mistakes is to crowd these newly lifted plants. They recover much faster when a free circulation is allowed between each plant.

By attending to all of this work that can be done before frost, it gives the men a chance to take care of the plants that have to be left out until the frost makes it necessary that every plant that is needed to be saved can be taken care of. In this list are included the cannas, vincas, echeveria, vase plants, dahlias, etc.

It is now time to transplant these August sown seedling pansies into the frames as their permanent quarters for the winter so that they will get good roothold and be in good shape to go over the severe weather. Do not put the sash on the frames, but allow them to remain open until the ground gets fairly frozen up, which is generally about November 15. If it is a dry, warm period during October, an occasional watering will be necessary to keep the plants from suffering.

After enough stock has been taken from the planting ground, remove any plants not needed to be saved, and give the ground a good cleaning up, burning all the rubbish. Then manure the ground, plough or spade up, and let it remain over winter.

A perennial plantation is a good investment for any florist. There is a big increased demand for the plants every year, and many of the varieties are becoming more and more indispensable as cut flowers. Now is the time to do any of the transplanting that has to be done to give the plants a chance to get well established before winter. Also clean up the beds and remove any rubbish or decayed matter. The young plants from summer seed can be either transplanted into frames or potted up and plunged in the frames later on. They can then be covered up and protected over winter.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

F. T. D. Meeting and its Meaning.

Are you preparing to go to Buffalo, October 14-15, to rub shoulders and meet those to whom you are in the habit of telegraphing orders and who will prove themselves worthy of meeting face to face? To those who have formed the habit of attending F. T. D. meetings, nothing need be said. But to the one who is doubtful about going, permit me to say, that the growth of the florist industry can be reflected in the interest of the members of the F. T. D. and its proceedings.

Everyone present has the interest of the organization at heart, and the interests of one become the interests of all. When President William F. Gude calls the meeting to order, up to the time of the close, it is just one big family group, all bent on giving their neighbors the benefit of the past year's experience. This is one of the gatherings where even a good listener demands a chance to talk once in a while, and he gets the chance, too; where everything pertaining to retail store management, from the errand boy to the chief, is discussed, and incidentally all come away feeling that they have learned something to their mutual advantage.

They say that the things that people do not do for others, indicates what they are, but that does not hold good at F. T. D. meetings. Everybody is interested in what you are doing, and the man is long-headed who gets there with something that pertains to his neighbor's benefit. It comes back many times in good-will, and all that goes with it. Here is the forum where store-keeping in all its phases can be talked over, where causes and effect are reasoned in a manner understandable by all who enter into the subject, where employer and employe come to listen and to learn, and many have gone away feeling that their time was well spent, and the good fellowship that followed afterwards, was worth many times the effort in being present.

Orison S. Marden, the noted writer on business success, said: "Stick to those who are trying to do something and be somebody in the world—the people of high aims and lofty ambitions. Keep close to those who are dead in earnest. Ambition is contagious." This seems to express better than all else the type represented at our meeting.

Can you, as a retailer, not afford to go to Buffalo, October 14-15?

HENRY PENN.

Telegraph Orders.

The question of how to take care of the telegraph order business is one of the most important subjects for general discussion that has entered into the florist business for several decades. Since the inauguration of the relaying of orders from florist to florist by telegraph, there has been more or less trouble, and very unfortunately will continue so, until a thorough campaign of education among retailers is established.

The taking of an order for delivery to another city, while simple in itself, is very important, insofar that it is necessary to get full details, particularly the correct name and address of the party who is to receive the flowers. So many mistakes are made by the carelessness of clerks and men who are engaged in the retail business in a small way. These mistakes are made mostly in sending orders to larger cities or the quickly growing centers of industry where there is a continual influx of new inhabitants. For illustration, take dynamic Detroit, the fourth city, where the increase in population far surpasses the ability of the municipality to provide the necessary homes for its fast growing condition. It is nearly impossible to keep in touch with the newcomers. The constant changes in addresses of people in homes, apartments and hotels, make it very difficult for delivery of flowers.

A suggestion by one of our members from the Pacific coast is of immense value in this connection, which is as follows: "I would like to place before you a very important suggestion, and one on which I have had several complaints. When an order is received by one florist from another for a box of flowers to be delivered to a party on a certain date at a hotel or residence or wherever it might be, it would be well to call up the hotel or residence in advance and ascertain if the party had arrived, or when expected. This would be of great value and of protection to the flowers, preventing their laying around for perhaps 12 or 24 hours. Likewise with funeral orders, the day and hour should be ascertained. This would give a confirmation of same being correct, and would certainly be a builder up of the efficiency of the F. T. D. service." Hence, the great importance of getting the correct address is quite obvious.

The retailer accepting the message, should at all times be sure that he thoroughly understands the order; if in doubt, have the telegraph company repeat message. If this does not prove satisfactory, wire the sender for verification of order. By following this method, many errors and serious mistakes would be avoided.

When we consider that this branch of the retail business has increased from a very nominal volume, to a wonderful approximate total value of from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 annually, one can readily understand the importance of creating or establishing a system of educational features, whereby we may all learn and improve our methods of conducting the retail business. There is a wonderful future for the retail florist in the business of flowers by wire to all parts of the world. The earth's surface has hardly been scratched as yet along this line, and I am optimistic enough to make the bold statement that the volume of business will reach $10,000,000 in not any great distant future. It must be remembered, however, that great things are accomplished only by supreme efforts, and not by half-hearted or disinterested co-operation.

Many complaints come into the office of the secretary of the F. T. D. of the carelessness and seeming negligence of members not acknowledging orders immediately upon receipt of same; another will not send his statement for several weeks, while others pay absolutely no attention to complaints against them for mistakes on non-delivery of orders. These conditions exist, and it is unmistakably wrong, hence, the dire necessity of educational features.

The L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., has a very good system to overcome the many complaints for non-delivery. This form of receipt is used principally for hospitals, hotels and apartment houses, where most of the mistakes are made. Its use, however, for all out-of-town orders is advisable. Its adoption, or something similar, would combat this evil. The order reproduced herewith explains its value.

The members of the F. T. D., who have experience, and have adopted similar safeguards to overcome irregularities in business, would be doing a great good to enlighten the lesser lights of the retail business. There are a great many subjects that are continually being brought to light that should be brought out by the aid of printer's ink.

I trust that the views expressed above will be the means of helping some "Doubting Thomases," awakening them to the importance of flowers by wire.

M. BLOY.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

At this time last year, the plague of the influenza came like a thunder clap without even as much premonition, and created a demand for flowers such as had never been experienced before. Owing to the difficulty in obtaining labor, nearly all stocks, both in the field and greenhouse, were far below normal. This season finds labor conditions in a measure restored, army men are back on their jobs, and while some few stocks are still scarce, production greatly exceeds that of last year and the general demand for social occasions is also considerably stronger.

There is not, however, anything like the stimulus that was given to business by the great funeral demand of last season. It is, therefore, up to all in the trade, particularly the retailers, to put their best foot forward, to carry good supplies, both of plants and flowers, and display them so they shall be most inviting. They should bring all their art to bear in the decoration and arrangement of the plant stock on their street front, which feature of advertising and calling attention to the store has great publicity value.

Feature and special sales are great factors in moving plants and flowers, which should be advertised in the local newspapers, and also brought to the attention of customers by circulars. A series of leaflets, each a short story in itself, describing certain plants or seasonable flowers, can be used with good effect by placing one in each package that is sent out. All these, and many other publicity methods, that will suggest themselves to the wide awake retailer, should be worked to the limit to increase business in every legitimate way.

After the store is closed at night, the window should contain some attractive feature that will catch the eye of the late promenaders or theatergoers on their way home. The picture frame, which can be quickly placed in position, illuminated by a hidden electric light, can contain a box of flowers, a couple of nice corsages, or a vase of choice roses. A small, well-made vase-basket will make a pretty picture. In its dark surroundings, this bright spot will be sure to attract attention and favorable comment.

As an incentive to business, there is no greater asset than the window, for, as a rule, it is the leading feature of the successful stores in all cities.

This will probably be the best dahlia week of the year. The show, cactus, decorative, single and pompons present a great variety in form, while the range of colors is as varied as the shades of the rainbow. The first selections, or higher grades, with their long stems, are as beautiful as any of the early chrysanthemums. Vase baskets, filled all of one color, with the addition of a bow of ribbon, are very effective standing at one end of the counter or on the display tables.

The blue fall asters are, with their almost feathery, numberless small flowers, splendid in combination with light shades of pink. The blue ageratum is also largely used in color combinations.

Feature all flowering or berried plants with paper covers. Place the pot in a saucer in the center of a square of white paper; draw this up around and tie with a piece of tape the color of the flower. Such a decoration costs but a penny or so, and at the same time, adds very materially to the appearance and value of the plant.

Foliage plants, such as ferns, dracænas, pandanus, crotons, etc., look much better if displayed in jardinieres or wicker pot covers, and there is then an opportunity to sell both together.

It is none too early to get in the order for scarce Christmas plants—heather, poinsettias, oranges, cyclamens, etc. They can be secured just as well now as later, when the word may be "You should have come sooner; we are pretty well sold up."

The "coming out" teas are now in full swing, and one should have in mind a great variety of combinations in arranged bunches, vase baskets and hampers to offer to prospective customers. Most people want to know what is being sent this season, and will generally take what is recommended. Good ribbons and chiffons should be kept in stock, as they have much to do with the finish of all this class of work.

Quarantine Affects Choice Flowers.

Flower lovers are beginning to feel the effects of the quarantine established by the federal horticultural board June 1, restricting the importation of many of our finest flowers which we were receiving yearly from foreign countries. The quarantine is directed against the importation of foreign insect pests and plant diseases, the contention being that America should restrict the entrance of any more pests into our country. It affects principally the importation of greenhouse azaleas, boxwoods, evergreens, perennial plants of the choicer varieties, hydrangeas and orchids, the named varieties of roses, and all of the bulbs except lilies, narcissi, hyacinths, tulips, and crocuses, and therefore, excludes gladioli, tuberous rooted begonias, freesias, gloxinias, bulbous irises, and tuberoses. In time, it may be possible for us to grow all of these various plants for ourselves, but for the propagation of many of them, our conditions are not favorable, and our labor would seem to be too expensive.—Ohio State University Newsletter.

THE ROSE.

New Rose Cornelia.

The firm of Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., has long been identified with the introduction of new forcing roses, having many successes to its credit; Killarney, President Carnot, Liberty, Double White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and Irish Fire Flame were introduced by them and were leading varieties in all markets for years.

Alexander Scott, who succeeded to the business at the death of his father, is a great rose enthusiast as well as a practical grower. For a number of years he has been hybridizing forcing varieties, and obtained a number of crosses of promise, one of which, Mrs. Aaron Ward x Ophelia, is a variety which has all the good qualities requisite to hold it in line with its parents as a salable flower. The following is Mr. Scott's description of this variety: Flowers are medium to large size and very double. The bud is a beautiful salmon pink. In the half expanded and full flowers, the outer petals are light flesh, with a center of bright malmaison pink; base of petals bright orange. It is a strong, vigorous grower, with good stem and foliage. It needs no pinching for a commercial variety, and when cut, is a splendid keeper.

The accompanying illustrations show a vase of the flowers, and a house planted with the variety, in bloom just before being cut back for stock. The photographs were taken the first week in September. In growth and appearance, the variety favors Ophelia more than Mrs. Ward, having the broad foliage and erect habit, together with length of stem of the former. It appears, and is said to be very free. It is to be sent out next spring.

Important Fall Work.

There are so many important things to be attended to at this time that it will keep the grower busy to keep up with the work inside. We think one of the most important things of all is to see that the plants do not get chilled, and the only preventive is to have the night fireman go on duty at once. The evenings may be mild enough, but along about 3 or 4 a. m. is the time the chill strikes in, and if the night man is only on duty for two or three hours, it will be a saving in the long run; besides, there are so many things he can do to keep himself occupied until real cold weather arrives, that there is really no excuse for letting the plants suffer for the want of a little heat in order to save (?) a few dollars. Perhaps, it is a new fireman that is being broken in. If so, do not get it into your head that he is a mind reader, but go around with him, day by day, until you are quite sure he knows the different coils and the valve system perfectly. And one of the things he can attend to now, is the packing of the steam valves, where steam heating is used. If he should be a novice, instruct him carefully, and if there are any additional coils to run, or alterations to make around the boiler, get busy at once. We have often suggested the use of pet-cocks instead of the automatic air valves, which are often used at the manifolds, and we still advocate their use, as they can be regulated to suit the occasion, by hand, and seldom clog up with scale or any other substance that may get in the line. If the temperature outside is low enough to allow for a temperature of 60 degrees inside, it will be advisable to use artificial heat, and for the next four or six weeks, or until decidedly cool weather sets in, the houses should be run at a night temperature of about 65 degrees, with from three to six inches of air in the houses. As the temperature in the daytime is still a little beyond our control, and is very often found to be 90 degrees at the hottest part of the day, the change would be too great at night if the houses were allowed to drop to 58 or 60 degrees, so to harden the roses off gradually, we suggest the higher temperature as stated above.

Do not neglect to paint the pipes with sulphur, even should there be no sign of mildew. It is always so much better to prevent things than to fight them. This means the green fly and all other insects.

All of the stock should, by this time, be getting into shape for cutting except the pruned plants which are intended for the Christmas cropping. These can be kept pinched, and the side stem shoots removed, for a long time yet. However, the young stock will require careful attention in several ways. Remember the fact that there will be very little doing through October and November, as the chrysanthemums have full sway then, and it is fortunate for the rose plants that this is true, as they can be built up during this period to withstand the cutting in quantity later on, and still by letting a few flowers come here and there on the strongest plants, it will be a benefit to these plants and gives a chance for the smaller plants to catch up. All extremely small stock should be kept pinched regularly, removing everything until they attain their working size. This makes a fine, even lot of plants that will deliver the goods later.

The tieing should be regularly attended to, which lessens the attack of black spot by allowing the free circulation of air. A little air-slaked lime, dusted under the plants, especially the ones that black spot easily, will be beneficial. Keep the American Beauties straight by tieing frequently, and remember that two stakes to a plant are far better than one where American Beauties are grown. All cultivating should be stopped just as soon as there is any danger of disturbing the surface roots, and by October 1, the young stock will be much stimulated by a light mulch. A handful of half-rotted cow manure at each space is sufficient for a starter. It should be broken up finely and washed in with the hose, when the soil is in condition for the regular watering, and care should be taken to follow right along behind the ones that are doing the mulching, with the hose, otherwise the foliage may be burned if there is any heat in the manure. Also, be quite sure that the soil is not too dry, as this will also cause burning.

The carried over plants will require constant feeding from now on—about every six weeks between mulches. We think it far better to mulch lightly and often than to put on too heavy a mulch at any time. And once the mulching is started, it is quite essential that the soil should not show afterwards on all the stock that is being carried over, for as we stated sometime ago, the longer one holds the plants in, the more feeding they will require from year to year, until, at about the fourth year, to keep them in longer, would make the feeding prohibitive, and it is then best to throw them out and renew the soil and plants. Do not forget to be advised about the early firing, or regret it the rest of the season.

Smith's Burnsiana.

In a recent communication, William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., chairman of the William R. Smith memorial committee, calls attention to a full page in the rotogravure supplement of the Washington Star of October 5, with illustrations of the House of the Temple of the Scottish Rite Masons in that city and a view of the interior of the Smith Burnsiana room in that edifice which will be formally dedicated during the month, insuring that the famous collection of Burns' works of the late Mr. Smith is well taken care of at the nation's capital.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Taking the Buds.

The term, taking the buds, means selecting or reserving the main bud on the plant to form the flower, removing all other side buds or growths. The best way to do this, is to start at the top of the plants, rubbing out the side buds from the top downwards, then, if by accident, the main bud should be damaged, there will be one of the side growths left to grow on to form another bud. Each bench of plants should be gone over every two or three days, taking every bud as soon as they become large enough to handle properly. The growth of the plants is very rapid at this time, and if they are not attended to every few days, a great deal of the strength is drawn away from the buds. Whenever it is possible, the early part of the day is the best time to take the buds; the growths of the plants are then stiff and brittle and easy to rub out with a slight touch of the fingers. As the day advances, the growths becomes somewhat wilted and are not so easy to work on.

The plants are budding up fast, and with the exception of the late varieties, nearly all of them are showing growths which will keep the grower busy selecting buds for the greater part of this month. The early varieties are now all attended to, except possibly a few stragglers, which are backward for some reason. As soon as they can be taken care of, they should receive attention. By the 20th of September the buds on the mid-season varieties ought to have been taken care of. Then will come the late and very late varieties, which will carry the work along until about October 10. The plants need six to eight weeks from the time the buds are taken to develop the flower ready for cutting. The late varieties, on account of the weather conditions later in the season, need a little longer time than this. It is also well to consider that the weather in November is generally such that allows for the blooms to remain longer on the plants without spoiling, so that buds taken late in September will be right for blooms to mature for Thanksgiving.

After the bud is taken, there is a check in growth of the plant, causing the stool to throw out suckers at the base of the plant. These should be removed with a sharp knife, taking care not to damage the root growths of the plants while doing this work. Care must also be exercised in the syringing of the plants so as not to cause the water to lodge in the newly formed bud, which causes them to turn black and rot. Another very important work that can be done in connection with that of taking the buds, is to make sure the plants are kept free of aphis by attending regularly to the spraying with nicotine.

WATERING AND SYRINGING.

The plants require less water during these autumn days than they did while in their active growth during the heat of the summer. On bright days, an early morning syringing is sufficient. Also, from this time on, it is very important that the soil in the benches receives watering only as it needs it. At the same time, it is equally as important that the beds are not allowed to become dry enough to cause the plants to wilt in the slightest degree. There is no measure that insures the suckers of a bench of chrysanthemums more than that of holding closely to a common sense method of watering the plants during these early autumn days, being particularly guided by the changing weather conditions. When two or three clear warm days come in succession, the plants can be well syringed to keep the foliage clean from red spider or thrip; then, if cool, cloudy days follow, the plants will be better off for the springing being dispensed with. Owing to the dense growth and heavy foliage of the plants, judgment should be exercised in the watering and syringing to make sure that the plants have plenty of time to dry out enough again before evening, and not have to remain soaking wet over night. To help them in the development of their blooms, the plants are greatly benefited by regular applications of liquid manure. Weekly applications can be given them unless they have been previously fed up on a rich diet; then once in 10 or 14 days will be sufficient. The main factor in feeding the plants now, is to serve as a stimulant and finish up the treatment they have been subjected to during their growing season. Strong, healthy, growing stock will stand considerable feeding without harm, but all the nourishment that can be given them now will not put vigor into sickly neglected plants.

Be sure the plants are properly supported. As the buds develop, the plants ripen up and the wood becomes harder, which means that if the plants are not properly supported to carry them through, they should receive attention before the stems get hard and out of shape, because no matter how fine a bloom it may be, unless it is carried on a strong straight stem, it is of little commercial value.

POMPONS AND SINGLES.

These varieties need attention along similar lines as the big fellows do. Watch closely for the buds, so that a little thinning out can be done. The writer is not in favor of severe disbudding, because we find the best demand for the full sprays of good average flowers rather than those of a few extra large flowers of this type, and to our notion, the sprays of pompons of average size and good form are more beautiful than those disbudded to the extreme to get size.

BUSH POT PLANTS.

Any of these plants still outdoors, should be brought into the greenhouse without further delay. There is nothing to be gained by leaving them outside any longer. Attend to their needs as to staking and tieing. Also give them liberal treatment as regards applying liquid manure and be sure that the drainage is good so that the water can pass away freely.

THE CARNATION.

Fall Care.

When we stop to consider that the coming season's success with the carnation plants depends greatly on the care and encouragement that is given them during the next eight or 10 weeks, we can readily see how important it is to watch closely their various needs at this period of their growth. It pays to observe every little detail connected with the care of the plants, and any extra thought and encouragement bestowed on them that will assist them to make growth and attain vigor, is effort well spent. There are many little things in the care of the plants that may seem to be of minor importance, and such as can be passed over for the time being until some more opportune time, but this time never comes. When the plants show the need of attention, it should not be put off. Our first consideration is the earlier planted stock that have now been benched six or eight weeks. These plants should now be well established and growing vigorously. The beautiful autumn days and cool nights that we are now having make ideal conditions for quick growth, and unless the plants are given proper attention, they will soon get out of bounds. They need the full sunlight, and if there is any sign of the shading used at planting time still left on the glass, it should be washed off. Full ventilation all the time during good weather is another one of their present needs. Do not make the mistake of coddling the plants by lowering the ventilators at the first sign of a cool autumn air; and an abundance of fresh air puts strength into the plants and enables them to make a vigorous growth. Regarding fresh air in the airing of the house, also reminds us that it is just as important that the beds be kept free of weeds, so that they will not obstruct a free circulation of fresh air between the plants.

One very important matter to look out for is to make sure that you have the soil in the benches in the best possible condition for the plants' root action. The benching of the plants leaves the soil in a rough, uneven state, and this is kept so by the after scratching of the surface soil and by weeding. Now is the time that the surface of the beds should be levelled off and pressed down to make an even surface, so that the soil will take the water evenly, and allow for it to pass freely through.

WATERING AND SYRINGING.

Directly after benching during hot, dry weather, it is necessary to syringe carnation plants freely, sometimes two or three times a day, to prevent them wilting and to hasten root action, but from now on we have to deal with a changed condition, and with each passing week, less syringing will be necessary, and when it is done it should be in the morning of bright days with the object of keeping the plants free from red spider and promote a firm growth. During dark, cloudy, periods, dispense with the syringing entirely.

The watering of the plants at their roots is one of the most important parts of the plants' present care. The soil should never be allowed to become dust dry, neither should it remain excessively wet. Allow it to dry out to a moderate degree, then water thoroughly and repeat whenever necessary.

PUTTING ON THE SUPPORTS.

Do not let there be any further delay in putting on the supports for the plants, because they will grow better after being supported, and suffer greatly if they get too large before it is done. It is always a great pleasure for the grower when his carnation plants are all supported and ready for their winter's work.

Attend regularly to the spraying with insecticide to keep the plants free from insects. This work should be done on every bench of plants at least once in two weeks. Let me remind those who still have carnation plants to be benched, to attend to it with the least possible delay, because any plants benched after this time, start off with a big disadvantage under the earlier planted stock. National Publicity for Flowers.

In his address before the society's convention in Detroit last August, Major P. F. O'Keefe, who takes more than a mere business interest in our publicity campaign, said:

"Flowers come under the head of articles requiring comparatively small outlay. We must therefore keep our advertising going. To popularize anything, requires persistent and insistent reiteration—not repetition of the same thought expressed in different ways, but nationalizing a thought by continuous advertising. We are popularizing very rapidly; indeed, our slogan, "Say It With Flowers" is fast becoming one of our national sayings, a national institution, and is today, without question, an asset which you gentlemen possess that is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is an asset which, unlike any other that I can think of, has the practical ability of being divisible among a lot of business men scattered over our entire country. The example which it sets is one that, once cultivated, grows from one person to another in each community, and from one community to another. Those who read, see it from the pages of their favorite magazine; those who travel, see that not only has this slogan been acted upon in their community, but in the other communities they pass through, and it is not the business-pulling vehicle of one man, but of thousands."

As the Major truly said, we must keep our advertising going. As long as we keep it going, our industry will be advanced and all of us will profit. To turn back would be little short of a calamity. We have succeeded in the attainment of our object—a greater use of flowers—beyond our expectations at the outset. Our slogan is working as we believed it would, and our committees, as well as everyone else really interested in the campaign, are satisfied with the progress made and the results forthcoming.

Our enthusiasts are now concerned with the important question of keeping our advertising going. It costs money to do this—big money. The $20,000 appropriated for our fall advertising has been judiciously placed. We ought to have had $50,000 to expend, and really expected to have had it. All of us would experience results in proportion to the expenditure. With the small amount of money available, we have achieved a wonderful success, but we have not been able to cover this great country of families as we might. We are only "marking time," when we see a clear field ahead for a victorious advance.

We have several good business months before us, months bringing special flower selling seasons, calling for united efforts in this publicity movement. If the many thousands who have not yet subscribed to our campaign fund, would awaken to the importance of individually assisting us to attain our objects in full, the resulting benefit would be theirs in common with their brethren in the trade. There is hardly a florist in the country who cannot afford to contribute—we should like to say hardly one who does not intend to subscribe. A subscription is not a donation by any means—it is a small investment, calculated to produce rich returns.

Our committees will meet in Buffalo, N. Y., October 14-15, and will then take up the details of our publicity for the winter and spring months, a matter governed very materially by the question of how much money is likely to be available to promote the publicity. You, Mr. Non-subscriber, can render welcome assistance by sending in your subscription, or notifying the secretary as to the amount you are willing to subscribe at a time to suit your own convenience. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Paris Horticultural Conference.

Under the auspices of the National Federation of French Horticulturists, an international conference was held at Paris, September 8-9, for the purpose of reviving the old, or starting a new international horticultural association for the purpose of maintaining pleasant relations between professional horticulturists in different countries, and the consideration, and, if possible, the removal of the difficulties that may arise as between the different countries. British, French and Belgian interests were represented at the meeting. Italian delegates were expected but did not report, and a letter was received expressing the regret of the American horticulturists at not being able to be present, owing to the fact that the purposes of the conference had not been sufficiently outlined in the invitation, and that the relations of the American horticulturists with those of other countries were practically terminated, and that it was felt that no good purpose could be served by the attendance of American delegates.

In the discussion of American prohibition, following the edict of the federal horticultural board of that country, unrelieved pessimism characterized the speeches of all the delegates on the subject. Mr. Wynne, of the British Chamber of Horticulture said that body had done all that could be done but he was afraid there was no hope of a change. M. Pynaert said that the federal horticultural board in Washington was the leading element against them, and the only prospect there was of a change lay in political pressure altering the situation in one or two years. He denied the statement that the nursery stock of France and Belgium was infested with disease, and that the word was only a pretext on the part of America, and that if the prohibition was really on account of pests, why not examine their stock before exportation, which would meet the question of preventing diseased plants reaching America. The Belgians were willing to have their stock inspected before export, and were even willing to have it done by American inspectors staying in Belgium. Mr. Leak, of the Horticultural Trades Association, suggested that concerted diplomatic pressure might be taken by all European countries, but upon it being suggested that the conference might approach the Americans. M. Pynaert said that so much had been done that further representations might be misconstrued as an "unfriendly act." The subject was therefore dropped.—British Horticultural Advertiser.

"Say It With Flowers" Week Suggestions

The following is a copy of a communication sent by Robert C. Kerr, live wire florist, of Houston, Tex., to Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. In it, Mr. Kerr offers some excellent suggestions, well worthy of consideration.

"The campaign which is being inaugurated to establish the "Say it with Flowers" week, seems to be gaining popularity. It strikes me that there could not be a more appropriate time than the week of November 11. We should grasp the apportunity to create a demand for flowers during this great celebration. There is nothing more appropriate than, "Say it with Flowers," and there is certainly nothing that will come nearer expressing the proper sentiment.

"One of the ideas that we might embody, is that every one wear a flower in memory of the heroes who lost their lives during this great war.

"Another feature that we might inject into the campaign, is to send flowers to the mothers of those who served, more especially to the mothers of those who lost their lives in the war.

"In connection with this campaign, and during the entire week, our window decorations should be played up strong, and our publicity programme should be increased for the week.

"I am sorry that it will be impossible for me to attend the F. T. D. convention in Buffalo. The proper method, as I see it, is to have the president of the F. T. D., and the president of the S. A. F. declare this the "Say it with Flowers" week. The many retail florists that assemble will no doubt have many suggestions to make along this line. I think, by all means, that we should do something at this convention to create the sentiment to commemorate this great day through "Say it with Flowers."

"I trust this matter will come to a issue at this meeting, and something can be done."

BETTER SUPPLY AND INCREASED DEMAND.

Chrysanthemums are again on the market, the first shipment of any size arriving during the past week, both yellow and white. The quality is uniformly good, and the stock moved well. A few pink were also included in the offerings. Single violets have made their debut, and while showing their usual good form, will improve as the season advances. Roses are again increasing in supply, and as the outdoor stock diminishes, the call for roses and carnations, shows a daily gain. Dahlias are showing up well in quality and they meet with good sale.

FALL OPENS WITH GOOD DEMAND.

The retail stores have now taken on their fall appearance with showings of crotons, palms, ferns, etc., and a decided improvement in business is manifested. Chrysanthemums are arriving in large quantities, with Golden Glow, Early Frost and Pacific Supreme the best sellers, prices ranging from $2 to $4 per dozen. Cattleyas continue high in price, being quoted at $12 to $18 per dozen. Calendulas, coreopsis, cosmos, centaureas and sweet sultans find a ready market.

NOTES.

At Philip L. Carbone's establishment, business has shown a marked improvement. Among the features here are baskets of nerines; also baskets and vases of dahlias, arranged with fall asters, and window boxes of crotons and English irises about the store.

Mrs. Baumgarten, of the Baumgarten Floral Co., Milwaukee, Wis., accompanied by her daughter, visited the growers in this vicinity last week.

Harry Randall, of Worcester, who was a recent visitor, reports splendid fall trade, with funeral work almost as heavy as last year.

The Boston Rose Conservatories are having a good call for Premier and Crusader, both varieties showing good form and quality.

Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., reports excellent business, with six weddings already booked for the present month.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, Mass., are now cutting heavily in Golden Glow and Early Frost chrysanthemums.

C. J. Sloane, who has an attractive store on Davis square, West Somerville, reports very good business.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. has added a handsome new car to the firm's delivery service.

ACTIVE DEMAND THE RULE.

Trade among local retail florists has been quite active during the week ending October 4. There has been a larger number of funerals, and that part of the business has been good. Weddings have also been numerous, and all of the stores report a good demand for flowers for wedding ceremonies. Generally speaking, trade is all that can be expected, and prospects for the future are exceedingly bright. One of the best features of the demand is the better sale of loose flowers for decorating and receptions. The fall season for parties and receptions is now at hand, and the florist business is reflecting this change in demand. Flowers generally are more plentiful than was the case a week ago. Carnations are coming in larger quantities and the quality is better also. They sell from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Chysanthemums are also moving better, and the stock being offered is of higher grade. They retail from $6 to $8 per dozen. Sweet peas are coming into the market in larger quantities and move at 50 to 75 cents a bunch. Roses are fairly plentiful and are in good demand. The principal varieties are Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward and Russell. They sell from $2 to $5 per dozen.

CLUB MEETING OF MUCH INTEREST.

Over $300 subscribed for a "Say it with Flowers" week was the report made by Frederick A. Danker, chairman of the special committee, at the October meeting of the florists' club. Mr. Danker said that since the September session, his committee had held two meetings, and had taken a prominent part in the "honor day" celebration, held by the municipality, September 13,—a date set aside by the city to honor its returned service men with a parade and demonstration of all the civic and fraternal organizations, followed by a presentation of medals to the heroes by the mayor. The committee's contribution to the "honor day" celebration was a handsome automobile float, with the sign of the local florists' club on it. The exhibit attracted attention and favorable comment. The committee also contributed a large and handsome wreath in behalf of the club, which was displayed with other floral pieces at the head of State street, where the city had erected a memorial to honor the men and women from its numbers who served in the war. Mr. Danker said that Edward P. Tracey, proprietor of the Rosery Flower Shop, would have charge of the advertising features of the "Say it with Flowers" week, and Thomas F. Tracey would act as treasurer. The committee will hold one or two meetings before the club comes together again. Mr. Danker said the members of his committee had decided that November would be a better month than October for the week's demonstration.

Two nominating committees to prepare tickets for the annual election in December were named by President William Newport. They are: Regular —Louis H. Schaefer, Joseph Traudt, and John A. Murnane, Jr.; Opposition —Thomas F. Tracey, William Christie, and George E. Nagengast, Jr.

Toward the end of the meeting, interesting talks on trade subjects were given. James Snyder, of Rhinebeck, said he had seven houses of violets that are doing well; buds are coming along, weather favorable, and customers seem to be anxious to place orders. Mr. Snyder said he was at the Detroit convention of the S. A. F., and found the gathering well worth while. He urged that the club make up a party to attend the convention in 1920 in Cleveland, O., taking a boat from Buffalo for the overnight trip. John McCarthy, salesman for the M. Rice Company, Philadelphia, Pa., was present for the first time. He told of the success in the large cities of efforts made by florists to close their shops daily at 6 o'clock p. m., and on Saturdays, during the summer, at noon. Local florists have for years kept open late on Saturday night. Mr. McCarthy said that the public can be educated to buy flowers and other articles before 6 o'clock p. m. Morris Cohen, of New York, made a report on the F. T. D. convention at Buffalo. F. A. Danker read a communication from Professor E. A. White, Ithaca, N. Y., secretary of the State Federation of Florists' Clubs, suggesting that the December meeting, 1920, be held in Albany. The members voted to extend an invitation to the federation to hold the meeting in Albany at the time mentioned. Four applications received were laid over until the November meeting. Arrangements have been made to hold a flower show for the members on the night of November 20.

NOTES.

Local retailers report a good demand and very little stock to be had. The local market affords only roses and a few chrysanthemums; outdoor flowers are gone for the season, and the stock from growers is not sufficient for requirements.

Workmen are busy enlarging the office of F. A. Danker, at his store, 40-42 Maiden lane.

GOOD BUSINESS THROUGHOUT WEEK.

Business was steady throughout the week, and has taken a healthy tone, indicating that the fall season is here in earnest. There has been a gradual increase in the supply of chrysanthemums, also in the number of varieties and colors offered. Both white and yellow William Turner are now in the market and sell rapidly. The former is the most popular white in this market. Chrysolora and Crocus are also among the leaders in their color. In pink, we have Chieftain, which is the best pink of all, for this locality. Its fine color, shape and keeping qualities recommend it to all, retallers and shippers alike. White Chieftain is also in demand, as is Mrs. O. H. Kahn and W. H. Waite. Quite a few pompons can be had, and are being used for basket and other decorative work. The rose situation remains unchanged. There is little, if any, really first-class stock to be had as yet, although there are great quantities of mediocre flowers coming in. There are no American Beauties, and no good Russell. All other varieties are abundant except Cecile Brunner, the only supply of which is now coming from under glass. The carnation market has shown much improvement during the week, and stock of very good quality is to be obtained. Prices for this flower are firm at 75 cents a bunch. The Enchantress family is the leader at present. The supply of orchids is rapidly becoming normal again and there is now plenty of stock to go around. The quality offered is excellent. They are bringing $60 per hundred. The supply of Japanese lilies did not remain very long in the market as none are to be had now. There is no lily of the valley. Sweet peas are still offered, but of poor quality. Asters are rapidly going off crop. Only a few are now being received, and these are of such poor quality that small figures are being paid for them. The supply of gladioli keeps up in great shape. Some very good pink and red are to be had. The growers who hold this stock now are being well paid for their cut. Violets are quickly coming to the front, owing to favorable weather. The Princess of Wales is best although a few Giant are occasionally noted. Zinnias are to be had in limited quantities. There is still a large supply of dahlias, but the present rains will probably hasten the end of their season. Some of the stores have been showing cut sprays of cotoneasters, laden with red berries. Pannosa is the chief variety shown and is very effective for decorative work. Pot plants are rapidly becoming more plentiful, and some very good cyclamens may now be seen at the various stores. Celosias are still popular and plentiful. Pot grown chrysanthemums are beginning to come in, and some good specimens have been noted. Bostons, ficus and aspidistras are selling rapidly at good prices. Good fern is rather scarce.

NOTES.

The dahlia show to be held in Oakland this coming week will attract most of the specialists from this city and vicinity. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. will make a large display of their seedling, Dr. Tevis. R. McWhirter will show among others, Princess Pat, his fine novelty. The Bessie Boston Dahlia Farm will stage Mabel Taft, which created such a furore at the dahlia show held in this city. It will be a little too early for the chrysanthemum growers to show anything but the early flowering varieties.

B. M. Joseph's flower store, at 233 Grant avenue, was entered by burglars one night during the week. The safe had been left unlocked by the bookkeeper and $75 was taken from a tin box. The thieves overlooked $200 in another compartment. Entrance was made by cutting a pane from a rear window. The burglars brought a number of bananas with them, and after getting the money, apparently sat down and enjoyed a banana feast. The floor was littered with banana skins.

It is said that quite a few of the Chinese growers down the peninsula, who grow asters, will discontinue doing so after this season is over. In years past, they could be grown at a good profit, but with the coming of the large flowering early chrysanthemums, they have steadily lost in favor. Practically the only use to which they are put now is funeral work. They will still continue to grow late flowering chrysanthemums as heretofore. These are grown outdoors in localities which are free from frosts and are usually to be had until the new year.

H. Plath is sending in some extra good Primula obconica, which are meeting with much favor among the stores. This is one of Mr. Plath's specialties, and he grows it in fine shape. His stock of Boston ferns is very large. He has them in all salable sizes, and has also a fine lot of large specimens of the different varieties. His stock of kentias and cibotiums is coming along in great shape for the holiday trade.

J. A. Axell is now in the height of the chrysanthemum season and is greatly pleased over the way trade is going. He is making shipments of baby roses, violets, asparagus and chrysanthemums in all colors to all parts of the country. He is receiving heavy supplies of chrysanthemums, and will continue to do so throughout the season.

At this writing, the first heavy rain of the season is falling. No doubt all chrysanthemums grown outdoors, which are not covered, will suffer severely. Last year, owing, to heavy rains at this time, a vast amount of damage was done. It is to be hoped that the growers were prepared, so that they will not suffer to any great extent.

The Western Evergreen Co., at 372 Bush street, is receiving large quantities of green goods from the woods. They have a large force of men engaged the year round, gathering material, and always make it a practice to carry large stock. The shipping trade is beginning in earnest, they say, and large shipments are going out daily.

P. Conchi, of Colma, is supplying many of the stores with the finest grade of Ulrich Brunner that we have seen for this time of the year. With no American Beauties to be had, they are very acceptable, as they are the only long stemmed roses in this market. Mr. Conchi is our leading grower of this rose, and has made a great success of it.

The Parodi Floral Company, at 1215 McAllister street, has been carrying a large stock of decorative plants for which they report a steady demand throughout the year. Boston ferns are featured largely. Aspidistras are also a favorite at this store. They say that they are having difficulty in obtaining first grade roses.

The Art Floral Company has been showing some fine cyclamens during the week. The stock of pot grown chrysanthemums has also added much to the beauty of their store. The white and yellow William Turner that this firm is handling, are of wonderful quality for so early in the season. Trade is quite brisk.

Daniel MacRorie is back after a business trip through the southern part of the state. He booked many orders for flowering plants for the holidays. He predicts a heavy plant trade this season, and says all the southern nurserymen and florists are very prosperous. He made the trip in his touring car.

Enomoto Bros. are in with a good cut of Crocus and Crystal Gem chrysanthemums. They also have a nice supply of pompons. They report the demand for the latter to be excellent. Their carnation crop will be in now in a few weeks, and will help to relieve the short supply of this flower. Shipping trade is good with them.

F. C. Jaeger & Sons are handling a fine grade of Wm. H. Waite chrysanthemums, which they say is one of the most popular of the newer varieties. It is a good keeper with them, and its color and fine stem make it a splendid seller. This firm has had a good week with decorative work.

The St. Francis Woods Nursery has a fine lot of young plants coming along for the season's work. They specialize in ericas largely, and have a splendid collection of hardy varieties. These plants are much in favor here for landscape work, and are also largely used by the flower stores.

Brown & Kennedy, at 3091 Sixteenth street, say business is very good with them. They say there is a heavy demand for chrysanthemums, with yellow varieties the best sellers. They are receiving a nice cut of violets, which they find to be in great favor just now.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, is here visiting his growers. He reports a fine trade in that city, and says the demand for chrysanthemums of the better grade is brisk. He reports the shortage of first class rose stock is felt in Sacramento as much as it is here.

The Charles C. Navlet Co. is using quite large space in the Sunday papers, advertising Dutch bulbs and other seasonable stock. It is reported that this advertising has been a great help to them, and is a good investment. Trade keeps up well with them.

Shellgrain & Ritter report a steady call for nearly all kinds of flowers. They are handling a fine grade of gladioli and Crocus chrysanthemums. They say the orchid shortage is now over for the season. Funeral work continues steady with this firm.

The land show, which opens at the civic auditorium this week, will be of much interest to the trade, as many of our large nurserymen and florists will make displays. All the seed houses will make their usual showing of seeds and plants.

Nels Peterson is sending in a choice lot of carnations at the present time. He is unable to supply the demand for all the calls upon him for stock. His houses look very promising and he has every prospect of having a large cut all winter.

Chas. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, of Eureka, has returned home, after spending some time in this city. He says affairs are so shaping themselves that his various enterprises will be shortly on their feet again.

E. Serveau's store is making beautiful fall displays of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Serveau says the demand for violets has been steady since the beginning of the season.

The New York Floral Co. has had a busy week with funeral work. They say trade is opening up in a satisfactory manner in their neighborhood.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

WATERLOO, ONT.—The Lord & Burnham Co. has been given the contract for one house by the park management board of this city.

PANA, ILL.—The Walter A. Amling Co., of this city, has been incorporated by Walter A. Amling, Albert W. Berlin and Martha L. Amling, with a capital stock of $50,000, to deal in seeds, flowers and nursery stock.

Horticultural Society of New York.

MONTHLY MEETING.

The third Wednesday in each month has been decided upon as the stated meeting time of this society. The first meeting under this arrangement will take place Wednesday afternoon, October 15, at the American Museum of Natural History, 77th street and Columbus avenue, New York.

A primary motive in establishing this regular meeting date is to provide for the gardening profession in New York and vicinity a stated monthly meeting to which gardeners may come to discuss current happenings, and also to exhibit new, unusual, or interesting plants or flowers. An invitation is extended to all, especially the gardeners, whether members of the society or not, to attend these meetings. The larger the attendance at the first meeting, the better we can plan for the future, so all interested are urged to be present.

For the benefit of those unfamiliar with the transportation facilities of the city, the following statement is made: The American Museum by Natural History may be reached by the Sixth or Ninth avenue elevated to 81st street; by the Seventh avenue and Broadway subway to 72nd street or 79th street, the former being an express station, and by the Eighth avenue and Columbus avenue surface cars.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

The Late Mrs. Henrietta Rawlings.

Mrs. Henrietta Rawlings, daughter of the late William G. Storrs, for many years general manager of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.; and niece of the late Willis P. Storrs, who was vice-president of the same firm, met death in an automobile accident at Cleveland, O., September 27, while on her way to Painesville, Miss Catherine Rawlings, her daughter, being injured.

The funeral was held September 30, the Rev. James T. Freeborn, of St. James Episcopal church, of Painesville, officiating. The floral tributes were numerous, and the most beautiful ever seen in that city, telling in their silent way of the high esteem in which she was held in a wide circle of friends. The casket bearers, schoolmates of the deceased, four of whom are members of the Storrs & Harrison Co., were W. C. Harrison, E. B. George, J. D. Storrs, B. T. Belden, H. F. Post and Arthur Colby. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery. Surviving are Mrs. Rawling's mother, Mrs. Mary E. Storrs, a daughter, Catherine, and a sister, Mrs. J. W. Rice.

THE membership of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, numbered 1,194, September 30.

NEW YORK.—Local florists would be very willing to have a cold snap now to cut off dahlias and other like outdoor flowers.

THE loss of a million Japanese lily bulbs, reported in the seed trade department of this issue, will render it necessary that growers make prompt arrangements to replace this stock.

THE high wage demands of printers, caused our New York contemporary, the Florists' Exchange, to withhold its issue of October 4, when the forms were ready to go to press. Many other eastern publishers did likewise. We greatly regret this condition and sincerely hope the men and employers may come to terms before the business is swept out of existence.

Flowers Taxed in Germany.

The German Florists' Association has been aroused by the Saxon luxury tax, which will increase to consumers the cost of floral tributes 30 per cent, placing them beyond the reach of the middle and poorer classes. The association claims that the measure will put out of business, one-third of Germany's florist shops and growers.

American Carnation Society.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

By Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass. Ethel Fisher: Cross between two seedlings; bright glowing red; size, three to three and one-half inches; healthy, upright, open grower; early, very free and continuous bloomer; stems long, stiff and wiry; strong calyx, which seldom bursts; easy propagator; excellent keeper and shipper.

A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

Coal Production Lower.

The production of bituminous coal during the week ended September 27, was 11,667,000 tons, or 519,000 tons more than the preceding week. Anthracite coal mined for the same period was 1,946,000 tons, or six per cent more than the previous week. The bituminous production was 1,380,000 tons less than the corresponding week of last year, and the anthracite output 107,000 tons less.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

SPECIAL PRIZES.

Additional special prizes, as follows, are offered for the annual exhibition of the American Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, New York, November 5-7, 1919:

Class O.—President's cup for best 10 blooms, crimson, one variety, on long stems. Open to all. Silver cup, offered by President Wm. W. Vert.

Class P.—Hitchings & Co.'s silver cup for best 10 blooms, yellow, one variety, on long stems. Open to all. Offered by Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. J.

Complete list of prizes may be had upon application to W. A. Eagleson, secretary board of managers, American Institute, 324 West 23rd street, New York.

CHARLES W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

F. T. D. Convention Headquarters.

The Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has been chosen as official headquarters of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association during its meeting in that city, October 14-15. Reservations for accommodations can be made through S. A. Anderson, chairman of the hotel committee, 440 Main street, Buffalo, who requests that owing to the fact that such accommodations are rather limited, it will be to the advantage of all desiring reservations to make application at once.

With reference to the above, President Gude of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, writes as follows: "I have been asked by the management of the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., to advocate putting two in a room as much as possible for our forthcoming meeting, which is to be held in that city, October 14-15. This is done on account of the unusual crowding of hotels. After the experience in Detroit, we can see the wisdom of putting even three in a room rather than to stand around all day and wait for an assignment."

Floricultural Short Course at Cornell.

Registrations are now being made for the short course in floriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., which begins November 5, 1919, and closes with farmers' week, February 9-13, 1920, offering a most excellent opportunity for men interested in floricultural work to get much of value in a comparatively short time. There are classes for commercial florists as well as amateurs. The winter short courses are business and occupational, not academic, hence there are no examinations for admission.

In the distinctly professional courses in floriculture, in addition to the instruction in commercial flower growing, greenhouse practice, greenhouse construction and heating, courses in agricultural chemistry, soils, plant diseases and injurious insects are required. Students also have a wide range of other subjects from which to select courses. Each week during the coming term, a practical specialist in some branch of floriculture will come to the college to give the students talks from every-day experiences. A splendid list of speakers has been arranged.

For any information regarding the course, write the secretary of the College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., or Professor E. A. White, Department of Floriculture.

Co-operation in Reality.

In what it characterizes as "exemplary amity between florists," the Daily Eagle, of Red Wing, Minn., calls attention to the prompt and unselfish action of John and Charles Nordeen, of the Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., who upon hearing that the Sten range at Red Wing had suffered severe damage from hail, October 1, hurried to the scene with an automobile loaded with glass, and assured Mr. Sten that 250 cases more were at his command, enough to repair the damage resulting from the storm. Such assistance, rendered at a time when direly needed, is not of the kind that is estimated in mere dollars and cents.

STOCK IS IN SHORT SUPPLY.

Business is very good and stock of all kinds is in short supply, cleaning up nicely each day at high prices. The shipments of gladioli and asters are small and are not much of a factor in the market at present, although those that are being received command high figures, considering the quality of the stock offered. Carnations are in short supply and are being sold at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per hundred with some fancy stock commanding $5 per 100. American Beauty roses are arriving in splendid condition, and are bringing $2.50 per dozen and up. Roses are good property, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, White Killarney, Double White Killarney, Milady, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Montrose, Champ Weiland, Mrs. George Shawyer and My Maryland are having a good call, as are the few other varieties grown for this market, including a limited supply of Cecile Brunner. White, pink and yellow chrysanthemums are more plentiful and in good demand at very satisfactory figures. A few white pompons are obtainable but clean up early. Orchids continue to command high prices with fancy cattleyas bringing $15 to $18 per dozen. Lily of the valley is holding its own at $15 per 100 with no surplus at any time. A few snapdragons, calendulas and daisies are including in the offerings, together with a limited supply of other seasonable stock, mostly outdoor flowers. Greens are in good supply with a better demand for boxwood, which is more plentiful this week. The fall season is starting off splendidly and everyone is enthusiastic over the future outlook, which appears to brighten up as the days pass by.

Joe Einweck, formerly with Bassett & Washburn, was one of the American soldiers to arrive at San Francisco, Calif., October 7, on the transport Thomas from the Siberian front. Mr. Washburn expected to meet him there on his recent visit, but the boat was late, so he left a letter informing him that his job was open as soon as he was discharged from service.

C. L. Washburn and wife returned home this week from a visit to Los Angeles and San Francisco, Calif. They spent about 10 days at Pasadena with O. P. Bassett and wife and E. B. Washburn and family, and a week at San Francisco. They also visited Roy Wilcox's place at Montebello, where the proprietor is gradually getting things in tip-top condition.

C. E. Critchell was one of the Cincinnati baseball fans that saw the Reds perform here this week. He was well pleased with their record and, like every other Cincinnati rooter, thinks that they are the best players that ever trotted out on a diamond.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is in splendid crop with American Beauty roses, which are attracting the attention of the city buyers at their store. John Poehlmann reports a strong demand for cattleyas, with the stock commanding high prices.

One of the local gladioli growers reports that his returns from his commission house this season were 10 per cent greater than those of 1918, notwithstanding the fact that he only had about one-half as many as last year.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a very good week with a grand clean-up in stock each day. The shipping trade continues to be brisk here, and there has been a wonderful improvement in the city demand.

Quite a number of the local retail florists are receiving chrysanthemums direct from California again this season, and it is rumored that one of the wholesale houses is doing the same.

L. R. Bohannon and wife have returned from a pleasant sojourn in California, where they visited many of the retail stores at Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Zech & Mann are having a brisk call for chrysanthemums, which they are handling in quantity, in addition to a complete line of all other stock.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a good supply of Early Frost chrysanthemums in addition to a large quantity of carnations.

Chris Pederson is back on the job after enjoying a pleasant visit with his folks in northern Wisconsin.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports a good call for fancy dahlias, which are a leader at its store this week.

Chas. W. McKellar and wife are planning on spending the winter in California.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago will hold their monthly meeting, October 16, at 7 p. m., in the village hall at Morton Grove upon invitation of the florists of that place. Previous to the business session, a tour of inspection will be made of the greenhouse establishments and all who wish to be present are requested to assemble at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s office, at 3 p. m. The meeting will prove especially interesting and all growers are asked to be present. Good automobile roads lead to Morton Grove and trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway leave the Union station at 2:00, 3:05 and 5:20 p. m.

President Miller, of the American Bulb Co., reached here, October 6, from Seattle, Wash., where he visited for about a week after his return from Japan. He reports having had a delightful time in the Orient, where he saw Johan A. Ebbers, of this city, who imports florists' supplies to this country.

Peter Papes, of the Central Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., left for home last week after spending several days visiting in this city with Peter Duris and Louis Duris at their local establishment at North State street.

The Nate Lewis Floral Co., formerly located at 182 North Wabash avenue, has moved to 34 West Randolph street. Irving Stein manages the business, and caters particularly to the theatrical trade.

William Zimmermann, one of the leading retail florists of Milwaukee, Wis., saw the Cincinnati Reds defeat the White Sox at the south side park to the tune of 5 to 0, Monday, October 6.

Walter A. Maas and wife, of Milwaukee, Wis., were welcome visitors, October 8. Mr. Maas is looking fine, notwithstanding the siege of illness he went through recently.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports a heavy demand for wild smilax. Edgar says that the cut ferns now arriving are the best his firm has received for many seasons.

Michael Freres, formerly with the Ohio Floral Co., is now with A. T. Pyfer & Co., having joined the force at their house October 6.

PEORIA ILL.—Haase Bros. are adding one large house to their establishment in this city.

OSKALOOSA, IA.—The range of the Kemble Floral Co., recently destroyed by fire, with a heavy loss, will be rebuilt immediately.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Philip Dauenheimer, for the past 10 years with Wm. Schlatter & Son, is building one house on his property on Dawes street.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—John J. Prouty, of Baldwinsville, took every first prize in the gladioli classes in the professional section at the recent flower show in this city.

Tacoma, Wash.

TRADE CONDITIONS VERY FAVORABLE

Business in this city and locality keeps right on with the steps of progress toward higher prices—less profits and more work—every one doing his bit to get a living and a profit for the rainy day that right now seems ready to get busy for the winter. It has been a long time since the writer saw any seriously long face at the front door, wishing something would happen to break the sameness of "no business." For a long time it has been a smile and —"Business first rate"—or "Can't complain any over the way we've been doing lately—sometimes have trouble to get enough stock." Never before has there been such a demand for cut flowers of all kinds and the prices for everything have almost been doubled. Roses have had less advance than other sorts; however, they will soon be higher because the outdoor grown stock will be cut off by Jack Frost. Asters have never been better—the supply just about what has been needed. Gladioli have been finer than ever—better sellers, too, for the simple reason that lighter colors have been grown. Sweet peas have been extra good—not in oversupply either. Carnations have been rather scarce and brought better prices than ever before. Practically none of the newer varieties have been planted or tried by florists in this locality—just the same old list of standards are to be cut again at all places. Fine chrysanthemums are already coming in from California and will soon be cut by our own local growers, and this means that we will have them for about five months more. They will be at their best some time in December. The proposition of bulbs for the coming season "is all up in the air"—if we may say it in slang. Right here we are wondering if some of our florists will ever get wise to the fact that here on Puget Sound is a better place—soil and climate and all conditions for growing best of bulbs included—than any place in America. I will answer any inquries that may be sent to me on this subject—in fact, wish to have this proposition investigated thoroughly—by any one that may be interested.

NOTES.

The Hayden-Watson Co. is now nicely located in the store, 915 Pacific avenue. The question of high rentals on Broadway made it out of the bounds of possibility of holding the location. They have good business coming right along—both retail and wholesale shipping. Stock that comes in from their own place continues first class, and it seems to be only a matter of having a supply for the demand. This means that financial matters are getting better right along with them, after somewhat of a "lean period."

The California Florists have had an excellent season right along, but the question of a supply to meet the demand at all times bothers them. They do not grow stock of any kind, but de-

Very little building has been done this year among the florists—about the only activity was the addition of one new house by F. C. Smith to his place on South 56th street. Several ranges will soon have to be rebuilt but are to be tried through another winter.

The F. C. Smith Co. keeps busy right along, both at the store and greenhouses and have added a new house to their range that will help out somewhat in taking care of the growing business. Stock of all kinds looks fine at their range.

John Hamilton has opened in a new store, 1129 South Broadway. He will no doubt have a nice business because of the good location and his past satisfactory service to the public when he was located on 11th street.

Louis Tschunko has a fine lot of stock coming on for the coming season; his place will furnish the usual good cut of carnations of which he makes a specialty. Louis does some local retail business, too.

The Tacoma Floral Co. reports a fine business all the time—just a question of getting enough of the right stock at the right time.

H. H. Hinze has enjoyed a prosperous season, and will no doubt get his portion of business the coming fall.

BUSINESS SUFFERS SETBACK.

The extremely warm and unseasonable weather has caused a slump in business, also bringing stock into the market in poor condition, especially roses and dahlias. A good many roses are arriving full bloom, while the dahlias from the New Jersey growers get heated on the way, causing them to drop their petals. We can look for no relief until fall weather sets in in earnest. American Beauties are getting better in color and quality, but the demand has been light. Of the roses, Columbia and Russell seem to stand up the best. Chrysanthemums are beginning to arrive in larger quantity, and will soon be a factor. Carnations are coming stronger every day and are improving in quality. The first sweet peas have made their appearance, and while they are short stemmed, sell readily. A few good gladioli are arriving daily and bring good prices, while asters are a thing of the past. The supply of greens and smilax is ample to meet the demand.

NOTES.

Wm. McCauley, formerly of The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co., the first man from his district to enlist after war was declared, has just been mustered out of the navy. After resting up for a few days, he will travel for the McCallum Co.

TRADE CONDITIONS MUCH IMPROVED.

Business conditions for the week ending October 4 were very satisfactory all around. Due to the recent rainy spell, the daily receipts of indoor stock gradually diminished, and with most of the outdoor cut flowers out of the way for this season, it was a pleasure to see how stock of all kinds kept moving. Roses are just about equal to the demand, while with carnations, it was just the opposite; more orders than stock. With the closing days of the week, the market was relieved some by the arrival of more white and yellow chrysanthemums. Up to this time there were only a very few to be had from one or two growers, but now quite a few have began to cut regularly. Still, if the demand increases in proportion to what it has for the past fortnight, there will not be enough to satisfy everybody. At this writing we have not had our first frost.

NOTES.

The attendance at the October 2 meeting of the florists' club again was very gratifying. H. V. Hunkel, chairman of the state fair committee, handed in an itemized account of the work done at this year's fair, which was accompanied by a check from the fair board to cover the expenses. It was decided to devote all the time necessary at the November meeting to map out the plans for next year, and every body was asked to make known anything in the way of improvement on grounds, the building or premium list that will tend to a better and larger display.

Miss Rose Semmler, vice-president of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., has the sincere sympathy of local friends in the loss of her sister, Mrs. Ida Wilson, who died October 4, and was buried at West Bend, Wis., October 6.

Herm. Staeps, of Elm Grove, is consigning some fine Chrysolora to the C. C. Pollworth Co. The latter firm is busy booking orders for Dutch bulbs, and a fine lot of cyclamens in five-inch pots.

The daily cut of roses from the Brown Deer plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co. shows the effects of the more favorable growing weather, the quality being fine and orders numerous.

Herm. Arndt, Jr., who grew carnations and sweet peas, has sold his interest in the greenhouses to his brother, Arthur, and will shortly open a flower store in Wauwatosa.

Due to ill health, Miss Seaman, who for the past 20 years has been a most faithful employe at Currie Bros. Co., has resigned to take a well deserved rest.

Otto Schroeder, of the Meyer & Schroeder Co., Green Bay, Wis., and wife, spent a few days devoted to business and pleasure in this city last week.

Gust Rusch, of Gust Rusch & Co., and Wm. Zimmermann, spent October 4-5 at Chicago to witness the world's series base ball game.

SUPPLY IN GENERAL IS AMPLE.

Local flower shops report generally satisfactory stocks during the past week with the exception of chrysanthemums, the supply coming from California, with no receipts for five days, due to a railroad cave-in and a stevedores' strike which affected the boat shipments from San Francisco. Dahlias, asters, carnations and zinnias, therefore, took up this share of the business, with roses meeting their usual heavy call. Local asters have this season proven superior to those brought in from the south and shipping orders fell off heavily as a result. Gladioli, in the pink varieties have been featured by several of the leading retailers with the natural increase in sales. The talk of national unrest and money shortage is not noticeable in business and in most instances the trade has enjoyed a better demand than ever recorded for September. The resumption of trans-Pacific travel, and the re-establishment of telegraph orders, has been a big factor. There is a larger assortment of dahlias on the market than ever before and the florists have been able to cater to the public taste which so far seems to prefer the dark, highly colored sorts. Mauve has been one of the leading sellers.

NOTES.

An affair that attracted a great deal of interest, both in the trade and general circles, was the annual show of the Pacific Coast Dahlia Society, staged in the rooms of Randall-McLoughlin. The entire floor space of this seed and bulb house was given over to a three days' exhibition, with nearly 1,000 blooms entered and many new hybrids were shown. Cups were offered by Randall-McLoughlin, the Bon Marche, Frank Victor and the society promoting the show, while Furuay & Co. offered three huge Oriental vases as prizes. A similar event was held in Everett, Wash., this week, and attracted several hundred entries. It was given by the local dahlia society, and the retailers of the two cities helped the affair along by giving a part of their window display to this flower, and by calling attention to the shows in their daily advertising.

Rosaia Bros. have received much favorable comment on the huge floral piece prepared by them for the Rainier club during the fleet festivities. The words, "Welcome, Pacific Fleet" were worked out in dahlias and asters, in pink, on a green background. The letters were four feet high, and the sign was 90 feet in length. This same firm supplied the baskets of wild fern and madrona which the city placed on each light post along First, Second and Third avenues at this time.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop attracted much attention with its suggestive showing of flowers last week. Suitable pieces for graduations, weddings, banquets, luncheons, christenings and other social events were worked up, in vari-colored baskets, with ribbons, roses, orchids, asters, chrysanthemums, carnations, water lilies and celosias.

INCREASED SUPPLY AND BETTER DEMAND.

There has been a better market the past week—more stock and a greater demand. Of course, as compared with last season, at this time, there is not the volume, and the receipts fall away behind. No one, however, is at all worried at conditions. Business is going along smoothly. Stock is cleaning up well, there being scarcely anything to carry over last Saturday. There are at least one-third more dahlias, the dominant flower at this time, than last year. Yet they all sell at fair prices. The coming week will see the height of the crop. Roses are more plentiful, particularly the shorts, but all seem to go at figures satisfactory to the dealers. The quality is improving steadily; both Columbia and Premier are sure to be among the leaders. Chrysanthemums are increasing slowly, the variety Early Rose, a large pink, being added to the list. Very good indoor grown pink snapdragon is seen, as is also the first of the new crop of sweet peas, short stemmed and many with only one flower, but saleable. Single violets are improving each week, but are never much until the first frost. Cattleyas are a trifle more abundant. The purple fall aster and cosmos are quantity stocks that are popular with most buyers. Yellow daisies and callas, the first of the new crops, were sent in this week.

CLUB MEETING.

The October meeting of the florists' club was, from the standpoint of publicity, inspiring, full of enthusiasm and productive of good results. In the programme for "Say it With Flowers" week, there is included a large, elaborately decorated float in the city's historical and fraternal pageant, October 11, and flowers are to be sent to all churches, Sunday, the day following. On Tuesday, flowers will be sent to the hospitals. Twenty large stores in the retail district, other than florists' establishments, are to have elaborate baskets of flowers furnished for their windows, each carrying a pennant, "Say it With Flowers." Flower shops will be elaborately decorated and well stocked, with special invitations sent to all patrons to call and make an inspection. Charles H. Grakelow, who managed the meeting, was at his best and did much to inspire the members of the trade to do their best. Robert Craig made a stirring appeal and the Milwaukee plan of collecting funds by percentage was unanimously adopted. More than 200 members of the trade were present.

OPTIMISM.

There appears to be a spirit of cheerfulness and great expectations for the future in all lines of the craft. Retailers all say their fall season is opening up in fine shape. September being, with the great majority, much better than a year ago. Now they are all busy trying to offset the great funeral demand of last year, with weddings, of which there has been a great increase over last September, and the calls for flowers for the debutantes, which are rapidly increasing. The growers say the Christmas orders are being placed earlier than ever before, and at better prices, while the supply dealers declare their traveling men are having the greatest trips they have ever experienced.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WEEK.

The committee is much pleased with the way its plans are being received by the trade. It has been thought best to omit the parade of florists' cars and floats, and confine this display to any form of decoration each retailer desires for his own car. "Say it With Flowers" week pennants, (rights and lefts) are to be provided for all cars. Baskets are to be sent for all hotel counters, bearing a card, "Say it With Flowers" Week. Flowers are also to be sent to all churches accompanied by a letter, which the committee has prepared, each dealer taking care of the churches which he calls his own in a business way. Baskets of flowers, each with a "Say it With Flowers" pennant, are to be placed in prominent Chestnut street store windows. This, with flowers sent to all hospitals, enough for each patient, and the extra decorations of each retail shop, their increased stock, together with large newspaper ads, should start the season off with a grand hurrah, and fill the people's minds with the idea that flowers are really a necessity.

LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Leo Niessen furnishes the information that the best German lily of the valley is quoted at $30 per 1,000, pips, American money, f. o. b. Germany. The German mark, par 25 cents, fell to as low as 3.15, and is now quoted at five cents in the rate of exchange. It will be another season before this lovely flower will be received in any quantity in this market.

NOTES.

Samuel S. Lilley has sold his interest in the Chalfonte Cut Flower Co., to his partner, Peter Hellberg. Carnations have been their specialty, their 50,000 feet of modern glass houses at Chalfonte, Pa., being filled with carnation plants, which look very promising. Mr. Lilley will confine his interests to the S. S. Pennock Co., with which firm he has been employed the past two years.

take part in the "fraternity parade" next week. He has also a large contract for the decoration of a portion of the Parkway, along which the various organizations will pass.

The Jos. G. Neidinger Co. is having a wonderful run on every line they carry. Their large advance stock of baskets is going fast, and there is a great demand for all kinds of Christmas wreaths.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., have kindly offered for "Say it With Flowers" week, all the dahlias the committee needs from their 70-acre tract, which at this time are a wonderful sight.

Pennock Bros. have been very busy the past week, several important weddings and coming out teas, using up quantities of flowers.

John Berger, of the Berger Bros. Co., says September business was the best they ever experienced for that month. Exceptionally fine dahlias are features here.

Edward Reid is still in the wilds of the Dakotas, but the business is in competent hands and goes on just the same. Choice roses are a feature.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has never had better dahlias. They find a very good market for all their stock. K.

New York.

BUSINESS NORMAL FOR SEASON.

Business keeps moving in about the usual volume for this season. At this time last year, there were unusual conditions on account of the influenza epidemic which created an exceptional demand. The weather of Monday and Tuesday of the past week was fair, but for the succeeding days, there was almost continuous dark weather, with much rain. The rose supply was not heavy, and prices on special stock were firm with an advance on special American Beauties toward the last of the week. As showing that business was not particularly active, or that for the time being the tastes of the people have changed, the orchid market fell flat. Cattleyas literally went a begging at 50 cents per flower, wholesale, and some sold for 30 cents. Of course, a little special stock went somewhat better, but the general situation was bad. The chrysanthemum supply is not yet heavy, but there are quite enough to meet the demand while so many dahlias are about. Excellent stock of the latter is now on the market, and the best of the large fancies are bringing high prices, $6 to $15 per 100; in some cases, $20. The gladioli and asters are about finished, after a long run. There will yet be straggling lots, but they are no longer factors. The carnation supply is slowly increasing, and good stock is pushing up in price. Quantities of violets are on the market, but the weather has not been favorable to the use of these, and they move slowly. There are considerable displays of cosmos and various other outdoor stocks, all of which finds some buyers.

October 6.—There has now been almost a week of rain, fog and general humidity. Although a considerable stock continues to arrive, the weather is having a bad effect on the roses. The wholesale business today is rather slow and rose prices are likely to be weaker by the middle of the week. There is a heavy supply of dahlias, and chrysanthemums are on the increase.

NOTES.

We have received from W. A. Eagleson, secretary to the board of managers of the American Institute, the schedule of prizes to be awarded at the chrysanthemum exhibition to be held in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, November 5-7. A list of special prizes, offered by various firms for the Chrysanthemum Society of America was also enclosed. The success of the recent dahlia exhibition held in connection with the Institute should encourage chrysanthemum growers to make this a banner show, or as our stage friends say: "The greatest attraction of the season."

The Park Garden Club, of Flushing, which is a real live organization, recently held its dahlia show, and such an expert as our own P. W. Popp, who was one of the judges, pronounced it an excellent and well managed affair. Robert B. Lawrence won the bronze medal given by the American Dahlia Society for the best collection of dahlias. Malcolm Graham won the silver cup, offered for the best seedling. Mrs. J. W. Paris, president of the club, was absent in Los Angeles, but her dahlias were exhibited and won prizes.

The range of greenhouses formerly operated by Herman Kommitsch, the orchid grower, at Secaucus, N. J., has been taken over by Carl Liess, the former foreman, who will continue to produce the same quality of chrysanthemums and sweet peas that have made the establishment famous, in and around this city. Traendly & Schenck, who have been handling the stock for the past 20 years, will continue to dispose of the product.

John A. Semon, the retailer of 694 Eighth avenue, has with his own brush —or brushes—handsomely repainted and decorated the interior of his store. Being of French descent, he has inherited a share of the artistic temperament for which that nation is noted. As showing that the world is not so very large, Mr. Semon was born in Montevideo, South America, but has been in business in this city for over 20 years.

Joseph Levy, of the Brooklyn Cut Flower Market, who has had a long stay in a hospital after an operation on one of his legs, is now able to move about on crutches.

Bonnet & Blake, the Brooklyn wholesalers, are receiving a good quality of carnations for the season. They are also featuring a fine stock of the leading commercial dahlias.

The Noe-Sampson department of the New York Cut Flower Co. is receiving a good stock of gardenias from the range of Noe & Ruzicka, of Madison, N. J.

The Astor Floral Co., a retail concern, formerly located at 290 Flatbush avenue, has removed to 196 Livingston street, Brooklyn.

The Henshaw Floral Co., is handling fine stock of the chrysanthemum, Bronze Unaka.

William Mackie is receiving good stock, both of chrysanthemums and dahlias. A. F. F.

The annual dahlia exhibition of the New Haven County Horticultural Society, held in the public library September 30-October 1, was a successful affair. On the first day, Secretary Rathgeber was kept busy assisting exhibitors to get their stock properly staged, and it was late in the afternoon when the judges, P. W. Popp and Professor George Fraser, got to work. Notably fine stock was exhibited by Alfred E. Doty and Miss Emma Slocombe. In the Doty exhibit the Millionaire, Yuban and Salome Jane were conspicuous. He also had good exhibits of peony flowered, decorative, cactus and hybrid stock. Miss Slocombe's collection included a number of good varieties named for members of the Slocombe family. Other good ones were Pride of New Haven, Dr. Frank H. Whittemore, Isabel Roberts and Mrs. A. R. Gallatin. There were a number of other exhibits fram private growers. C. Louis Alling, a well known commercial grower of West Haven, also made a good showing.

"The wilderness shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." Some sentiment like the above must have risen in the minds of many persons that have recently viewed the new nurseries of the Elm City Nursery Company, at Woodmont, near the railroad, on the outskirts of New Haven. That part of the outskirts of a large city traversed by a railroad is not, as a rule, particularly attractive, and before the Elm City Nursery Company located at Woodmont it was no exception to the rule, but they have made a marked improvement.

Many expressions of regret are heard over the passing away of John A. Long, the grower of East Haven. Practically every New Haven retail florist had done business with him, and all speak highly of his straightforward honesty. Before going into business for himself, 20 years ago, he was gardener on the estate of the late Hiram Camp, who for years was president of the New Haven Clock Co., said to be the largest concern of its kind in the world.

The dahlia garden on Townsend avenue, made famous by the late John H. Slocombe, is now conducted by his daughter, Miss Emma Slocombe. She had years of experience in the business with her father, and seems likely to sustain the fine reputation won by the Slocombe dahlias.

John N. Champion is looking forward with great interest to the coming meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., October 14-15. He is one of the oldest members.

H. H. Kelsey, who now conducts the range on Sherman avenue, formerly owned by the Doolittle Company, has a variety of good stock coming on. A. L. Doolittle now works with him.

William Long, formerly in the retail business on Chapel street, is now working at the range of his late brother, John A. Long, in East Haven.

Charles Munro is now greatly interested in his Westerly, R. I., range, but does not neglect his New Haven business, which is quite active.

The store of the S. H. Moore Company is attractive with all seasonable flowers. They have been quite busy with funeral work.

The optimistic Myers, of The Flower Shop, is, as usual, active and smiling, and looking forward to a good season's business.

The Slocombe Brothers, of Townsend avenue, have a forward looking stock of sweet peas and violets coming on.

Fred Horn, at 418 Woodward avenue, has a good stock of chrysanthemums and carnations.

Washington Florists' Club.

Another highly enjoyable "members night" was held by the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., at the rooms of Edward S. Schmid, 712 Twelfth street, Northwest. The evening started with a discussion of dahlias. A great many features concerning their propagation, sale and use in decorative purposes were touched on. It is the practice of the club to discuss some floral family at each of its meetings, and in line with this, the chrysanthemum will come next. Immediately following the conclusion of the routine business of the meeting, the long table in the center of the room was spread, and volunteers from among the members served fried oysters and the "fixin's," and steaming hot coffee that made those lucky enough to be present forget that Washington was experiencing one of the heaviest rain storms of the season. All discussions were, of course, informal and most of the talk centered around the proposed flower week. J. Harper Hetherington, of the finance committee, stated that the retailers, growers and wholesalers were heartily in favor of the plans so far worked out, and were coming forward with contributions. Some time was devoted to a discussion of publicity. The services of a competent newspaperman are to be secured for the event. The members of the publicity committee are George C. Shaffer, chairman; Fred H. Kramer and A. O. C. Oehmler.

It developed that a large number of Washingtonians would accept the invitation of the Baltimore Florists' and Gardeners' Association to attend the annual dinner and ladies' night of the latter organization, October 21, at the Southern hotel roof garden. A letter from the secretary of the Baltimore association announced that William F. Gude, of Washington; President Ammann, and President-elect Miller, of the S. A. F.; the mayor of Baltimore, and Charles Grakelow, of Philadelphia, Pa., would be among the speakers of the evening.

Applications for membership were received from John Small and Frank E. Miller, of the firm of J. H. Small & Sons, and Alfred J. Schiller, of the Leo Niessen Company.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, October 8, was $62.00.

VISITED NEW YORK: George C. Watson, of Philadelphia, Pa.

PEPPER indications are for a 50 per cent yield, compared with last year.

THE ocean freight rate to England has recently fallen from $1.50 to $1.00 per hundred pounds.

THOSE who have tried it say there is nothing in "Brown October Ale" this year to make one sing.

NASTURTIUM seed of low vitality is plentiful and cheap. Better test all nasturtium seed before buying.

THE weather continues too mild to stimulate counter trade in bulbs, although a fair demand exists.

THE continued mild weather has tempted eastern gladiolus growers to delay lifting the crop. Probably not 25 per cent is out of the ground so far.

MAIL order houses, east and west, report fall mail trade from catalogues of fall bulbs and plants to be excellent, far ahead of September of 1918, or even 1917 business.

VISITED CHICAGO: Howard M. Earl, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; A. L. Rogers, Alpena, Mich.; C. A. Haid, of Otto Schwill & Co., Memphis, Tenn.; J. A. Everitt, Indianapolis, Ind.

VICE-CONSUL WEBBER says Nottingham, Eng., exported vegetable seeds to the value of $239,641 to the United States during the first six months of 1919, against $24,122 during the same period of 1918, an extraordinary increase.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened 10 cents higher and October and December were steady, October 6, with cash offered at $30.60. Timothy was unchanged, cash being offered at $5.40, October $5.60, December $5.70; March $5.75 and April $5.72½.

THIS year's imports of Dutch bulbs aggregate some 30,000 cases to date and they are practically all in. In 1917, there were 56,000 cases, but the record for 1918 is not available. Some importers of former years have been unable to get passports.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The Randall-McLoughlin Co. reports increased business, necessitating the opening of an uptown branch on Westlake avenue, in charge of Mr. Randall. The Western avenue establishment will continue in charge of Mr. McLoughlin.—H. M.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are quoted this week at $2.75 for reds and yellows and $3.25 for whites. Financial returns indicate that the year has been more favorable for market gardeners than for onion growers. The deliveries of sets indicate two to two and one-half bushel crop per pound of seed sown. Some of the set houses are being used to store large onions by South Water street firms.

LA PARK, PA.—George W. Park, formerly of this place, has removed to Florida.

NEW YORK.—J. H. Walter, of Stumpp & Walter Co., has returned from his summer home in Maine.

THE longshoremen's strike at New York, in unloading the S. S. Glensanda, carrying Dutch bulbs, leaves her half unloaded.

CHARLES P. GUELPH, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is spending October at his cottage at Hamlin, N. Y., on Lake Ontario.

NEWARK, N. J.—J. J. Wilson calls attention to the fact that his store window and others to the value of $10,000 have been wantonly smashed by strike sympathizers here recently, also advertising signs worth $5,000. Such destruction of property can only result in increasing the already high cost of living.

IMPORT duties should be carefully watched on account of the continually changing exchange rates. As we understand it, in the case of German goods bought in marks, the duty is figured at 23 8/10 cents, as in ordinary times. After protest, it is stated, liquidation is made at current rate of exchange, now around four cents.

Million Lily Bulbs Lost.

The Japanese steamer, Yuten Maru, from Yokohama to New York via Panama, is reported cut in two on a reef off the coast of Japan when five days out, and a total loss. The steamer is said to have carried one million bulbs of Lilium giganteum for American dealers.

The Japanese crop of L. giganteum bulbs in sizes over seven inches is said to be less than 60 per cent of normal average, since a large percentage of the growing bulbs were found at digging time to run below the 7-inch grade; whether later dug fields will show better results could not be told at the middle of September.

Seed Growing.

Judging from the large volume of price lists coming to hand from persons and firms in Europe and elsewhere, unknown to the trade before the war, a large number of farmers and others, stimulated by high prices, have embarked in seed growing as an easy means of gaining a livelihood. The stocks offered by these new producers must be tried before their value can be known. The development of seed growers and worthy strains of seed is a slow and costly work. Good seeds are not produced by miracle, and careful buyers looking forward to satisfactory results will continue to rely upon seed growers of known experience, not overlooking the fact that war time losses of men and stocks will render bargains rare for years to come.

Gladiolus Bulblet Digger.

G. D. Black, of Independence, Ia., is using a machine for digging his gladiolus bulblets. Mr. Black writes as follows with regard to this machine:

"We dig only our small bulblet stock with a machine that we had made ourselves by our local blacksmith. This machine is made on the same principle as a nursery tree digger, but on a small scale, cutting only about three inches wide, just below the bulblets. Another knife removes about an inch of the surface soil and cuts the tops off the bulblets. In this way we have the least amount of soil possible to sift from the bulblets. With this machine two men will dig as many bulblets as five men by hand. The machine can only be used where bulblets are planted by machine at an even depth We have used it two seasons, but it is yet in its experimental stage, as we think we can make some improvements for another season."

JEROME B. RICE SEED CO., CAMBRIDGE, N. Y.

Watching the Other Fellow.

The editor of the American Magazine calls attention to a habit that a good many business men have, in the following paragraph:

"I once knew a man who ran a small business successfully in the face of great odds imposed against him by a strong competitor. He said that he never could have done it if he had not learned and mastered one thing—namely, to look at his own job, and not waste time looking over the fence at the big fellow who was working against him. "That is all there is to this envy and jealousy business; it is looking over the fence at the other fellow, instead of looking at the job in hand. There is absolutely nothing in it."

There is probably less excuse for anything like this in the seed business than elsewhere. There are so many opportunities for the seedsman to keep busy—to be finding new ways of increasing his own business, instead of worrying because his competitor is getting ahead. The seed merchant has one of the biggest fields in the whole game to study. He must be ready to tell his customers what to plant and often how to plant it. If he is informed on all these lines, he never has to worry about doing as big a business as the other fellow.—Nicholson's Notes.

Seeds for Government.

Contracts for seeds for the various government departments in Washington, and such of the field services as may require such stocks during the four months beginning November 1, will be awarded, October 16 by the general supply committee. Bids for the supply of these stocks will be received until two o'clock on that date. Among the seeds which will be purchased during the period covered by the awards, are the following:

Alfalfa; purity, 98; germination, 90.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

Sign of the Times.

Wood Norton, Worcestershire, has been sold by Sir Charles Swinfen Eady, to George Swift, a large market gardener of Hampton, Evesham. Wood Norton was the sanctuary of the Bourbons when they were exiled from France, and Sir Charles Swinfen Eady purchased it from the Duke of Orleans in 1912. Ex-King Manuel, of Portugal, and his mother also found refuge there after the loss of the throne of Portugal.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Cucumbers, bushel basket, $2.25 to $2.50; celery, Michigan, crate, 75 cents to $1.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 15 to 17½ cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; tomatoes, per box, 15 to 20 cents.

New York, Oct. 6.—Celery, per doz. roots, 20 to 75 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $1.50 to $2.00; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, carrier, 75 cents to $3.00; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $2.00.

Sugar Not Needed for Canning.

Do not let surplus fruit go to waste because you cannot obtain sugar to use for preserving purposes. Fruit can be successfully canned without it, and it can be sweetened when served next winter, or syrup can be used in place of sugar to sweeten it now.

To can without sugar, simply fill the jars containing the fruit with clean, hot water, instead of the usual syrup, and process the jars in a hot-water bath. The fruit will not spoil, but it will not have quite as fine a flavor and color as that which is packed in syrup. Directions for canning by the "cooked-in-the-can" method should be carefully followed to can successfully without sugar, the United States department of agriculture suggests.

Fruits canned without sugar are especially good in salads, desserts, pie fillings, ices and in fruit punches. They can also be made into jams and marmalades when sugar is obtainable. Fruit juices take no sugar, and their uses are just as varied during the winter season as are the fruits put up unsweetened. These fruit juices are also available for jelly at a future time when sugar is more plentiful. Vegetables need no sugar, and plenty of canned vegetables are always acceptable during the winter months. Fruit and vegetables may be high, and sugar scarce, but the margin of difference in price between the home canned and the commercially canned product is likely to be as great as when both fresh fruit and vegetable and canned goods were lower in price. The wise are still practicing home canning, sugar or no sugar.

Direct Seeding of Lettuce.

We have repeatedly called attention to direct seeding of lettuce under glass during the fall months. The method has much to commend it, but the one big factor in our mind is the comparative immunity from disease. There is no question whatever that the two shifts ordinarily employed in the production of lettuce present a grave risk as long as the weather is hot. Lettuce simply resent disturbance at the roots in warm weather. The direct seeding method is nothing else but the outdoor process moved indoors. After the ground is prepared, take an ordinary garden drill, and run the rows 10 inches apart, the length of the greenhouse. It is best to remove the covering device of the drill, and sometimes the opening plow as well as we do not want the seed buried or covered at all. We like to sow into the track of the marker, and simply roll the seeds down. Next, turn on the water, and keep the soil wet and until plants are erect. This may take three or four days, and with mechanical watering is easily done. We like to use so much water at this time that the soil is soaked down for many feet; in fact, we would like to apply all the water we need to grow the entire crop at one time. If the soil is right, and has been properly prepared, it is quite possible to water continuously for three or four days, and until the water appears at the surface indicating a complete saturation. As soon as the lettuce are up, stop all watering, and use the wheel hoe as soon as possible. Next, when the young plants show a character leaf—block with a hoe by cutting into the rows, always cutting out the width of the hoe and leaving a few plants in each bunch. These are later kinked to one plant, and should be about eight inches apart. Thus transplating is entirely avoided. We have seen some wonderful crops produced that way, where the early transplanted lots proved bad failures.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

According to reports received by the United States bureau of markets for the period, September 30-October 6, jobbing prices in most lines were fairly steady. Potatoes at shipping points were generally steady and jobbing markets experienced a slight decline. Maine Green Mountains advanced 10 cents in New York to $2.60, but declined 15 cents in Boston to $2.50-$2.65. New Jersey Giants held fairly steady in the east at $2.35-$2.55, but declined to $2 at Detroit. Minnesota Early Ohios went 30 cents higher than the previous week in the Chicago carlot market, closing at $2.75-$2.90 and were steady in other markets with an upward tendency to reach $3. Minnesota Red River Ohios advanced slightly at Moorhead to $2.55-$2.60, but declined somewhat in most western jobbing markets. Minnesota Round Whites declined to $2.25-$2.30 per 100 pounds sacked at Minneapolis. Colorado stock held firm at all points. Onions were steady. Eastern sacked yellow stock closed at $3.00-$3.50 per 100 pounds f. o. b. Rochester and also cipal eastern markets with a dull demand generally. Minnesota Red Globes jobbed at the same prices in the prin-held steady at $3.40-$3.50 sacked, per 100 pounds at Minneapolis. Middle-western yellow varieties declined in the east to $3.10-$3.50, but held generally steady in the central west at $3.50-$3.75, reaching $4 in Kansas City and Columbus, O. Wisconsin and Minnesota Holland Seed cabbage advanced to $26-$27 bulk per ton f. o. b. shipping points, but closed at previous week's range, $21-$25. New York Domestics held unchanged at $18-$25 per ton f. o. b. Rochester and up to $30-$35 in the east. Danish Seed brought $28-$30 f. o. b. Rochester. Long Island barrels weakened in New York to $1.50-$1.75. Virginia Yellow sweet potatoes advanced from $3.50-$3.75 to $3.75-$4 per barrel in New York and $4.25 per barrel in Boston. They advanced 25 cents in Baltimore, 75 cents in Philadelphia and 25 cents in Cincinnati.

Baltimore.

LITTLE CHANGE IN MARKET CONDITIONS.

No unusual conditions are noted as regards the market at the present time. Dahlias are received as high in quality as they will be this season, and white roses are a little more plentiful, with pink and red sorts also in better supply. A few gladioli are offered, but aside from the red varieties, there is not much to be said of them as to quality. Yellow chrysanthemums are arriving in usual numbers, and a few more white are now available. Carnations are starting to come in and will prove a good substitute for the dahlias when the frost cuts them down. Orchids are still off crop, one, two, or possibly three, being about all that are available at one time.

NOTES.

Charles Siegwart, of Irvington, is cutting his annual crop of dahlias which are showing better form than in previous years. A customer in one of the stores was heard to say: "The man who grew those flowers must have taken care of each one like he would a baby." The blooms are like small pink chrysanthemums, with stems three feet long and foliage without a blemish. This grower always grows well everything that he attempts.

All the spare moments of the florist club's entertainment committee are being spent on work pertaining to the "ladies' night," October 21. The Southern hotel has been secured for the event which will give ample room. Elaborate decorations are being planned and a unique table arrangement has been decided upon. First class entertainment and dancing will make the occasion an enjoyable one for all who attend. If you have not arranged for your ticket, better do it now.

The following nominees for office, unanimously chosen by the florists' club, will be formally elected at the regular meeting, October 13: Wm. F. Ekas, president; Robert L. Graham, Jr., vice-president; Robert T. Paterson, secretary; Albert G. Fiedler, treasurer; C. Harry Wagner, financial secretary; Charles Wagner, librarian.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

IN the midst of the discussion of stirring questions, says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the Los Angeles Times finds leisure to call for a seedless blackberry.

ROHNERVILLE, CALIF. — George H. Stewart, a pioneer nurseryman of this city, and a fruit grower of wide experience, died at his home here, recently, age 84 years. He was one of the first horticultural commissioners of the state.

USSY, FRANCE.—It is reported that the firm of Levavasseur & Sons has been dissolved and that effective September 1, the establishment here will be in charge of Norbert Levavasseur, while Ernest Levavasseur will manage the one at Orleans.

THE Ohio State University, Columbus, announces that many people are placing their apple supply for the coming winter in pits, where a suitable cellar is not available, packing them in barrels sunk in soil below the frost line in a well-drained location.

APPLE BLOTCH, which has caused an annual loss of thousands of dollars in Ohio, and has been rapidly increasing for several years, can be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture, demonstrations in that state this year, showing that such treatment is almost 100 per cent effective, according to the Ohio State University agricultural extension service, Columbus.

Washington Nurserymen Form State Body

A meeting of several of the leading nurserymen of the state of Washington was held in Seattle, September 27, and a nurserymen's association was organized and is now being completed. Objects and aims are to bring the many nurserymen in the state in touch with one another in a helpful business and social way, and to promote the trade in a better and closer relationship among the craft. Great enthusiasm was shown by all who were present and everybody went home with the resolve to make the new proposition a success and help to have a full list of charter members. Preliminary steps were taken to formulate new by-laws or rules that will make the association one of the best in all the states, and co-operation along the lines of profit and pleasure will bring the results expected. No steps were taken to combine in any manner with the florists' association, but possibly that will be arranged later, after the ground has been plowed over once or twice.

Harmony and co-operation were manifest, and this promises later on to bring the success aimed at in the organization just being perfected. Another meeting is arranged for October 25 and it is expected that the list of names of those in the trade in the state will be completed enough to close the charter after the rules and laws submitted by the committee appointed to formulate them has made its report. A complete list of those in the nursery business in this state is expected.

NURSERY CROP REPORTS.

At the convention in Chicago, the executive committee was instructed to see if the federal government could be induced to collect for the nursery industry, annual reports of the stock in our nurseries. Pursuant to this direction given the executive committee, President Moon recently spent a day in Washington with authorities of the department of agriculture discussing this subject. The advantages of such annual reports, showing the quantity of each variety of stock in the country, its size, and the amount held in each state, are apparent to the nurserymen, for such reports will be invaluable guides to control our propagation, and to help in the distribution of the product, so that surpluses in one locality can be absorbed where shortages exist in another.

In Washington, the advantages of such a report were laid before the federal horticultural board, with the statement that from authentic information thus gathered, they could issue permits for importations based upon a knowledge of the amount of such stock already in the country, or on the absence of it. Then, too, the advantages that crop reports afford in pest control would eliminate the necessity for promiscuous quarantine.

Mr. Estabrook, chief of the bureau of crop reports, was interviewed. Dr. Marlatt was out of the city, but his assistant was seen. Mr. Kellerman and Mr. Sudworth, of the federal board, were interviewed, and favored such statistics. The result of Mr. Moon's day's work is that Secretary Houston now has before him a recommendation from the bureau of crop reports, endorsed informally by members of the federal horticultural board, that an appropriation of $50,000, be asked annually for the procurement of such crop reports. As soon as necessary, the officers of the nurserymen's association will go before Secretary Houston or the agricultural committee of the house, to further advocate the necessity for gathering these statistics and the procurement of the appropriation.

ROBT. CRAIG CO., Branch: Norwood, Pa., 4900 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

The following from this city and vicinity accompanied by friends made the trip to White Marsh, Md., October 2, the occasion being an inspection of the establishment of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co.: Ira Landis, J. Wade Galey, A. K. Rohrer, John Shreiner, Fred Ritchy, Charles M. Weaver and Albert M. Herr, accompanied by their wives; D. Irwin Herr, Chas. B. Herr, Harry K. Rohrer, Edward Rohrer, Amos Rohrer, Walter Denlinger, Emanuel Shreiner, and others, the party numbering 44 in all. The day opened with a promise of rain, which undoubtedly deterred several from making the trip, but the sun made its appearance in the afternoon and the ride through about 70 miles of delightfully picturesque country, was thoroughly enjoyed. Harry Rohrer acted as pilot and the journey was made in exactly three hours.

After being received by Mr. and Mrs. Vincent, the former took the party over the fields of dahlias and cannas, all of which are in magnificent shape and an attempt to name all of merit would be to issue a catalogue. If Mr. Vincent's enthusiasm could be instilled into the general public, this United States would be one solid plantation of dahlias, and the results go to show what can be done by a man thoroughly in love with his work. The trial grounds were an especial attraction, as here all new sorts are tested, and when found wanting, are discarded, and to pass the test, they must have real merit. Next to the trial grounds is a block of some 2,000 seedlings, a grand sight, and some very fine flowers, but none that will be introduced as this firm must see a decided improvement over any known existing variety before they will offer it to the trade, and it certainly is a standard that should be followed by all novelty producers. Cannas come second to the dahlias, but from the acreage grown, they are a business of their own, and with a few exceptions, they made a wonderful showing.

In the greenhouses, geraniums lead the way and are here by the million in remarkably fine shape; in fact, the bedding stock all looked well, with lantanas and coleus coming next in quantity to the geraniums, but other stock such as double petunias, salvias, etc., are all grown in big blocks. The trouble at this establishment is that things are grown in such high numbers, that a batch of 5,000 looks small in comparison to the house after house filled with geraniums. One range of houses was filled with ferns in variety, and in various stages of growth, so that the buyer could certainly find what he wants here. In the same block are the pompon chrysanthemums, not in as large a quantity as they were several years ago, but in good condition.

The annual dahlia show of the firm was opened on this day, and it in itself is worth a visit from any one within a radius of 500 miles, just to see the possibilities of the dahlia as a cut flower proposition, for they were all shown here from the wonderful picture and frame worked out with such skill that some of the lay people with us thought it was a picture.

Fred Ritchy, Harry K. Rohrer and Chas. B. Herr went to Baltimore with their machines, and tripped through Druid Hill park, stopping at the "Zoo" where Chas. B. Herr delivered a fine lecture on animal life. On the way back to Lancaster, they had a picnic lunch at historical Belair, and reached home about 8 p. m., the more prosaic ones getting back about 6 p. m. All united in pronouncing it a grand day and a wonderful trip, and a unanimous vote of sympathy was extended to the stay at homes.

Next Annual Meeting at Indianapolis, Ind.

A Record-Breaking Attendance.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association made no mistake in the selection of Buffalo, N. Y., as the convention city for 1919, as the entire local trade acted as a unit in their welcome, and had paved the way in showing the citizens what an important event this was to be, by featuring the meeting with over two full pages of advertising by the various stores, showing the manner in which the work is carried out. There was also a full page story, entitled, "Cupid, Flowers and Florists," which, in detail, in a very newsy vein, described how flowers could be sent anywhere in America, and, in fact, over the entire world, as fast as electricity could carry the message. This was illustrated with a telegraph pole, either side, connected at the top of the page with wires across, from which was falling a shower of roses. Winged Cupids were seen scattering the flowers. At the bottom, on one side, a young man was writing a telegram, while on the other, a young lady was receiving a box from a florist's messenger. The drawing, Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson's idea, was splendidly carried out, and the whole article remarkably well written.

Floral Messages to Many Cities.

The board of directors were on hand on Monday and held two sessions, at which the work of the meetings was worked out. One idea that met with favor by all the members, was the sending by telegraph of a box or basket of flowers to the mayor or executive officer in the various home cities and towns of the members, with a card inscribed, "Say it With Flowers." Greeting from the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in session in Buffalo. Many orders for these were sent out on the wire Tuesday night. It is thought that splendid publicity of the work of the association through notices in local papers can be obtained in this way, if the home guard follow it up.

Opening of the Convention.

The meeting of the association was held in the dining room of the Hotel Iroquois, which had been elaborately decorated with palms, ferns, southern smilax and dahlias. A large wreath of fruit and flowers, six feet in diameter, was a prominent feature. The officers of the association were seated on the platform. The convention was called to order by Wallace H. Eiss, and the Rev. Arthur Gordan offered the invocation. Mr. Eiss, on behalf of the local florists' club, welcomed the delegates, praised the work of the association and stated that a local publicity campaign, involving an expenditure of $8,000 to $10,000 was well under way. He then introduced Mayor George T. Buck, who extended a warm welcome, after referring to the comfort and pleasure that all people found in flowers, and the delight it must be to be constantly associated with them. He passed a fitting compliment when he said: "When I look in your faces, I can see that you are as live as the wires over which you send your messages." Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa., thanked the mayor for his cordial reception, saying the association had made no mistake in coming to Buffalo. President Gude then had the members introduce themselves by the Rotarian plan, each arising and announcing his name and city. The president then delivered his annual address which was full of excellent ideas for the advancement of the association. His suggestions regarding Sunday and early closing hours were vigorously applauded. At the close, he was given an ovation, all standing. Philip Breitmeyer pronounced the address the best he had ever listened to and thanked God for having given the world such men as President Gude, as there were few who have the patience to serve their fellowmen as he has done, and then asked those present to again stand in his honor. Philip Breitmeyer, Irwin Bertermann and W. J. Smyth were named a committee to report on the several recommendations in the president's address and also on a letter containing suggestions as to the association's work, presented by DeForrest Ludwig, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Secretary Pochelon then read his report, which with his livewire suggestions constantly interpolated, proved very interesting. He is a firm believer in publicity, and is especially proud of the membership of the association in this respect. He stated that this was the "tin wedding" of the organization, and produced a wonderful shower bouquet of tin utensils, also a large dishpan and flour sifter, which at his suggestion were passed around by Charles Grakelow, Irwin Bertermann and Herman P. Knoble to be filled with money for the publicity fund of the Society of American Florists. The first deposit was a check by Max Schling, New York, his contribution being $100, and in a few moments the committee reported a total of $705, which was turned over to Treasurer Rock to be presented to Secretary John Young of the S. A. F. Secretary Pochelon told how Philip Breitmeyer had saved the Florists' Telegraph Delivery when all others believed it to be a sinking ship. It has now grown to a membership numbering 1,206 with new applications being received daily. As a means of keeping the name of the organization always to the fore, he urged that all letters should carry before the signature, "Yours for More F. T. D. Co-operation." He said there should be a home of the F. T. D. in every flower store. He earnestly urged every member to study the questionnaire, as it was absolutely necessary to get statistics of the business. Of the 1,200 questionnaires sent out, 217 returned reported business amounting to $425,000, so that, figured proportionationately, if all had answered, the total volume would reach between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. Max Schling here presented a large arrangement of flowers in a tin frame to Secretary Pochelon, the "mother of the association," for her tin wedding. Miss Louise Gude, the youngest of the family, then recited a poem, "Is Anybody Happier?" She is a little artist and was warmly applauded. George Stumpp, Sr., was then introduced and given a seat on the platform. Secretary John Young, who had arrived from New York, was announced and said the New York Florists' Club had appropriated $500 for the publicity fund. He praised the wonderful enthusiasm of the members at the F. T. D. meeting. President Gude then appointed Herman P. Knoble, Henry Penn, J. C. Harper, Miss Amelia Gude and Miss Gammage a committee on the F. T. D. window decorations, and as elsewhere mentioned it was directed that flowers in the name of the association be sent to mayors of the various cities represented by membership. The telegrams were sent out by S. A. Anderson, each florist filling the order to do so at his own expense. Flowers were also sent to Mrs. J. A. Valentine in memory of her late husband, and also to the Prince of Wales, the king and queen of Belgium and Cardinal Mercier. The session adjourned at 1 p. m. to have a photograph taken and enjoy a splendid luncheon as the guests of the Buffalo Florists' Club.

Afternoon Session Full of Interest.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock, President Gude reading a telegram from the Redondo Floral Co., Los Angeles, Calif., in which Director A. F. Borden extended greetings. President Gude also called the attention of those present to a magnificent array of floral pieces at the opening of the new La Fayette bank, a short distance from the meeting, which was well worth a visit. The place for the 1920 meeting brought invitations from eight cities, Chicago receiving warm support, but Indianapolis, Ind., was finally chosen, for which Irwin Bertermann warmly thanked the members.

Nomination of Officers.

Philip Breitmeyer was the unanimous choice for president, when nominations for officers were called for, while Irwin Bertermann, who stated he greatly appreciated the honor, vigorously declined the office of vice-president. He was, however, the only nominee. Directors, three to be elected, were named as follows: W. J. Smyth, J. W. Grandy, Jr., Karl P. Baum, Max Schling, G. E. M. Stumpp, Jr., W. W. Gammage, George Schultz, Fred C. Weber, Jr., O. J. Olson and Vincent Gorly.

Following the nominations, Vincent Gorly presented a list of cut flowers suitable for each month in the year, with expressions, for which he desired the approval of the association as a standard list for the language of flowers. After discussion, this was referred to the board of directors. The president then read the prizes for the F. T. D. windows as follows: A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, electric fountain, $225; Paul R. Klingsporn, Chicago, $100; Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa., $100. A vote of thanks was given the donors for their helpful co-operation. Philip Breitmeyer then brought up the subject of compensation for the hard working and wonderfully competent secretary, and also the treasurer, who had never been given a dollar for their great work in the association. Mr. Pochelon's interest had been of incalculable value, he said, and he should never be allowed to get away. He suggested a compensation of at least $2,000 for the secretary, and $500 to the treasurer. A motion to direct the board of directors to pay these amounts was passed unanimously. The board of directors are also to have at least one meeting in Detroit at the home office with transportation expenses paid. A letter was received from F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O., extending greetings and regrets that he could not be present. A committee of the direc-

The Evening Session.

The evening session consisted of a movie exhibition of events in Cleveland which had been exhibited there the year before. It was much enjoyed. Little Miss Gude rendered a song poem about the disadvantages of being the youngest child, which made a great hit. Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson then gave a very interesting talk on publicity, showing the great progress made in Cleveland the past year, in a city beautiful movement, in which a great number of banks, department stores and other large business concerns had been induced to decorate their buildings with greens and flowers in boxes. Florists should study this subject, she said, as there were great possibilities when such propaganda was carried out by a well planned programme. Publicity was the yeast that, when put in properly, made a bread that would rise and rise until it made a perfect loaf on which all would thrive wonderfully.

Wednesday Morning's Proceedings.

At the Wednesday morning session, the committee on president's address highly commended its many good suggestions. The committee on window displays reported most favorably on the good features at all of the 11 stores in competition, and awarded the first prize to S. A. Anderson, W. J. Palmer & Son's Delaware avenue establishment being second, and third honors going to the William Scott Co.

Election of Officers.

In the election of officers, Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., was chosen president and Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind., vice-president. Directors were elected as follows: W. J. Smyth, Chicago; Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., and W. W. Gammage, London, Ont.

Henry Penn, Boston, Mass., delivered an inspiring address on "Publicity", and urged the purchase of the billboard signs featuring the slogan, "Say it With Flowers", which were on display. Orders were at once placed for 50 of these.

President J. F. Ammann, of the Society of American Florists, was introduced and made a most inspiring talk, for which he was given a hearty ovation. Secretary Young also spoke and urged applications for life membership in the S. A. F. before January 1. George Asmus, of Chicago, spoke on the new billboard advertising and the advantage of co-operating with employes.

President Gude's Address.

One year ago, when we met in the city of Cleveland, O., we gathered under very different conditions from those existing today. Then, we met, overshadowed with gloom on account of the world war. Today, we meet full of optimism, with prosperity written on our banner, and our good ship sails along, so "get into the right channel, concentrate and properly direct your efforts, and never put off until tomorrow what can be done today."

CANADIAN AND EUROPEAN CONNECTIONS.

During the past year, the interest shown by our Canadian brothers far exceeds all previous records by this splendid body of men, composing the Canadian florists. May their work continue, and our organization soon be as strong proportionately in Canada as it is in the United States.

During the past year, several good European houses have been added to our F. T. D. A., and we hope ere long to be represented in every civilized country on the globe, so that it may be as easy to deliver orders in Africa, Hawaii, Philippine Islands or Japan, as it is to deliver them in the United States and Canada.

LEAD, NOT FOLLOW.

The order of mind possessed by the man who steps out from the crowd and dares, is the order of mind that will recognize opportunities and grasp them. The man who dares, is the man who does. The man who will take no risks, has little to risk, usually. Like a child in the primary department, he is under the control of stronger minds, and he remains an underling until he wakes up to his conscious manhood and asserts his right of initiative. Faith in one's own ability, and the value of one's own ideas, is the first requirement for notable achievement. Most men have enough originality to work out a successful career, but they do not believe in themselves. They will discard an idea that comes into their own minds, but will hail it with belief and interest if read in the paper, or suggested by another. Like the case of the family physician; a mother may know perfectly what to do for her sick child, but she does not apply this knowledge with assurance until the doctor calls and tells her to do so.

MEMBERSHIP.

Our membership has more than doubled since our last meeting, and resignations have been few. Our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," has come to the front wonderfully in the last 12 months and ere another year goes by, we hope all F. T. D. members, and other florists, will have all their automobiles, boxes, tags, stationery, advertisements, and in fact everything, labled with the slogan, "Say It With Flowers."

COMPETITIVE ORGANIZATIONS.

The highest compliment that can be paid to any individual or organization, is the fact that another organization, or person, imitates them; so, rather than feel alarmed at other organizations imitating us, I see in it an advantage, because in order to do any business, they will have to advertise, and by talking flowers, they will help us. However, I see no need of any other organization composed of retail florists, because the F. T. D. A., with thousands of members, can cover the field, and give such service as it has in the past years, service that was never dreamed of years ago. With the Society of American Florists, in which nearly all of our members hold membership, and with a thorough publicity campaign, as is now organized and conducted, we need have no fear for the future.

Let us dwell for a moment on the sending and receiving of orders. That we may have the full confidence of the public, so that when called upon to produce the original order, we must be ready and willing to produce the same. It is vitally necessary that all orders should be accurately written, and accurately relayed, so that the party receiving the order, can correctly book it and fill the order for the full amount, giving, if possible, better attention in the way of service, than if the customer came into the store and ordered the flowers himself.

BILLS.

In the matter of bills, there is much to be desired, such as forwarding an invoice promptly upon delivery of the order, and if for any reason the order could not be delivered, notifying the sender at once, giving the particulars. Bills should be mailed the first of each month, and promptly followed up if not paid.

The clearing house under the leadership of our very efficient secretary has done wonderful work in having members and others pay up more promptly, and also collecting bills that have not been paid. This office has done phenomenal work in the short time it has existed.

AT THE FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY ASSOCIATION MEETING, BUFFALO, N. Y., OCTOBER 14.

OUR OFFICERS.

Too much praise can not be given to our worthy secretary, Albert Pochelon, who has worked morning, noon and night to push the F. T. D. A. He has been such an engineer in the workroom of our organization that we cannot help but esteem him highly. All honor and praise to our worthy secretary! Also, much credit is due our vice-president, Philip Breitmeyer, for so ably officiating during my recent illness. He was ever up and doing, alert to attend to all matters which would help boost the association. Also, our honored treasurer, William Rock, who is ever ready with good advice, prompt and correct in his records, as his report will show this morning. Also, our past president, Irwin Bertermann, to whom we owe a great deal for putting the association on its feet, and who is ready and willing to give good, friendly and substantial advice.

To George Asmus, our former vice-president, and chairman of the national flower show committee, who has labored unselfishly for the florist trade in general, and the F. T. D. A. in particular, and to the members of the board of directors, who have been ever ready and willing to do their duty, to all of these I extend my cordial thanks and best wishes.

ORDERS.

Small orders should be discouraged, particularly on the rush days. However, if a party is willing to pay the price, there should be no order too small to relay and give the accommodation which the order deserves. The question of whether it pays or not should not enter into these transactions, for who will say that it is not a good advertisement, and more often the filling of a small order carefully, is worth many times the price of the order in advertising.

PUBLICITY FUND.

Everybody should contribute. It matters not how much one gives, but how many are giving. Just think! Twenty thousand florists at $5 each would be $100,000, and surely we should average $5 per florist. Our publicity with our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," has done wonders, and I cannot help but feel that the florist business is in its infancy and will go forward by leaps and bounds; in fact, faster than some of us will be able to keep up. In these days of the high cost of living and the high cost of flowers, it behooves us all to make the most of the least; to give our customers perfect satisfaction in every way, so that when the time comes when the great majority of people will want flowers in their homes, we will know how to supply them.

In every instance, we should remember that the government treated us with great consideration during the coal shortage, and men engaged in their respective callings should bear this in mind and remember that we were shown a certain degree of favortism. At this time, when the government is making investigations on all sides to inquire into the high cost of living, and the high cost of almost every article of merchandise, it does seem to me that the growers, as well as the dealers and commission men, should hold themselves down to a reasonable margin of profit, so that if they, for any reason, are investigated, they can show by their records, that they are dealing with the public and their fellowmen on an absolutely square basis.

Associations are all too willing and ready in times such as these to "get together," and set a minimum price and value, and I am of the opinion that it is a bad thing to do, and I would certainly counsel the advisability of letting every grower, every wholesaler, every dealer determine for himself and according to his own records what constitutes a fair and reasonable profit, and at what price he shall sell to the public.

The association of members in any given trade should be strongly counselled, for there is no question in my mind that every association can exert a powerful influence for good, but it must always be borne in mind that the power of each such association should not be abused, but always exercised for the general welfare of business.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WEEK.

I believe that no greater boost to the florist business can be inaugurated than by having one week set aside to "Say It With Flowers" in every city in the United States and Canada. The first week in November seems to be the best time to "Say It With Flowers." This should be done by liberal advertising, and having our stores make a special effort to be decorated in holiday dress; also, advocating the liberal use of flowers, and it might be well for us to recommend to the public that everybody wear a flower in memory of the heroes who lost their lives during the world war. Another idea that might well be worked out is to send flowers to all the mothers, wherever possible, of the heroes who lost their lives during the recent war.

In the larger cities and towns, floats similar to the one used in Washington to celebrate the homecoming of General Pershing and the First Division, in scattering flowers, may be used to distribute flowers to hospitals. The floats may first pass through the principal streets of the city, then drive to the hospitals, where many of the convalescents can enjoy them, before distributing the flowers. Then have a bunch of fresh flowers to hand to everyone of the sick or disabled. In cities where there are no hospitals, floats may well be used to carry flowers to the sick.

Money for advertising, judiciously spent and plenty of flowers to give away in a proper manner, would tend to make the "Say It With Flowers" week an annual event, looked forward to by all, as one of the most pleasing of the whole year. I hope some action will be taken at this meeting to give approval to these suggestions.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

The farmer does not fail to sow his seed every spring because there have been crop failures in the past. Advertising, like seed, has a reproductive power, and the man who neglects to plant his seed in rich soil, or his savings in good investments, simply robs himself of an opportunity to reap a crop or win a fortune. Do not be afraid to take the risk. People in all parts of the world have made fortunes through judicious advertisements. They won, simply because they had the nerve to risk.

SALES.

We cannot do too much in educating our salespeople in taking orders when a person has only a few dollars to spend; in making them feel that they are welcome, and that the order will receive the same care as if the purchase had been a large one. Again, frequently the mistake is made in selling an inexpensive article, when a more expensive one would do better. This is particularly true in taking orders for out of town. Many times, roses may be $2 or $3 a dozen, when in the city in which they are to be delivered, they will be $6 or $7, or vice versa. In such a case, particularly during the holidays, it is always well not to specify the color of the flowers, not even the kind, if possible, leaving it entirely to the florist to send the best for the money. Along this line, there is a great deal of work for all of us, and much can be accomplished towards making large orders out of small ones, and orders that would be hard to fill, easy to put up and deliver satisfactorily. Napoleon said: "There is no genius like the genius of labor; no reward like that which comes to energy, system and perseverance." We should become inbued with the right principles of selling. Principles are rules of action that shape and control our conduct, and if any of us are following methods we would not care to bring into the limelight, let us banish them now. Let us conduct our affairs with a rigid adherence to those principles which our reason commends as fixed and sound.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

Some have already closed their stores all day Sunday; in fact, I know of several florists who have never opened their stores on Sunday, or sold flowers on Sunday, and in some instances, have made enough to retire and live comfortably for the rest of their lives. If such is true, why must the average florist feel that it is necessary to sell flowers seven days a week? Surely, the time is not far distant when all first-class florist shops will remain closed all day Sunday.

SHORTER HOURS.

In these modern times, when all other businesses and trades are working shorter hours, the retail florist can no longer expect to hold his help and work them 12 and 15 hours a day, when there is little need for any retail store to keep open after six o'clock in the evening. In several large cities, stores have already closed for a number of years at six o'clock during the week days, and a half day on Sunday. There are instances where high class stores close their doors at one o'clock on Saturday, and do not open until Monday morning. Those alluded to are among the most successful in the business in the United States and Canada.

MAKE AN HONEST EFFORT.

Make an honest effort to assist in improving conditions relating to our trade. Try each day to place your own business on a higher level, and while reaching out, remember that the Creator made this old world large enough for all of us. Never mind about what the other fellow is doing! Be you the one to set the example always, and point out the way to clean methods. To accomplish this, you must have faith in yourself, faith in your fellowmen and the people, or you shall be easily discouraged by the slightest reverses.

Do not, I beg of you, when you go home from this meeting, separate yourself from the spirit of good intention that may be influencing you now. The story of human deficiency is older than that of the great flood. All of us know how often we approve the right, and then pursue the wrong. Be fair and honorable in your dealings.

Cultivate a closer acquaintance with your competitor; touch elbows with him as frequently as you can, that by virtue of friendly contact, each may derive a higher personal regard for the other, and the heart blossom into more comprehensive understanding of what is meant by the "Brotherhood of Man," and as we move onward each day toward the "eternal unknown," may all of us become more and more imbued with the spirit, beauty and force of the greatest, grandest and most imperishable of all teachings, as virile today as nearly 20 centuries ago, when the Master spoke and said:

"Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them."

Treasurer Rock's Report.

Treasurer Wm. L. Rock presented his report, duly certified, showing balances to the credit of the annual dues fund was $5,337.14, and to the guaranty fund, $14,607.94, September 30, 1919. The total receipts for the year were $24,617.58 and disbursements, $13,959.82. The report in detail shows the financial condition of the association to be excellent.

F. T. D. Wirelets.

"The flower business went along in a manner for many years without much attention from the public, but the recent publicity movements have made a different atmosphere and we are now distinctly on the map and on a much higher plane than ever before. —President W. F. Gude.

Regarding the discount, which is a bone of contention with some, Irwin Bertermann says: "It is very simple. If I receive an order for a $20 wreath from a member, his discount to me is $4. I send him a similar order, and allow him the same, so that we are even, each having received the same full price for our work."

Max Schling stated that at a large meeting, at which there were elaborate floral decorations, a prominent speaker stated to the audience in praise of this work, that he always felt at home in the presence of beautiful flowers. They lent such a refining influence.

Secretary Pochelon believes that education, pure and simple, in bringing or awakening the flower trade to their duty in supporting publicity, was their only salvation. The man who only contributes $5 a year, not more than a cigar a week, values his business just that much, and will never get ahead.

It was developed that the best way to handle agent orders, which had to be relayed, was to split the commission, each taking half.

C. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., makes good use of the slogan, "Say it With Flowers," stamping it on the back of all the checks he gives and receives.

A clever flower-selling device is used on the pavement in front of Palmer's Delaware avenue store during the summer and early fall. This consists of a cash fare box, such as is used on street cars, with a larger box below for the coins to drop into. Around this is a wire frame work with spiral holders, in which are placed test tubes filled with water. Each tube holds a rose or other flower. A small placard which reads "Help Yourself—10 Cents Each," is the silent salesman. This turns in an average of $5 per day. A practical and profitable idea.

Max Schling reports an International Flower Transmitters' Association, with membership in a number of the countries from Sweden to Italy. It is very much older than the F. T. D., but not nearly so efficient, the members distrusting each other and preferring to rely on transportation, even for quite long distances.

The business for the past year, as indicated by the returns of the questionnaire sent out by Secretary Pochelon, ranged from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

Herman Knoble, who has gained the distinction of being known as the "three to one man," as the result of his splendid paper, in which he advocated this as the selling price above cost, declares it has been adopted by many florists, and is putting the business on a higher plane.

Selling Flowers by Telegraph.

Address by F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O., before the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21.

In any sales campaign, there are essential points that must be answered. First. Have you a powerful product to market? Second. Can you convince the public of its necessity? Third. Is it worth its price? If you answer these questions in a satisfactory manner, then your road is fairly level. Let us investigate and see.

Power is a wonderful thing, whether it be the power of great machinery, of individual effort, or money. The most potential power lies back of good organization, the organization of principles for the advancement and good of society. Our Florists' Telegraph Delivery represents one of the best examples of an organization for the good of all mankind because it is a direct individual appeal to the higher ideals of all organized society. It appeals to the true sentiment of humans, the love of home and dear ones, the unselfish principle of "doing unto others." The lofty ideal of repaying obligations by personal thought, in the selection of flowers.

Ours is the only product in commerce that conveys expression of joy, sorrow, love, hope, happiness and reflects the life giving sunshine of the great outdoors. The most delicate expression of sentiment, of love and respect, condolence, cheer, sympathy, congratulation, faith and personal thought, it is possible to transmit almost instantly to any part of the civilized world through the medium of our F. T. D. and flowers. And this is our organization and our merchandise.

The multi-millionaire, the pauper, royalty in its palace, the shop girl in the factory, all read the same message of love and hope in a flower. The extreme, cold, calculating scientist, or the poor laborer, see in flowers a more expressive message than is possible by written word or through any other medium, and they are waiting for the message that no distance is so great, but that expression of their feelings can be conveyed through the subtle eloquence of flowers, through the powerful agency of our F. T. D.

What are you doing to tell the public of the service you can render? What are you doing to advance the work and scope of your own organization, the F. T. D.? What are you doing to help the small florist in the little town take care of your orders in a manner that your customer expects and you of the big little towns, are you supporting this movement the way you should, and florists of the big cities, what are you doing to take care of the little fellows' orders, when they send them in for a dollar, or a dollar and a half?

Do not rave and swear and stamp around because you receive an order for a dozen roses at $1.50, when your cheapest are $3.00. Do not take too seriously the fact that your delivery costs nearly 50 cents—and above all, do not leave the order unfilled. Remember, there are florists in your town, somewhere on the outskirts, who will gladly fill the order at the price, or you may substitute, but notify the recipient, as well as the correspondent, that you have done so. And then get busy and educate the other fellow. You owe it to him.

Think back, and there are very few but who will remember the day a dollar looked big, and profitable. That these orders come to us—that they are filled at a loss, are facts, but it is our duty to lift up the smaller men, not crowd them down and discourage them with a return of their unfilled orders, because they are not up to our standard. This thing, with your help, will right itself in time, but be careful how you try to right it, or you may find you have thrown a monkey wrench into the wheels of your own progress.

Too many of us are inclined to want to occupy the center of the spotlight. We are very much like the fellow who shows his bank book to prove he is a gentleman.

We meet many interesting types in the flower business. I have a person in mind, who told me a short while back, that he "would not advertise the F. T. D. because his competitor was so doing." Another said, he "did not like some of the association officers." Another "allowed he had gotten along pretty well without membership, so guessed he would not join the society." Another said he "never expected to receive any orders, so what was the use of bothering his head trying to send any." And still another, the worst of all, said, "We are big enough and independent enough not to join." Oh Mister Ostrich, with your head in the sand, besides such as these, your sagacity is like unto a Solomon.

F. C. W. Brown Cleveland, O.

My topic should be "Selling Flowers," not "Selling Flowers by Telegraph," if we are to reach any of the above. The biggest, single customer for flowers today in the whole world is the F. T. D. It out-buys any other customer many thousand times; it makes of the smallest florist in the littlest hamlet a merchant of international repute; it permits him to say to his customers, "See that list of over a thousand reputable business houses, scattered throughout the United States, Canada and many foreign countries—all agents of mine—all under guarantee to me. If they send me an order, I can collect the bill. If I send them an order, they know they will be paid. I am guaranteed against their not filling my order properly, just the same as they are guaranteed against me."

That sounds like good powerful talk, does it not? The beauty of it is, that it is absolute truth. My answer to the man who would not advertise the F. T. D. because his competitor did, had better be left unsaid. Time alone will right him. To the man who criticises the officers of the society, I would ask what he has done or is doing to better the conditions he thinks exist. Mr. Critic, your vote counts one, just the same as all others. I, as a member, have not had any constructive effort offered to me in the form of direct suggestion for the change of any conditions that do exist. It seems to me that those conditions are not so bad after all, when you take into consideration the advances we have made during the very short period of our existence. I hold no brief for our officers; I hold no brief for their methods of procedure, but I do realize the wonderful things that have been done by those gentlemen. I did know of a mistake or two, but they have been crowded out of my memory by the myriad of successes.

When I calmly consider the situation, and try to figure where we would be today had our pilots not taken hold of the ship, but left it to the tender mercies of those who now freely (but always below decks) criticise their actions, it seems to me that the millions spent for flowers through the F. T. D. agency would still be going into the pockets of other merchants, or remain out of circulation.

In our business, we frequently find well meaning employes who are prone to point out the mistakes of others. On these occasions, our feelings are always one of elation. We say to ourselves of the subject, "Here is a man worth watching, one who displays initiative, a man worth while, one who dares. We forget the man who made the complaint in the pleasure of the knowledge of our having the other who at least tries. If you are not satisfied, come out in the open, and if your complaint is just you will have the backing of your fellow members, but in Heaven's name do not steal into our chicken coop, while our back is turned and try to kill the goose that is laying our golden eggs. Please remember he belongs to each one of us, just in the same proportion he belongs to you, and there are none of us entitled to more than our share. If you can prove that he has not the proper kind of a coop, we are all, every man Jack, willing to help build a new one, providing you can convince us you know of a better kind.

As to the man who says he has gotten along pretty well without joining. In our memory, we know business men who thought they could get along without a telephone or advertising. They have passed unnoticed from the business world. The F. T. D. brings our retail store nearly as much business as the telephone. These two statements should be sufficient answer to that man.

To the man who never expects to receive any F. T. D. orders, therefore does not go after any himself, please ponder the answers in the previous statement.

To the florist who is big enough and independent enough not to join, are you fair? Are you fair to your fellow craftsman? Are you fair to your customers? Remember you are part and parcel of a great democracy for the selling of flowers, and not alone. If you do not care to participate in our success, do not try to hamper us. Remember that our customers are visiting your cities, and towns, and as we are teaching them the advantage of conveying their wishes to other cities by flowers, we want, and they, when going into your establishment, demand the right to use the medium we are building so fast. If you will not give our customers that privilege, they will go elsewhere. But pause a moment in your assurance of security. How about your customers when they come to us? And they will come. Can you afford to have the great majority of keen, bright, business men in the same line, in your home town, as well as abroad, offer advantages to your customers that you, because of some conceit or perverse idea of your own, refuse them. If you persist in your obstinate stand, you may find it too late when you make your decision to change. The damage to your reputation may be beyond repair. This is not a threat, but an honest appeal for your consideration. Be fair to the rest of us. We hear rumors of dissention, separation, and of new societies, always in organizations such as our F. T. D.: rumors that usually emanate from those who are not within the fold, or from members, who from grievances, fancied or real, just bubble over with periodical effervescence of their ego. Flattering, indeed, are such breaks, for they prove the value of our association, and truly cement the ties already holding us. They also increase publicity of the thing we wish to advertise. Make a memo of these Mr. Secretary, as they come along, and be sure and place them on the list with the fellow who is going to resign unless his individual views are always accepted—and the man who freely admits he would make a better executive than the one in office.

We want to know these birds. They are not blue birds of happiness and content, but black birds of uncertainty, always hunting for the well-built nest of their more industrious cousins, in which to lay their eggs of discontent, but the advantage is ours for we recognize them. We knew them in their childhood, when their favorite lullaby was, "I don't want to play in your yard." To those contemplating such breaks, I think the story of the farmer, his little red bull, and the railroad train, is very fitting. In this instance, the railroad train is our F. T. D. association. The farmer, our dissenting florist. The little red bull, his vehicle of attack. To continue the story, the railroad train had to pass through the farmer's land. The farmer passively fought its progress, but being well paid for the slice of land needed, tolerated its presence, but he was not a progressive farmer; he could not see how the value of his land had been increased, so he vowed a vow, never to ride on "one of them blamed contraptions." It would not have been so bad had he let it go at that, but he then set to work to try and stop the train. Afraid of it himself, he trained his little red bull to stamp and bellow whenever the train passed through, until one day when he thought the time was ripe, the farmer removed part of the fence and let his little bull on the track. The bull, with much noise, stamping and lowered head waited to prove that he was the match for any such thing as a railroad train. Had he not challenged the thing again and again without reply? He felt he was better, and intended to prove it, but, alas, the railroad train with a warning whistle passed on without a pause. Poor little bull. The farmer had expected, even if he did loose his bull, he might have wrecked the train, but he did not take into consideration the modern cow-catcher, (our collective ownership) nor the efficient conductor, (our president) nor the steady handed engineer, (our secretary) nor the train crew, (our worthy directors.)

So buy your ticket (a membership) and climb aboard our train of success, bound for the valley of profits and bigger business, and do not be classed with the man who says, "the old hoss and gig, has the auto skun a mile."

Selling flowers by telegraph is a matter of individual effort in its final analysis. The magnitude of the business today is largely the result of individual effort. The means to attain the end are as diversified as the mind can imagine. For me to try and tell you how would make me look ridiculous. We are prone to think that occasionally we meet some bright fellow who is almost as intelligent as ourselves. I have no desire for that distinction.

The work of our publicity campaign is producing wonderful results. The slogan, "Say it With Flowers," is the greatest and most effective phrase ever assembled for business. More power to the campaign. May we not stop, nor even hesitate, until it has been doubled and quadrupled, but all those efforts will loose their power without the backing of you individuals. Our societies are doing their share. You do yours.

Our associates are devoting their time and effort to better your business. What are you doing? The vehicle to bigger business is waiting at your door. Climb aboard. The road to success is paved, not with uncertain good intentions, but smoothed and rolled to a level by your publicity managers. Many are riding its course successfully and happy, but each machine requires its own pilot. To the thousand who are already members of our great association I would say:

Would you sell flowers by telegraph? Then sell your organization to the florists, and when you double your membership, double it again, and yet again. We, the members of the F. T. D., own and control the organization. It is not the property of an individual, nor a small group of individuals. It increases its owners by one; each new member added to the roll of progressive florists already on the lists. It increases its value to the old members by each new member elected. Get busy.

TRENTON, N. J.—"Millionaire," exhibited by George Klein of this city, won the prize for the largest and best dahlia at the state fair.

CAMERON, MO.—Russell E. Cater has purchased the range conducted by Ralph W. Ward, but will not take possession until next spring, making a thorough study of the business in the meantime.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Art Floral Co. has been opened by J. H. McGorrisk and Le Verne Barucht, both recently returned from service with the United States army in France.

WAKEFIELD, KAN.—Percy R. Walter reports that only about 250 lights of glass were left unbroken in his four houses following the worst storm that visited that vicinity for many years. Carnations and pot plants suffered severe damage, some being an entire loss. The carnations, just coming into crop, were cut to pieces. Four thousand celery plants were destroyed and beans, tomatoes, radishes and lettuce are a total loss.

"Say it With Flowers" Signs.

The following is being circulated among growers by the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago:

Every florist is interested in extending the demand for flowers, which results in bigger profits to all in the trade. With this in mind, the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago have studied various methods to be employed to this end, and have conceived the plan that every florist erect a signboard on his premises, bearing the national "Say It With Flowers" slogan. Since many greenhouse establishments are located on prominent highways, or near a railroad, there would be no site rental to pay, and therefore the cost would be light.

When you consider the amount of travel by rail, and the endless number of automobiles traveling the highways, you will agree that this method is the least expensive, and most effective way of impressing on the general public to "Say It With Flowers." Just stop to think what results could be obtained, if every florist will assist in this undertaking, and the public should meet, and have these signs of uniform size and character greet them everywhere!—Certainly it would be a great stimulant to business.

Practically every member of the trade has a suitable location to erect a signboard in a prominent place on either a main highway, railroad, or other conspicuous place. Or, if he really has no suitable location for such a sign, he can in all probability, obtain permission from his friend or neighbor to erect one on his premises.

The plan of the Commercial Flower Growers has been brought to the attention of the Society of American Florists publicity committee, and has been favorably received. The national committee at once set to work to see what could be done along this line, and after a thorough study of the subject, decided that uniform signs, 20 feet long and seven feet high, bearing only the "Say It With Flowers" slogan, and if desired, the name of the owner, should be used for best results.

After some very arduous work, the committee was successful in obtaining from a well-known billboard concern, the very low price, on a quantity basis, of $50 each, for high-class metal covered signs, 20 feet long, and seven feet high, which will last for many years. These signs are sectional, and come fully painted and ready to erect. Complete directions for erecting accompany every sign.

The cost, spread over a number of years, as it should be, is very small. It should also be borne in mind that you own the sign, and not lease it, as is frequently done in billboard advertising. In places where a few small establishments are grouped together, and each individual is unable to purchase a sign separately, these can be bought collectively, and placed in the most prominent location in the neighborhood.

A large number of signs have already been ordered, and several establishments, who appreciate their value, have placed orders for as many as four signs, others two, and so on. Remember we want these signs everywhere, so you are urgently requested to help the good work along, and send your order at once to the secretary of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, Otto H. Amling, Maywood, Illinois.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The fall season can now be said to be well under way, and if the store is prepared, there should be considerable profitable business in sight from this time on. Many shopkeepers are inclined to look too much to the future. The time to get busy is "right now." The social season, with its weddings, coming-out teas, and receptions is in full swing, and if all those who cater to this class of trade, have not about all they can do, they want to find out why, and that, immediately. The new store that opens up, gets a lot of trade. They have no customers on their books to help out; with them it is a case of hustle. They make their shop as inviting as possible, are themselves enthusiastic, and let no opportunity to catch an order, escape them. All this is possible with the old concern, but they get into a kind of rut. They have their trade—it comes to them anyhow. They forget how they worked for it at first. This enthusiasm should never be allowed to wane, but should grow with the business. The man who complains of dull business at this time, will find the fault lies within himself, and he should take immediate steps to awaken a new interest, and not rest satisfied until the machine has all cylinders working, and is going again at full speed.

The greatest helps to business are the attractive features that it is possible to have displayed all the time. Small blue and white vase baskets filled with short stemmed pink roses and a little blue fall aster, are a combination that is always pleasing. A little knot of ribbon on the handle, gives a good finish. The shorter stemmed small and pompon dahlias, with a few autumn leaves, also make very nice baskets, which should sell well at this time.

Chrysanthemums are now becoming plentiful, and should be displayed in special high-handled vase baskets, where they will keep as well as in the fibre jars, and certainly look much more inviting. A few oak leaf branches will add to their attractiveness.

Considerable attention should be given to the flowers for the debutantes. Simplicity is the order of the day, but there is considerable art in the arrangement of only a dozen chrysanthemums. They can be huddled together in a tight bunch, or in a flat trowel shaped spray that is anything but artistic. Where the most is made of them, the stiff stems are used as the foundation, while the more slender are placed in front. They should be relieved with small flowers of another color, either chrysanthemums, a bunch of violets, Sweetheart roses, fall asters, a bunch of bouvardia, etc., taking care to use colors that will not conflict, either with the flowers or ribbon. Vase baskets, hampers, hats and other receptacles are all useful, and when nicely filled, exercising due care in the color combinations and the widths and ribbon shades, they will be found very satisfactory. Plant baskets are also suitable for such gifts. They have the advantage in their lasting qualities, as they can be made up and remain in good condition for a week or more. Added cut flowers, their stems in a vase of water concealed in the plants, can be used to feature or give a finish at the ribbon that is well worth while.

A few good pieces of fancy pottery, jars that will hold from six to ten-inch pots, some with pedestals to match, add much to the decorative features of the store, when filled with choice plants. Sales are frequently made of the entire combination. While the well grown plant is beautiful in itself, the decorative touch given by a cover on the pot, even if only of white paper, tied with a tape the color of the flower, gives a finish that often results in a sale. Place a dozen or so of such decorated stock together, and they at once are more noticeable and the sales quickened.

Bunches of the fall cosmos, wrapped partially in waxed paper, placed a number in a large bowl together, will be just the thing for those who want only a few flowers for the table.

Corsage bunches are called for so continuously that samples should be kept made up and a few displayed in the case or window at all times. Many sales are made by having the flowers ready for immediate use, or orders are received, as they suggest to those who see them an occasion where they will be just the thing required.

Special sales are in order whenever a quantity of something good can be bought sufficiently below the market to warrant such a drive. Many stores have found these sales great helps in adding to their list of customers. Every new name secured, is an asset worth while. Circulars should be sent out at least once a month during the busy season of the year, the store aiming to have an attractive feature that is likely to interest most of its customers.

Co-operative Local Publicity.

The two vital departments of the cut flower industry are production and distribution. Under favorable conditions, the supply is nearly always greater than the demand, and those in charge of production then claim that the distributors are at fault, in that they lack energy; that it is up to them, by modern business methods to make or create such a demand as will use up the stock as fast as they send it in. It was this situation that brought about the national publicity campaign, in which the whole trade all over the country is so interested, and of which so much is expected.

This has undoubtedly quickened and called the attention of the craft in various communities to the advantage of supporting this advertising by local campaigns. If an article has merit, there is no question but that its sale can be increased by publicity. There is no product fashioned by the most skillful workers that equals flowers, so that every avenue by which they can be called to the attention of buyers is almost sure to help their distribution. At times of over production, flowers are handled in large quantities in the streets of the shopping districts of all our large cities, and sold to people who, before they saw them, had no idea of making such purchases. Without this method of bringing them to the attention of the public, they would have gone to waste.

Newspapers are the greatest mediums for instantaneous reaching of the masses of the people. Nearly every householder takes a daily morning or evening paper, the advertising columns of which, in fact, whole pages, are used daily by large enterprises, such as department stores or manufacturers of specialties. There is no question but large newspaper space, made possible through co-operation of the entire florist craft of a city, would popularize and increase the use of and sale of flowers in that community. The national slogan, "Say it With Flowers," has been productive of wonderful results, and its use can be made much more effective by connecting it up with the various uses to which flowers may be put. The accompanying illustration of a single sheet poster, bears the inscription, "Is This Her Birthday?" "Say it With Flowers." Here is a question that is likely to bring business to many every day in the year. Other inscriptions or headings to which the slogan is a good answer are: "For the Convalescent," "To Extend Congratulations," "When the Stork Calls," "The Message of Sympathy," "The Wedding Anniversary," "To Brighten the Home," "Are You in 'Dutch' With Your Wife?" "If Words Fail You," etc.

Florists who have tried local co-operative advertising through the newspapers for special flower days, particularly Mothers' day, are much pleased with results. In Cleveland, O., Detroit, Mich., and Milwaukee, Wis., the trade is spending large sums annually and receiving splendid results. In Milwaukee, the appropriation last year was $4,000, from which results were so satisfactory that the florists' advertising club, at its annual meeting, with an attendance of 79, all but two of whom agreed to increase the rate of percentage on sales (by which simple means all money is collected) 100 per cent, taxing the growers one per cent on their returns and the retailers two per cent on all their purchases of cut flowers.

This is a wonderful force that can be put in motion in every community. All that is necessary is leadership, some one to "start the ball rolling." The Florists' Club, of Washington, D. C., expects to get great results from their inauguration of a "Say it With Flowers" week in early November. This was taken up by the Florists' Club, of Philadelphia, Pa., who spent $1,500 for a similar movement the week of October 13-18. Five hundred dollars was used to put the slogan and the words, "Ask Your Florist" on prominent bill boards for that week. Flowers were sent to all churches the Sunday previous with an appropriate letter. Early in the week, flowers were donated to all hospitals. Handsome baskets of flowers, with a pennant, on which was printed the slogan, were placed in the leading shop windows on Chestnut street. All florists' cars carried large pennants printed with the slogan. A local advertising campaign, with the necessary funds to carry it on, which are to be raised on the Milwaukee percentage plan, is to be tried out the coming season. As far as possible, it will connect up with that of the national committee. The idea is to keep flowers constantly in the public eye, and impress the fact that they are "the first choice for all kinds of gifts or acknowledgments."

One of the large, successful firms of an eastern city, when asked to assist in a local publicity campaign, answered, "Why should we, who have the cream of the trade, help to make business better for others? We hustled for our success; let the others do the same." They failed to see, that being in a commanding position, the firm would likely be the first to be benefited by the increased demand. But as in this case, it is true that hustling brings success, and proves the old adage that "The Lord helps them that help themselves." So it will be with all others, and to the degree in which the retailers, large and small, are aroused by the campaign and made to set their best foot forward, and see the importance of each putting his individual business on a higher plane, presenting his plants and flowers in such an inviting manner that they are sure to attract attention, will they receive the benefit.

If all the plants and flowers sold in any large community were controlled by one firm, there is no question but large sums would be spent in advertising, because it would undoubtedly increase their sales, making them stand out prominently among the other articles of commerce that are in competition as gifts. Co-operative community advertising for florists is coming; in fact, it is now here, and those localities who are not alive to their opportunities, had better wake up, reach out, and get in line.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Often, our estimate of a public man, or any other man who is held up to us as one whose teachings should be followed, is formed upon the fact whether he practices what he preaches. Henry Penn, of Boston, Mass., has, perhaps, shouted for publicity for flowers as loudly as any one. The following letter evidences that he practices what he preaches: "Enclosed please find cheque, for which kindly send receipt in full for $400, my yearly subscription. I feel that this money is being used for the best campaign that ever was originated—for the best results that ever a campaign could offer. Accept same with my best wishes."

We know of a number of florists who do not hesitate to pronounce our publicity campaign as the best incentive to business ever undertaken. They believe in it, and admit a personal share in the splendid results. But—they do not subscribe to the fund. They are not in Henry Penn's class—they are just plain preachers.

The campaign has been fortunate in having 25 other enthusiasts such as Mr. Penn., and who, together, have subscribed about one-seventh of the total amount collected to date. Here they are: A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., $500; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., $200; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., $200; Peter Reinberg, Chicago, $200; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., $600; Sam Murray, Kansas City, Mo., $200; W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, $200; Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., $200; Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb., $200; Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., $250; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., $200; Lord & Burnham Co., New York, $200; New York Cut Flower Co., $250; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y., $200; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., $250; Max Schling, New York, $300; G. E. M. Stumpp, New York, $300; C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, O., $200; J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., $200; Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., $500; Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa., $250; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., $500; H. H. Battles, Philadelphia, Pa., $500; Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., $200.

Just think of it, these few florists, many of them growers and wholesalers, taking upon themselves this large share of our financial load! Not one of them has subscribed less than $200 per year. And yet there are nearly 15,000 florists who are to benefit from our campaign who have not subscribed a penny. All praise is due to the others who have helped to swell the fund. Even as small a subscription as $5.00 is acceptable, and helps—there is no dictation as to what a man ought to subscribe. It is the spirit of the thing that counts.

We have now passed our period of summer dullness, and conditions are ripe for several prosperous months ahead, and prosperity will materialize if our committees are able to carry out the plans on which they are now engaged. It is up to those who have not subscribed to make this possible—those who have already contributed should have the hearty thanks of all for the magnificent success so far enjoyed.

We have attracted the attention of the public to our products, and our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," is working continuously to our advantage, bringing to the florists all over the country business which without it would not be forthcoming. Can anyone in the trade really afford to withhold support from such a business-bringing movement? It should be a privilege and a pleasure to subscribe.

Contributions are urgently needed now. This is the time to rally to our campaign standard.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club held its monthly meeting in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the evening of October 13, President Kessler in the chair. A. M. Henshaw, for the committee charged with securing a new place of meeting, reported that the social features of the club would bar it from the hall in the Engineering building. W. A. Manda spoke, and favored a change in the constitution of the club so that it could meet the requirements and secure the hall. Maurice Fuld and P. W. Popp spoke in support of Mr. Manda's position. A number of others, including Secretary Young, Henry Weston and Arthur Herrington, spoke in favor of the Engineering building. On motion of Joseph A. Manda, it was voted that the constitution should be changed to conform to the rules governing the larger hall in the above named building. On motion of Arthur Herrington, the secretary was instructed to notify the absent members of the vote to be finally taken at the November meeting. The Engineering building is located at 25-33 West 39th street, a few steps east of Sixth avenue. Its hall is familiar to all who attended the recent exhibition of the American Dahlia Society and the American Institute.

Arthur Herrington spoke of the encouraging prospects for the spring flower show, though printers' strikes are now an obstacle to getting out literature. He believes all difficulties will be overcome, and that the show will surely be a success. Secretary Young also spoke in an encouraging vein, of the prospects for the show.

The death of J. B. Deamund was reported, and a committee appointed to prepare suitable resolutions.

Final action was taken on a motion carried at the September meeting, and $500 contributed to the publicity fund.

Some pleasantries were indulged in because the club's team was fourth in the bowling contest at Detroit. J. A. Manda said it was because President Kessler was not on the team.

New members were elected as follows: A. I. Dunn, 148 Front street, New York; Charles Fremd, 148 Front street, New York; S. S. Skidelsky, 50 Park place, New York; Harry W. C. Herrmann, 2897 Fulton street, Brooklyn; George B. Cannon, 43 Atlantic street, Stamford, Conn.; Leo Osternei, Digny avenue, New York; James Brown, 1170 Broadway, New York; William J. Manda, 191 Valley road, West Orange, N. J.

Among the visitors were J. C. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and John Watson, secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen. Both were called on, and made brief addresses. Mr. Vaughan spake of the interest displayed by the women of the garden clubs, which he said was encouraging, and that renewed efforts should be made by the men of the business to reconstruct and advance horticulture. Mr. Watson spoke of the necessity of increased interest in horticulture, and of the work of his association.

GOOD DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

Trade has been brisk this week in nearly all departments of the business. There is a growing demand noted right along for good stock of every description. Fall business may be fairly said to have begun in earnest, and every one is looking forward to a most successful season. Roses are gradually commencing to show improvement in the quality offered, and we may expect some good stock in the near future. They have been in steady demand all week, and are cleaning up well. Prices, also are more satisfactory. Columbia, Ophelia, Hadley and Shawyer are most in evidence. Ulrich Brunner is gradually disappearing from the market after a long season. Cecile Brunner is quite scarce at this writing. The out-of-town demand for roses is brisk, and very little stock is on hand after all orders are filled. Chrysanthemums are coming in freely, and are much in popular favor. The rains of last week, which were general throughout the growing district, injured a quantity of stock that was ready for market. As the rain was not accompanied by strong wind, it did not damage anything that was not ready for cutting. The old favorite, White Queen, is now in, and is just as popular as ever. It is bringing steady prices. Wm. Turner is not very plentiful this week. Chrysolora, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Chieftain and Crocus are the leading varieties to be had in their respective colors. Pompons are available and reasonable in price in nearly all colors. The shippers say the demand is excellent. Heavy shipments are leaving the city daily on their long journey to eastern and northern points. Carnations are becoming a little more plentiful, but are still held at 75 cents per bunch of 25 blooms. Some very good Matchless were noted. Reds are not in much demand, but every other color moves rapidly. The scarcity of gardenias has been broken, and they are now arriving in sufficient quantities to meet all demands. Cattleyas are in heavy demand, with the supply scarcely able to meet the call as yet. Asters have disappeared for the season. A limited supply of sweet peas are still coming in. There is still a heavy cut of dahlias, although the rains damaged a large quantity of stock. Some good gladioli are to be seen in a few stores, but they are rapidly approaching the end of their season. The supply of violets showed a large increase this week. The rains were of great benefit to this flower. There is a heavy demand for them for shipping purposes. A large supply of The Giant will be ready for shipping very soon. Zinnias are to be seen in limited numbers, but do not compare in quality with the offerings of former years. Nearly all outdoor perennial flowers are disappearing. There is a steady demand for Boston ferns. Eight and ten-inch stock are the best sellers. Cyclamens are getting better every day. Primulas in eight-inch pots make a pretty showing, and add greatly to the appearance of the store interiors. Pot grown chrysanthemums in nearly all colors are arriving, and add to the small list of flowering plants.

NOTES.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee, on Hyde street, is now shipping a large quantity of Chrysolora chrysanthemums. She says this is the best shipper among the yellow varieties until Bonnaffon appears. Chieftain is her leading pink variety, owing to its keeping qualities. She says there is a steady call for pompons, the bronze and yellow varieties being the most popular. She is also handling large quantities of violets.

J. A. Axell, of 461 Bush street, says that the rains made the chrysanthemums, which were not grown under cover, suffer somewhat. He reports a heavy demand for yellow chrysanthemums, and is receiving a large supply of first-class stock from his growers. He is shipping a large quantity of violets and roses also to outside points and is greatly pleased with trade in general.

Alfred Cuneo, head designer of the Art Floral Company, executed two beautiful wedding decorations the past week. Chrysanthemums were in great profusion, yellow sorts being chiefly used. A large quantity of palms and other decorative stock was also required in the work. Cattleyas were used for the table decorations and bridal bouquets.

The Thomas Floral Company, at Jones and O'Farrell streets, is making large showings of Boston ferns and other decorative plants this week. They are also handling a fine lot of chrysanthemums. This firm has built up a good substantial trade in this neighborhood by the quality of the stock carried and courteous treatment.

P. Rosaia, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., says his firm has been kept busy all week on decorative work. They are receiving a fine cut of orchids and gardenias, and have no difficulty in disposing of this stock at high prices. They are still receiving some extra good Dr. Tevis dahlias from Frank Pelicano's nursery at Colma.

Nogata & Son, of Oakland, who are large growers of small plants for the retail florist and seed stores, are sending in large quantities of young stock for fall planting. Mr. Nogata has made a great success of this particular line, and grows a very large stock, which, owing to its excellent quality, is always in demand.

Avensino Bros., who have for years been located at 182 Geary street, have discontinued business. The high rents in that neighborhood is the reason for closing. They are looking around for a new location in the downtown district, and if a favorable one can be found, they hope to reopen in the near future.

Shellgrain & Ritter, on Kearny street, are receiving a fine lot of pot plants, principally cyclamens and primulas. Their windows are always attractively arranged. They say the demand for high grade chrysanthemums was never better than it is this season. They are also handling a large cut of violets.

Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, is spending a few days in this city, where he is attending the land show. He has been made honorary president of the show, and was given a great ovation when he made the opening address. He has a spnendid exhibit, which will be described fully later.

The handsome store of the Nelligan Sisters, at 1203 Sutter street, is becoming one of the best patronized in that part of the city. These young ladies have made a great success at this place since beginning business. They are aiming to cater to the better class of trade.

C. Kooyman & Co. are doing a brisk trade in florist supplies these days. They report a good demand from the out-of-town trade. They also handle wire designs in large quantities for the shipping trade. Gladiolus bulbs are being largely handled by this firm this year.

The Belmont Floral Company has a very attractive store at 2360 Fillmore street, and specializes in original baskets and designs. They find trade good, and say prospects for a good season are excellent.

D. Avensino, at 488 Haight street, is doing a nice business this season. He has a large funeral trade, and carries a large stock of high-class flowers at all times.

FAIR DEMAND WITH AMPLE SUPPLY.

Business is fairly good and there is enough stock to take care of all immediate demands, but this will shorten as soon as the outdoor flowers suffer from the first killing frost. Shipping business is good. The supply of roses is fair for the time of the year, in so far as quantity of the receipts is concerned. Most of the arrivals in this line are of good quality. Chrysanthemums are becoming heavy and up to this time have been selling well. Carnations are in good supply. The dahlia receipts are heavier than at any previous time this year. Cosmos is very plentiful, but the chances are that heavy recent rains will put a substantial part of it out of commission.

NOTES.

Thos. Joy, Nashville, Tenn., and Karl Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., stopped in this city on their way to the F. T. D. meeting at Buffalo. O. S. and R. M. Honaker, Lexington, Ky., and Chas. F. Winter, Charlestown, W. Va., were in this city for the world's series during the past fortnight.

G. C. Mickley has opened a retail store on Seventh street near Race street. The store room is a good one in the shopping district, and has been neatly and tastefully decorated by Mr. Mickley and Miss Pogue. Their start in the business has been very auspicious.

E. G. Gillett has been receiving some fancy chrysanthemums from Oakland, Md. In spite of the distance they travel, they always come through in good condition.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some excellent chrysanthemums from Jos. Hill at Richmond, Ind.

The Anderson Shop, at Xenia, O., is opening a store at Wilmington, O.

North Shore Hort. Society Show.

The second chrysanthemum exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural Society, Lake Forest, Ill., will be held in Durand Art Institute, that place, November 5, under the management of John Newboro. The schedule which has been issued includes 25 classes in the chrysanthemum section for cut blooms and 14 classes for chrysanthemum plants, with a silver cup offered for the best group of the latter, limited to 50 square feet, arranged with foliage plants for effect. There are six classes for cut blooms of roses, a like number for carnations, and one class each for lily of the valley and violets. In the miscellaneous plant section, the schedule includes palms, ferns, begonias, lilies, cyclamens, polypodiums, Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, basket arrangements and silver cup for a group of foliage plants occupying 25 square feet. Table decorations will also be a feature. In the fruit and vegetable sections, there are 37 classes in which cash awards and ribbons will be given.

The officers of the society are: William Fisher, president; George Wilson, vice-president; O. Pettersen, recording secretary; Louis Heidtmann, corresponding secretary; G. Schaffer, treasurer. Trustees: Geo. Koppenhoefer, E. Bollinger, E. Benson, F. Kuehne, T. Head and J. Newboro.

Newark, N. J.

The Newark growers are now keeping the retail stores well supplied with chrysanthemums and dahlias. Business seems active with the retailers in weddings, funeral work and the sale of bunches. At the public market, several growers are doing a lively business in ferns and other plants.

Philips Brothers have recently had a number of good wedding decorations. In their conservatory they manage to keep a good assortment of foliage stock, and are always well prepared for decorations or other calls for plants.

Wm. Zois, the Washington Florist, has sold his interest in the store at Lenox avenue and 125th street, New York, and will hereafter give all his attention to his Newark store.

At the store of the Rosary Flower Co. we found business active. This shop is always well stocked with seasonable flowers.

At Bergerow's, it was stated that business was good.

The Late Dr. Cyrill George Hopkins.

The news of the death of Dr. Cyril George Hopkins, of the faculty of the University of Illinois, reached this country, October 8. He had been traveling in southern Europe, and it is presumed, was suddenly stricken after reaching Gibralter, where he died.

Dr. Hopkins was born at Chatfield, Minn., July 22, 1866. He graduated from the South Dakota College of Agriculture in 1890, and received his teacher's degree the following year. From Cornell University he received the degrees of master of science and doctor of philosophy. He was an authority on the chemistry of the soil, and from the time of receiving his certificate had been a teacher of it. In that capacity, he had served at the Agricultural College of South Dakota, Cornell University, and the University of Illinois. A prolific writer, his best known works are "Soil Fertility and Permanent Agriculture," "The Story of the Soil," and "The Soil That Won't Wear Out."

THE coal supply will be seriously affected by the threatened strike of miners.

WESTERN growers of cut flowers report plenty of roses and chrysanthemums this season, with a shortage of carnations.

THE Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin for September contains many fine views of the garden and a portrait of the late Henry Shaw, from a painting by Richard Miller.

A DEAL which has attracted much attention in the northwest is that in which E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., is reported to have bought 500,000 rose plants of Clark Bros., Portland, Ore., and offered to take 200,000 more the coming season.

DETROIT TRADE EXHIBITION AWARDS.

Through an error on the part of the operator in Detroit, Mich., who copied the report of the judges of Sections E and G of the trade exhibition in connection with the recent convention of the society, the following award was omitted:

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Certificate of merit for exhibit of florists' supplies, and novelties for table and other decorations.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Germany Trying to Regain Trade.

The New York World says that signs are not lacking in Brussels that Germany is attempting to regain the place in the commercial world which she lost through the war. Goods now in the Belgian markets are often typically German, and are supposed to enter the country through neutrals, such as Holland and the Scandinavian countries. The goods do not bear the German trademark, the imperial crowns being replaced in some instances by American eagles to make them pass as American, and in others by French and British trademarks. Names of German firms are completely absent, but the manufacture is typically German.

Parcel Post Open to Foreign Countries.

According to information received from the post office department under date of October 7, international parcel post service has been extended to more than 20 countries since the cessation of hostilities, in addition to those countries with which it had been established prior to the war and the reestablishment of suspended service. In addition to the new service, parcel post to Belgium, Chile, Denmark, Germany, Greece, Liberia, the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden, which was discontinued during the war, has been resumed and the maximum weight of parcels for China and South American countries included in the service, increased from 11 to 22 pounds with the exception of Argentine Republic, in which the increase was to 20 pounds.

GOOD DEMAND CONTINUES.

Trade conditions continue practically unchanged, both as to the volume of offerings and outlet. Wholesalers say there is no apparent let-up in sales, and retailers report that as a general rule the public is well supplied with money and is buying freely. The fact that the retail trade, by holding together, has been able to secure $1.50 per dozen for carnations this season, is taken as one proof of this. In past years, there was more or less price cutting, and the buyers soon got into the habit of considering carnations a cheap flower. The dealers' association brought about more harmony, and with $1.50 per dozen, the prevailing price, all divisions of the trade can realize a good profit. All of the wholesalers who get their supply locally, are counting on a big holiday business in roses, and the ranges are full of young stock. There has been an especially heavy cut of orchids. Gladioli and cyclamens are being used extensively in baskets, and dealers say there is an increasing interest in these. Marigolds, both single and double, have been used freely of late, and these colorful offerings proved good sellers, while the local supply of cyclamens is now rated so good that four outside cities were represented by prospective buyers here during the past week. Maple chrysanthemums were in heavy arrival and were featured by most dealers, while the entire trade has been making a strong showing of roses. Ophelia Columbia and Madame Butterfly proved extra good sellers.

HOLLYWOOD GARDENS' IMPROVEMENTS.

With more than five acres under glass, and an increased area devoted to propagation in the open, the Hollywood Gardens have made changes here which place this establishment in the front rank of Pacific Coast greenhouses as to care in handling and quality produced, if not in size. The automatic time system has been installed in all greenhouses, making it easier for a single night watchman to attend to this feature while wire cables over each row of boxes allow powerful lights to be slid along, so that night work is made easier. At present, pompons and Chadwick chrysanthemums occupy three houses, while the two and one-half acres, given over to carnations, contain principally Supreme, Gentry Supreme, White Wonder and Aviator. As far as the local demand is concerned, the greatest profit on orchids has been found in the three leading commercial varieties, and labiata and Trianæ lead in the two long orchid rooms. Instead of getting its Christmas supply of poinsettias and pepper plants from California, the firm is growing their own this year, and in two sections of the glassed-in area are found about 3,000 poinsettias and hundreds of pepper plants. One house contains some especially fine examples of palms and rubber plants, the former containing uncommon varieties. Four houses are given over to ferns, and in another cyclamens are handled. The two propagating houses are so arranged that plants are set in sand, and past experience shows the value of this method, as the chance for heating below the boxes practically insures successful growth. In addition to this 10-unit range, the hardier offerings occupy a number of big outside fields and a large storage house, about 35x150 feet, gives ample service in this line. This last includes a chilled packing room. The stock is all brought to the city by auto truck, although a private railway spur serves the establishment in the matter of unloading large supplies.

NOTES.

One of the most unusual products of local ranges was seen this week, when an auratum lily, 10 feet in height, with 26 branches, and more than 265 blossoms, was shown. This window display attracted no end of attention. Another novelty was the showing by the Orpheum Floral Company, of Artic, a ten-inch dahlia, grown by George Sheffield and wife of Burton, Washington. This flower is deep yellow in color.

George P. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., has returned from an eight-day trip up the Olympic penninsula, where business and pleasure were combined. He states the party went for bear, grouse and moss, and secured none of the first, two or three of the second, and large quantities of the last named item.

A deal which has attracted much attention in the northwest is that in which E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., is reported to have bought 500,000 rose plants of Clark Bros., Portland, Ore., and offered to take 200,000 more the coming year.

Chrysanthemums and asparagus ferns were the only two lines brought from California at all heavily last week, and local growers were in a position to ship carnations to other northwestern cities.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop featured roses and marigolds in its windows all of the week, and reports especially good results on the latter offering.

TRADE INCLINED TO BE QUIET.

Business during the past week has been a little quiet, due largely to weather conditions. The unseasonable temperature, coupled with heavy rains during the latter part of the week, caused a let-up in buying, which is believed to be only temporary. There has been comparatively little funeral work during the week, and as yet, party and reception orders have not reached large proportions. With the coming of colder weather, social activity is expected to increase. Weddings are expected to be more numerous during the fall, and quite a few are scheduled in the near future. General orders are fairly good, and growing plants have been especially popular. The feature of the trade is the demand for carnations and roses. A moderate supply of both are on the market, and they sell for $1.50 per dozen for carnations and $2 to $5 per dozen for roses. Premier, Sunburst, Russell and Ophelia are the principal varieties of roses on the local market. Sweet peas are moving fairly well at 50 cents a bunch. They are quite plentiful. Chrysanthemums are selling satisfactorily although the demand is not as strong as usual for the time of the year. They retail at $4 to $6 per dozen.

STORES FEATURE BRILLIANT DISPLAYS.

The market during the past week has been a blaze of color, all of the autumn shades being represented in the dahlias and chrysanthemums—the former for the customer wanting something of moderate price, the latter appealing to the more aristocratic buyer. These flowers have also been employed to good advantage in the window displays and they will be missed when frost takes them away. The orchid supply is a little larger than last week, which is encouraging when we remember the October wedding demand. Swainsona is being suggested as a substitute for lily of the valley, which is now an unknown quantity here. Carnations are much better than they have been. Cut lemon verbenas and rose geraniums are offered in bunches of 25 sprays and make a fragrant addition to the cut flower arrangements or when used in baskets.

NOTES.

The date of the big event, "ladies' night," of the florists' club is drawing near. Better secure your tickets before the reservations are closed. The committee has secured George Black to decorate the ballroom and Chas. Feast will arrange the tables with the assistance of half a dozen of the promising younger members of the craft. The Southern hotel is the place and the evening of October 21 is the time.

J. Bartel, a veteran grower of this city, will leave soon for the west in company with his wife and daughter, who was recently married.

Ollie Larkin, a relative of Wm. Christie, died suddenly in the mountains and was buried from the Christie home on Greenmount avenue.

President Ekas of the gardeners' and florists' club, who has been laid up for about a week, has recovered and is again on the job.

Robert Halliday is still at Ocean City, where he is improving in health rapidly. He expects to return to this city shortly.

Louisville, Ky.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held its regular meeting, October 8 at the Indiana Dahlia Farm, New Albany, as the guest of Edward Kunzman, the proprietor. There was a large attendance and the thousands of fine blooms of the choicest varieties of this flower presented a sight worth going many miles to see.

D. L. Swift has installed a new boiler to be used in connection with the heating of his rose houses. At present he is cutting some good flowers.

FALL TRADE OPENS STRONG.

Business for the fall season has opened with a rush, added to by several weddings. Chrysanthemums are plentiful but prices remain firm at $3 to $5 per dozen. Some very good snapdragons are being received, also bouvardia, both of which move readily. Dahlias and gladoli are about done for, ruined by the heavy frosts of the past week. Roses are in full crop, with Ophelia, Killarney Queen, Columbia, Russell and Crusader leading in popularity. Spencer sweet peas are showing good stem and color. Violets have arrived and are very good for the season. The help situation is becoming quite serious and several of the large stores are in need of salesmen.

CLUB MEETING.

The florists' association held its regular meeting at the Parker House, October 10, the attendance numbering 62. After the dinner, Secretary Hicks, of the retail board of the chamber of commerce, spoke at length regarding retail business, co-operation and organization. During the evening it was suggested that a "Say it With Flowers" week be held in connection with Armistice week, beginning November 10, when everything possible will be done to boom the flower trade. Donations to the amount of $675 were received to start an advertising fund.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is supplying this market with fine asparagus and nephrolepis. Their cyclamens and begonias are also showing good form.

William Sullivan is now with J. Walsh & Son, Malden, Mass.

Wm. Nicholson is having heavy cuts of Early Frost and Oconto chrysanthemums; also pompons of some of his new seedlings.

Frank Edgar has a fine house of Major Bonnaffon and will start cutting November 1. He is also going in heavy on pot plants. S. K. G.

Nashville, Tenn.

FUNERAL AND WEDDING DEMAND.

Business during the past two weeks has been quite satisfactory, made up in the main from funeral orders and wedding arrangements, the latter now being noticeable. The cut flower supply has increased and roses are coming in with great profusion, holding their price well at $3 per dozen. Carnations are also increasing, but are none too numerous. They move freely at $1.50 per dozen. Chrysanthemums in small quantities have made their appearance, but it will be a week or two before they will be considered a factor. Paper White narcissus bulbs have arrived and are now on sale at $1 per dozen, finding many buyers even at that price. M. C. D.

Providence, R. I.

STOCK GRADES HIGH AND MOVES FREELY.

The demand during the past week has been very good, stock being excellent in quality and brisk business was the rule. Roses are clean and crisp and sell on sight. Asters are now a thing of the past and they are much missed in funeral work. Weddings have been numerous and have brought a strong call for white roses, incidentally strengthening prices. The cut flower trade is picking up well. Chrysanthemums are now in better supply and the quality is also showing considerable improvement. The call for this flower, however, is light at present. Violets have made their appearance and prove good stock. Carnations, while fairly good, move slowly.

H. A. T.

Cleveland.

FLOWER DEMAND DROPS.

There has been a decided falling off in the demand for cut flowers during the past week. Funeral work has also diminished and business has suffered accordingly. Some of the retailers place the blame on the steel strike, together with the prices of the necessities of life. Of course there is vast difference between the demand at the present time and during the influenza period last year. Roses are plentiful in all varieties and the street merchants were a busy crowd on Saturday, buying up the surplus, and despite a drizzling rain which fell all day, they seemed to do a good business. Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful as are the daily receipts of carnations. Sweet peas clean up early and the same is true of swainsona, larkspur, daisies, lilac, etc. A good call for boxwood indicates an increased demand for this item later on. Dahlias are still plentiful but the demand continues very good. Outdoor pompons meet with a good call for funeral work. Growers in the vicinity experienced a light frost on the night of October 7, but no damage resulted.

NOTES.

Carl Lee and wife, nee Miss O'Malley, both in the employ of the J. M. Gasser Co., have resigned their positions. Mr. Kester, formerly with the Jones-Russell Co., has taken a position with this firm.

Walter Rohusek has purchased a double house in the Lakewood section and intends to move in the near future. He expects to join the J. M. Gasser Co.'s force next week.

Jack Fratos, of the Park Flower Shop, passed around the "perfectos" last week, the occasion being the arrival of a fine boy at his home. Congratulations.

Orchids are cleaning up right along, with cattleyas bringing $15 to $18 per dozen. Gardenias are in short supply at $6 per dozen. Lily-of-the-valley continues to bring $15 per 100, and in some instances, more. Sweet peas have made their appearance, and sell like hot cakes. Violets, both single and double, are included in the offerings. Chrysanthemums are moving fast at $2 to $5 per dozen, and pompons at 50 to 75 cents per bunch. There is quite a large number of California chrysanthemums being offered here in both the wholesale market and retail stores which is helping out some during the shortage. American Beauty roses are good property at prices ranging from $2 to $6 per dozen, and at times a trifle more, especially in the extra-fancy grades. Mrs. Chas. the local retail florist, but transient trade has been slow, according to some of the loop dealers. The outlook is encouraging, and no complaints are being heard in regard to poor business.

NOTES.

George Wienhoeber, Walter Adams, Ernst Wienhoeber Co. and the Bohannon Floral Co., are all closing their stores on Sunday and intend doing so throughout the year. Several other local firms have signified their intention of doing likewise, and it will probably not be long before practically everyone in the trade will be doing the same. The wholesale dealers thought it was impossible to close on Sundays for many years, but have found out since that it is not necessary to keep open on the Sabbath.

H. N. Bruns' bachelor farewell party, tendered his son, Herman E., October 10, was a joyous occasion. A bounteous dinner was served to about 25 male friends of the family, and later there were delightful recitations by Miss Irene Terwilliger, the bride-to-be, and many congratulatory addresses by others of the party. The wedding of Herman E. Bruns and Miss Terwilliger is scheduled for October 18.

George Asmus, Fred Lautenschlager, George Weiland, Paul Klingsporn, W. J. Smyth, C. E. McCoy, H. V. Swenson, Clarence Ellsworth and T. D. Long, of this city, attended the annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, Buffalo, N. Y., October 14-15. J. F. Ammann and O. J. Olson, of St. Paul, made the trip with the local party.

Two of our well-known people in the trade were quietly married recently, but have asked the writer to keep the news quiet for a few weeks, when they will let all their friends in on the secret. Another couple are going to be married in the near future, but for certain reasons they do not want it published this week.

Chris Pederson says that the writer erred when he wrote that he celebrated his forty-second birthday recently. It should have read forty-eighth instead, but he carries his age so well that one can hardly believe that the fine looking young fellow is really as old as that.

It is rumored that Jack Byers, of the Zech & Mann force, will join the ranks of the benedicts in the near future. One of the young men in the trade told him he thought he had about all the fighting he wanted when he was with the American troops abroad.

Wietor Bros.' stock never looked better in the greenhouses than it does right now, especially the roses, which are very promising. N. J. Wietor and wife expect to visit their son, Harry, this week, who is attending college at Milwaukee, Wis.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s range at Joliet was damaged last week by the heavy windstorm which swept that city. One rose house was blown down and much glass was broken in many of the others.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., passed through the city early in the week, returning from the west, where he reports good business.

Ed. Mallison is well pleased with business at the Fleischman Floral Co.'s store, and is looking forward to a brisk season. Funeral orders have been plentiful of late.

The American Bulb Co. has secured additional quarters at 56-58 East South Water street, which will be used for housing and distributing their Dutch bulbs.

Iler Cole, of Hembriecker & Cole, Springfield, celebrated his thirty-fourth birthday in this city, October 12, when he was the guest of Allie Zech and wife.

The Weiland-Risch Co. liked the new rose, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, so well last year that they increased their plantings of this variety for this season's cut.

Lewis & Rocca are more than satisfied with the amount of business they have done since they opened their store on East Jackson boulevard.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports a brisk call for fancy carnations, which in some instances, have sold as high as $6 per 100 the past week.

It is rumored that the expressmen will go out on strike next week unless other arrangements are made between now and Octobr 20.

Peter Reinberg is having a heavy out-of-town call for stock, which with the local demand, causes an early clean-up each day.

The Kaspar Manufacturing Co., 2644 South Crawford avenue, is manufacturing wooden easels for the trade.

C. L. Washburn reports that the shipping trade is exceedingly brisk at Bassett & Washburn's store.

Louis Finnermann, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co., is back from a visit to St. Louis, Mo.

Vaughan's Seed Store is very busy with the Dutch bulbs and nursery stock for fall planting.

The E. C. Amling Co. received its first shipment of sweet peas and bouvardia last week.

The E. F. Winterson Co. unpacked a large shipment of baskets the past week.

The Weiss-Spandikau Co. cut their first stock in their new range last week.

F. J. Benthey has resigned his position with Kennicott Bros. Co.

Visitors: B. H. Klus, Anderson, Ind.; Mr. Wilson, of the Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co., Portland, Ore.; Herman Mueller and wife, Wichita, Kan.; Fred Bleise and wife, of the Waukesha Floral Co., Waukesha, Wis.; H. Roth and wife, Lafayette, Ind.; J. J. Le Borious, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The Chicago Florists' Club resumed its monthly meetings October 9, at the Randolph hotel. President Zech in the chair. Fred Lautenschlager officiated as secretary in the absence of A. T. Pyfer. In co-operation with the association of commerce and the organizations of the wholesale and retail florists, the club voted to invite the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association to this city for its convention in 1920 or 1921.

Chairman Johnson, of the committee in charge of arrangements for the convention of the American Carnation Society, and the Illinois State Florists' Association, to be held at the Hotel La Salle, January 21-22, reported satisfactory progress, saying the flowers would be turned over to the retailers for effective rearrangement after the first day.

Treasurer Amling called attention to the "Say It With Flowers" signs in preparation by the Society of American Florists, and handed members a circular issued by the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago on their value and distribution, which is reproduced elsewhere in this issue. Chairman Lange, of the publicity committee, was instructed to ascertain the cost of displaying a number of these signs in the downtown district, and report at the next meeting.

A letter was read from President Blackistone, of the Washington Florists'

Club, on "Say It With Flowers" week, as planned by his organization. The highly successful operation of this plan has been already described and illustrated in these columns. The secretary was instructed to turn Mr. Blackistone's letter over to the local retail florists' association for consideration.

August Poehlmann, W. J. Keimel, Paul R. Klingsporn, Otto H. Amling and others discussing the outlook for cut flowers this season, said there would be plenty of roses and chrysanthemums, with a shortage of carnations. Shipments from other sections, it was said, would have little effect on the local market this season.

Allie Zech, describing his recent Wisconsin tour, said the florists' association of that state is doing good work in getting the trade together.

August Poehlmann cordially invited members to join the growers on the occasion of their visit to Morton Grove, October 16.

Talking of the fuel situation, Paul Weiss said there is enough coal to go around, but that prices are likely to advance.

James Morton was appointed one of the committee to prepare suitable resolutions on members lately deceased.

E. A. Bebb, who had served with the army in Europe, told of trade conditions there.

Peter Pearson exhibited some excellent cyclamen plants.

DEMAND CLEANS UP DAILY SUPPLY.

The supply of stock is about the same as last reported, the demand about balancing the receipts. Gladioli are now a back number with few to be seen. Carnations are more plentiful and the quality has improved. Dahlias are also more numerous and in some cases fine stock is available. Roses, especially Premier, Russell, Columbia and Ophelia, are rather limited and the improved quality brings better prices. Chrysanthemums are making their appearance on the market, although they rule high. Pot plants show considerable improvement and move fast.

ing varieties being represented as well as carnations and dahlias.

W. J. Barnes is now cutting some excellent dahlias. The last of the gladioli have gone. Funeral orders are holding up well and wedding work is better than ever before.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. reports stock coming in better with improvement in the quality of roses, carnations and dahlias. There is a daily gain in volume of sales.

Thomas Kane, of the Peterson Floral Co., who, it is believed, is suffering from a ruptured blood vessel near the heart, does not show much improvement in his condition.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop reports splendid opening business under Manager Neff, who is looking forward to a good season.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting stock in better quantity and reports a good run of funeral and wedding orders.

John Klauss is sending in some good Russell roses and will begin cutting chrysanthemums about October 15.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a much better supply and general trade improvement, especially in shipping orders.

Charles Thomas, of the Rosery, is recovering from an operation.

GENERAL TRADE CONDITIONS IMPROVED.

General business conditions strengthened considerably within the last few weeks, with a noticeable improvement in the social demand. Funeral work has been rather slow, but weddings are picking up. In fact, a few very good sized events are scheduled for this month. The supply of stock has been quite heavy in some instances. Roses have been in good supply, but have cleaned up well. Carnations show a world of improvement, and at an early date, should be a big factor in the market. Chrysanthemums are just beginning to come in, and within a few weeks they will be a drug on the market, unless some of the other stock falls off. Dahlias are of very fine quality. It seems a shame that their season is so short, but it will be best for general market conditions in a few weeks. A few early sweet peas are seen. Snapdragons and violets are in limited quantity but will be of better quality a little later on. Other outdoor stock is only fair and not a factor. In greens, the market is well supplied.

One of the largest turnouts of the season enjoyed Mr. Goebel's hospitality. Seventeen new applications were presented. L. Jules Bourdet was unanimously elected to the unexpired term of trustee, left vacant by Alex Lurie, who has moved to Cleveland, O. Quite a discussion took place in regard to publicity matters. After the meeting adjourned, Mr. Goebel took his guests in hand and served a wonderful lunch, with refreshments. He has his place looking well, and with the new additions of the past summer, he has one of the nicest ranges in St. Louis county. More power to you, Phil.

At the second meeting of the florists' bowling league, the rose team took two games from the carnations, and the sweet peas took two games from the daisies. Come on, you old timers, come in and get acquainted, and let us see how good you are now. Meetings every Wednesday evening at Grand and Gravois, across the street from Chas. Beyer's greenhouses.

L. Jules Bourdet and Wm. C. Smith have some very fine cyclamen coming on and from the looks of the stock at present, it is going to be the finest ever grown here. This will help out considerably, as there will be no azaleas and rhododendron here this season.

A number of the local F. T. D. members left October 12, for Buffalo to attend the annual meeting. Unfortunately not all the St. Louis members can go for various reasons, but they will anxiously watch the results of the meeting.

St. Louis county growers are having a big cut of chrysanthemums coming on for this season. The same is noticeable of the carnations. It seems there will be at least twice the amount of carnations that there were last season.

SUPPLY GAINS IN QUANTITY AND QUALITY.

The past week has been unusual for the season, almost summer temperatnre prevailing nearly every day, ending on Saturday with quite a burst of heat. Dahlias, which are at their height, have never been better, but are not benefitted by the hot, sunny days and are now coming in a trifle soft. This will be their last full week, as frost may then come any night, and if not, the competition of the chrysanthemum, the carnation, and the larger crops of roses, will crowd them out. Roses are improving both in grade and length of stem. There are more than the market can handle of the shorter sizes and accumulations go for sale on the street in quantity lots at very low figures. Longer and special grades are none too plentiful and command good prices. Carnations are much improved, and will take quite a jump in price after the first killing frost. The fall aster and the blue eupatorium have had a very good sale the past three weeks. They should certainly be profitable as a field or outdoor crop at this time. Cattleyas are more plentiful, and have dropped 25 per cent in price. Vandas and oncidiums are also to be had on order. There is a little lily-of-the-valley, nothing to be proud of, but still lily-of-the-valley. Let us hope that conditions will be normal with this lovely flower before long. Chrysanthemums are coming fast. Unaka, Early Rose, Smith's Advance, white and yellow, and the first of the Appletons were the principal varieties of the week. There are violets, but the petals lack substance, and the least warm weather shrivels them up before the day is out. The demand has been very good for the season, but the warm weather has forced all kinds of stock along much too fast, and the result is the market is overstocked in everything except the higher grade of roses.

CLUB MEETING.

The October meeting of the florists' club was the best ever for so early in the season. A special effort had been made to secure an attendance of all the retail craft, but only about one-fourth of those engaged in this branch of the business were present. It takes a lot to wake some people up. The main topic of the evening was local publicity, in which all present were much interested. The letters from Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee and St. Louis, in reference to their publicity plans, were read by the secretary. Their optimistic tone as a result of their experience of the past few years, gave a distinct impetus to the work here, which was most effectively handled by the chairman of the committee, Chas. H. Grakelow. His committee had planned a "Say it with Flowers" week campaign, which would entail an expenditure of from $1,200 to $1,500. There was not a dissenting voice to this, which proves that the world "Do Move," as such a sum for the purpose would have scared us all pink, not many moons ago. The adoption of the Milwaukee percentage system of collecting funds for a local advertising campaign, without one dissenting voice, shows that the trade is ripe for the movement, and are ready to back up well conducted publicity.

As Arthur A. Niessen withdrew his nomination for vice-president, Harry M. Betz was elected in his place, and with this exception, last year's officers remain.

The exhibit of window boxes, filled with an improved erect form of Evonymus radicans and E. vegetus, a variety bearing quantities of berries, which later ripen a Christmas red, were features from the nursery of Adolph Muller, Norristown, Pa. This looks a very good substitute for boxwood. The vase of Robert Scott & Sons' new rose, Cornelia, made a fine showing. A cross between Mrs. Ward and Ophelia, it appears to have the good qualities of both to a marked degree. A vase of Edward Towill's seedling, a deep, rose pink, attracted much attention. It looks very promising. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new dahlias were also much admired.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society offered a space at their fall show for the national and local advertising committees to display and circulate their literature, and interest the public in their work.

NOTES.

One half of the large one-acre rose house of the Jos. Heacock Co., at Roelfs is glazed, and will be planted to sweet peas as soon as the ground has been leveled off. The whole house will be finished before November 1.

Manager Duetscher, of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florist Exchange, is featuring roses, dahlias and chrysanthemums. They will be particularly strong on roses the coming season.

George Aeugle is much pleased with his rose houses at Morton, which he says never looked better. His Philadelphia Cut Flower Company is featuring choice chrysanthemums.

Edward Reid is expected home from his western trip the present week. Chrysanthemums and roses are the quantity items of stock here.

A novelty with the Leo Niessen Co. is the lily-of-the-valley. Good business for the season, but too much stock, is the report.

Visitors: W. W. Lee, of George, Inc., Norfolk, Va.; W. Hibbard, of the Durham Floral Nursery, Durham, N. C.; Miss Baumgartner, Milwaukee, Wis.

PRICES REMAIN STATIONARY.

Concerning prices, there has been little change in the condition of business since our last notes were written. During the past week there were sales of special American Beauty roses at the wholesale rate of $60 per 100, but by October 11, $50 was the top price. Special Columbia, Premier, Mock and Ophelia also held up well. The shorter grades were slower. There was no marked increase in the supply of roses, but in chrysanthemums, dahlias and carnations there was a heavy gain. On October 10, the temperature, in the shade, went up to 80 degrees, and continued on the 11th. If such warm weather continues, the market will be glutted, particularly with dahlias, as there is now more than enough to supply the demand, and while the best bring fair prices, there is a surplus that is hard to move. The supply of chrysanthemums, while on the increase, is not yet anything near as heavy as it is likely to be in the next 10 days. A hot spell at this season will hurt the trade at both ends. It will bring in a heavy supply of stock, and keep good customers of the retail stores out of the city. There has been a marked increase in carnations, but they are moving slowly. Violets continue to arrive, but they are going largely to the street boys and are not factors in the trade. In orchids, the situation is unsatisfactory to both growers and wholesalers. A heavy supply is arriving, and they are hard to move. Some of the hybrids go as high as 75 cents per flower, wholesale, but inferior stock trails down as low as 25 cents.

October 13.—There is a fair amount of business for the opening of the week. There was heavy frost on the night of October 12 in the outlying districts with prospects of more tonight. The dahlia demand is already failing and their finish seems near. A considerable stock of pompon chrysanthemums is now on the market, which is unfavorable to the dahlias. A strike of expressmen is now on, but this does not greatly affect the florists, as most of them now receive their stock by other conveyances.

THE STRIKES.

The citizens of this city may now be said to have strikes to the right of them, strikes to the left of them. The ferryboat hands have now gone on strike, while the longshoremen have made trouble since October 6. The ferry strike is hampering the New Jersey growers that send in their stock by autos. "Cargoes spoiling in port" is the way the Journal of Commerce headlines the longshoremen's strike. Our neighbor, the Tribune, October 11, thus gives the longshoremen's strike in a nutshell: "Strike began last Tuesday, when national adjustment commission made public its new wage awards. Awards increased wages of men from 65 to 70 cents per hour, and from $1 to $1.10 per hour for overtime. The men demand $1 an hour for an eight-hour day and $2 an hour for overtime.

"They went out without sanction of their national leaders, although they had agreed to abide by the decision of the commission. There are now 70,000 deep-sea longshoremen, 15,000 coastwise workers, and about 30,000 men of kindred trade idle as result of the trouble. A total of 108 steamship lines here have closed their piers to freight and passenger traffic; 5,000 carloads of foodstuffs are spoiling, and about 250 more vessels will be made idle by October 13." The employers claim that it is the Bolsheviki element that has caused the trouble.

NOTES.

Guido, Inc., 595 Lexington avenue, recently arranged a fine dinner decoration at the Ritz-Carlton hotel. Oncidiums and cattleyas, with A. Farleyense were the features on the head table. The side table was decorated with a combination of dahlias in yellow effect. The ball room decoration was of palms, smilax and yellow chrysanthemums.

It is stated that William Burns, for the past 30 years in the retail business at 840 Sixth avenue, has sold out to William P. Sears, and will hereafter devote all his time to his extensive real estate holdings. Wm. P. Sears has also been on Sixth avenue at 42nd street, for many years, but recently had to vacate on account of building operations.

Here is a hard luck story: Charles Lawrence, formerly a retailer of this city, who enlisted in a British regiment, and went through the greater part of the war without serious injury, was recently knocked down by an automobile and sustained a fractured skull and broken ribs. We are pleased to state that he is recovering.

Among the passengers that arrived at this port on the Norwegian-American liner Stavangerfjord, from Christiania, Norway, October 8, was Miss Irmelin Nansen, granddaughter of Nansen, the famous arctic explorer, who, it is stated, has come to this country to take a course in gardening at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

J. W. Hauser and wife have returned from a five weeks' trip through this country and Canada. On the Pacific coast, they visited San Francisco, Los Angeles, Vancouver, B. C., and other points. They were well pleased with the hospitality of the far west, but did not have much time to visit the florists.

"Block parties" and dances have become so popular in this city and vicinity that decorations have been added. Wm. H. Miller, now of Max Schling's staff, was recently awarded first prize for a decoration at such a party and dance, on Bidwell avenue, Jersey City.

Christatos & Koster, who for some years have had a retail store at 717 Madison avenue, have leased the store at Park avenue and 80th street, vacated by the Rosary Flower Co., and will also continue their Madison avenue store.

Sam Seligman, known from coast to coast as a hustling commercial traveler, with particular reference to florists' supplies, has embarked in business for himself, and taken commodious offices at 239-41 Fourth avenue, this city.

Philip Hass, Jr., a well known carnation grower of College Point, this city, was married to Miss Grace Delaney, also of College Point, September 29. The happy couple spent their honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

Harry Bayersdorfer makes the distance between his Philadelphia and local places of business by auto in three hours. One of the firm makes the trip every Monday. They report large European shipments en route.

Secretary John Young, President-elect A. L. Miller, W. A. Manda, Charles Brown, and possibly others, will attend the convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Buffalo, N. Y., October 14-15.

In the strike of employes of the American Railway Express Company, 11,000 men have walked out, including drivers, chauffeurs and helpers, and the express business is practically paralyzed at the railroad terminals.

W. A. Blaedel Sons state that they have already had quite a number of steamer orders. A. F. F.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

PANSY seed is reported quite short.

THE price of bags at Chicago, October 15, was $62.00.

SWEET PEA shortages will be heavier than anticipated earlier in the season.

FRENCH seeds to the value of 1,565,000 francs were exported to the United States in 1918.

PEAS shattered before harvest are producing a second crop in the Sacramento Valley, due to the unusual rains this season.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are about the same as last week, $2.75 for reds and yellows, and $3.25 for whites, prompt shipment.

VISITED CHICAGO: G. H. Dicks and F. B. Dawson, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., London, England; Morris Smith, Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Fifteen thousand longshoremen returned to work today at an advance of $10 per month. It is now regarded as certain the others will follow.

SEATTLE, WASH.—A large shipment of Dutch bulbs, including tulips and dahlias, the first important delivery here this season, has been received by Randall-McLaughlin.—H. M.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade October 15, were as follows: Timothy, $9.50 to $11.00 per 100 pounds. October $12.15 bid; $12.60 bid for March.

L. DAEHNFELDT, of Odense, Denmark, has increased his capital stock to five million kroner, part of which is offered at public subscription. The growing of Dutch bulbs will be undertaken.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened 20 cents higher and October and December advanced, October 14, with cash offered at $31.20. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.35, October, $5.62½, December, 5.67½, March $5.80 and April $5.75.

CHEHALIS, WASH.—This vicinity is to have a modern seed cleaning establishment, a warehouse here having been purchased by J. W. Elston, of Amity, Ore., who will equip it with up-to-date machinery for grading, sorting and cleaning.—H. M.

SANTA ANA, CALIF.—Records for September show greater rainfall than in any previous coresponding month. Coming during the latter part of the month, it delayed the tomato harvest about one week, and while there was no appreciable loss of seed, some are slightly darker in color, which, however, will not affect the vitality. Good weather has prevailed since the storm passed, the vines have not blighted as is usual following a rain, and with favorable conditions from now on, the yield should be fully as good as anticipated earlier in the season.

Wholesale Seedsmen's League.

Routine business occupied the Wholesale Seedsmen's League at its meeting in New York, October 15, those in attendance including: S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; Howard M. Earl and J. L. Hunt, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; Charles H. Breck, of Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation, Boston, Mass.; E. J. Flood, representing Robert Buist Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Kirby B. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa.; E. E. Bruggerhof, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; J. C. New York Seed Trade.

Three steamers carrying large lots of Dutch bulbs are lying unloaded at the docks and down the bay because of the continued dock laborers' strike. Even railroad freight depots are near a standstill.

Rejected lots of Paper White narcissus bulbs are being returned to this city on account of scarcity. The unloading of delayed French steamers may relieve the situation.

John Morrison, for the past 14 years with Weeber & Don, has become a member of the Muller & Seely Co., Inc., 47 West 42d street, and will give his attention to extending the seed business of the company.

W. H. Smith, for many years with Peter Henderson & Co., is now with Alex. Forbes & Co., of Newark, N. J.

S. S. Skidelsky thinks this city a good place for autumn bear hunting.

W. E. Marshall & Co. state that they are having good sales of bulbs.

California Vegetable Seed Crops.

The harvest of California vegetable seed crops at this date (September 30) is practically completed. Many fields have been threshed and recleaned. Where the results are actually known, the figures average fairly close to previous estimates, but wherever a difference is shown the figures have a tendency to be lower instead of higher than the earlier estimates. In fact, a majority of the growers have experienced so many disappointments in cleaning the different varieties that they are reluctant to make positive statements until the final results are known.

Climatic conditions throughout the entire growing season were not favorable and the dry weather had a tendency to mature the crops earlier than usual. Ordinarily this would mean an early clean-up and prompt deliveries, but the shortage of labor caused by the heavy demands for help to handle the fruit crops and other commodities, has hindered seriously the growers, and it is now thought that the clean-up will not be completed so early as usual.

During the last few days of September, light showers fell in the Delta and Santa Clara districts, and nearly an inch of rain fell in southern California. While the rain has been an inconvenience and has caused a little uneasiness among the growers, no serious damage has resulted to date. Many crops are now in the warehouse being recleaned and others are in such shape in the field that they can be protected from the moisture, providing the rain is followed by favorable drying weather.

Glad to quote for present delivery or on growing contract for crop of 1919.

A great deal of uncertainty exists among the growers regarding the status of next year's business. Many of the seed farmers decline to grow at this season's prices because of the prevailing high cost of labor, equipment and so forth, while the trade in general expect lower prices for next year. Many growers state that ordinary farm products are offering a better prospect, with less expense and care in growing. The sentiment is unanimous that the acreage in practically all kinds will be considerably reduced next season.

Radish.—The radish seed crop will be light this year, possibly 40 to 50 per cent of that of a normal year, or approximately 400 pounds per acre. This agrees with previous estimates, though some growers report as low as a 200-pound average on a large acreage. Fortunately the total acreage planted is large and it is thought there will be enough seed to allow a small surplus over present contracts.

Onion.—The onion seed crop is holding up fairly well to earlier estimates. Growers report an average yield of from 300 to 400 pounds per acre. Probably 350 pounds is a fair average estimate. Present demands indicate that supplies of the red and white varieties will be fairly well exhausted, but there may be a surplus of some of the yellow varieties.

Parsnip.—While parsnip is yielding below normal, a fair crop of good quality seed will be obtained and there will be enough to meet all demands. Estimates of the average yield range from 700 to 800 pounds per acre.

Tomato.—The tomato seed harvest in southern California is now at its height, and a normal crop is expected. The final results, however, are still uncertain because harvesting often is not complete until early in December and present climatic conditions are not altogether favorable. Quite a heavy rainfall came the last few days in September, and in case the precipitation continues for many days it will occasion considerable loss, both by the rotting of the fruit, which is now on the ground, and by leaf-blight development. If the the blight does not develop, the rain will be of considerable value in helping to fill out and mature the late crop.

Beet.—The acreage of garden beet this year is large, but the yield per acre will be much below normal. Estimates and actual figures of recleaned crops average from 650 to 800 pounds per acre. An unusual amount of light seed is being blown out in the recleaning process. Mangel beet is somewhat better, though the yield is not up to normal. Apparently former estimates of 900 to 1,000 pounds are fairly accurate. Sugar beet has fared better than the other beet-seed crops and a normal yield is indicated, although the leaf-hopper has appeared in all sections this season and has proved itself a serious menace to the crops. Swiss chard will be a very light crop.

Carrot.—Judging from the fields that have been threshed and recleaned to date the yield will not exceed the earlier estimates of 700 pounds, and in many cases the average will fall below this quantity because of shrinkage in re-cleaning. The crop did not start developing until early in May and the dry season caused it to mature early.

Lettuce.—Indications are that the average yield of lettuce will be between 200 and 300 pounds, which is below previous estimates. This crop was severely affected by the unfavorable season. Many growers do not expect over 40 to 50 per cent of a normal crop. However, the acreage is about equal to that of last year and it is thought there will be enough seed to meet present demands.

Squash.—Dry weather throughout the entire growing season, accompanied by a long hot spell in September, has materially affected this crop, and the growers do not expect over 60 to 75 per cent of a normal yield. Possibly the recent showers will prove beneficial and will increase this estimate.

Spinach.—The spinach-seed crop is poor this season. Some of the growers estimate the yield to be as low as 25 per cent of normal. The acreage was considerably reduced. Demand from the trade for this seed is light.

Beans.—It is the consensus of opinion among the growers that seed beans will not be over 60 per cent of a normal crop on a reduced acreage, and some varieties may develop a shortage. Some fields were cut and a few of the early varieties were threshed when the light showers came the last few days of September, but it is thought that the crop will not suffer any serious damage from them.

Garden Peas.—Reports on garden peas run all the way from a total failure to 40 per cent of a normal crop. Stock seed of some varieties probably will be short next season.

Salsify.—A satisfactory yield of good quality salsify seed on a fair acreage was obtained this season. Former estimates of 400 pounds per acre probably are correct.

Sweet Corn.—Only a small acreage of sweet corn for seed is grown in this state, and reports indicate that the crop is in poor condition owing to the unfavorable season.

Pepper.—A normal yield of pepper is indicated.

Cucumber.—Fields of cucumber for seed have developed fairly well this season, and the growers now anticipate nearly a normal yield.

Note. Reports just received (October 8) indicate that since September 30 the rainfall in the principal seed-growing districts in California has been negligible and continued fair weather has prevailed in most sections.—Government Seed Reporter.

NEW H. T. ROSE CORNELIA

OPHELIA x MRS. AARON WARD

A SPLENDID cross between these well known roses. Flowers are medium to large size and very double. The bud is a beautiful salmon-pink. In the half expanded and full flowers the outer petals are light flesh, with the center a bright Malmaison pink; base of petals bright orange. A strong vigorous grower, with good stem and foliage. Needs no pinching for a commercial variety, and when cut is a splendid keeper.

We have grown this variety for three years and with us we know it will be a very profitable variety, because of its blooming and lasting qualities. No grower can make a mistake in planting it. We have a house of 3000 plants which have been the admiration of every one who has seen it.

Visitors are cordially invited to inspect this sterling novelty.

Market Gardeners

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., President; Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas. Next annual convention September 1920.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—C. C. Morse & Co. have been attracting attention to their establishment with a display of fine squash and pumpkins grown at their trial grounds at Laurellone.

NEW YORK local market gardeners and dealers, by teams in the city, are reaping a rich harvest because of express employes' strike here. Lettuce advanced from 25 cents to $1.25 per crate.

New Jersey Crops Bring High Prices.

Farmers in South Jersey are now closing a season that has not been marked by a single bumper crop, but which has brought in bigger returns, proportionately, than any other similar period for many a year. While the products of the fields and orchards have been in less proportion than usual, the prices received by the growers have averaged more than double what they formerly did.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Cucumbers, bushel basket, $2.25 to $3.00; celery, Michigan, crate, 85 to 90 cents; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 20 to 22½ cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00; tomatoes, per box, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, Oct. 13.—Celery, per doz. roots, 15 to 65 cents; cucumbers, basket or crate, $1.50 to $3.00; mushrooms, $1.00 to $4.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, carrier, $1 to $2.50; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $2.00

Express Packing Rules Amended.

Preparations are being made to put new express packing rules into effect, December 10, by the United States railroad administration, which recently approved the new requirements. While they will not affect the heavy movement of perishable farm products by express, as such traffic usually travels in crates and barrels, the new packing requirements will be of much interest and importance to farmers who have other commodities to send to market by express, or goods to return to city merchants. The rules will not permit the use of paper wrapping for packages over 25 pounds, nor of ordinary paper boxes, wrapped or unwrapped, when the weight of the contents is over that limit. For shipments over 25 pounds, wooden containers, or fibreboard, pulpboard or corrugated strawboard containers of specified test strengths, are required.

This standardization of express rules will place the express service on the same basis as freight, so far as the character of the cartons used is concerned. In fact, the new express rules were modelled on those of the railroads and require the same kind of containers, except that in the express service, a wider latitude is permitted in the size of the carton used. The new regulations are embodied in Supplement No. 5, to Express Classification No. 26, copies of which may be secured at any express office.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period October 7-13, indicate little change in prices with shipments increasing. Potatoes were unsettled. Maine Green Mountains and Cobblers closed slightly higher than last week. Green Mountains held at $1.82 bulk per 100 pounds f. o. b. shipping points, and in terminal markets, prices were about steady, with slight declines in Boston, New York and Detroit, the average range being around $2.65-$2.75 except in Boston, which was $2.15-$2.25. New Jersey Giants closed slightly lower at an average range of $2.35-$2.55 sacked per cwt. in most Eastern markets. Michigan United States grade No. 1 round whites held steady at slightly lower ranges than last week at $2.10-$2.50 sacked per 100 pounds, but declined in most jobbing markets to $2.40-$2.65, carlot sales closing at $2.00-$2.25 in Chicago. Practically the same prices were paid for round whites f. o. b. Wisconsin shipping points, as in Michigan, closing slightly under last week's range at $2.00-$2.15. Minnesota Red River Ohios were $2.60-$2.65 sacked f. o. b. Minneapolis and Moorhead, closing at $3 in Omaha and Kansas City, declining to $2.60 at St. Louis and bulk stock advancing from last week's range to $3.10-$2.80 carlot sales in Chicago and at $3.00-$3.15 jobbing sales in Columbus. Minnesota white varieties held fairly steady at $2.20-$2.30 sacked per 100 pounds f. o. b. Minneapolis. Colorado stock showed little change in prices. Eastern sacked yellow onions, medium and large sizes, closed at $3.25-$3.33 per 100 pounds f. o. b. Rochester and advanced slightly in most terminal markets, closing at $3 in Boston, $3-$3.25 in Baltimore and $3.50-$4 in Philadelphia and New York. Middlewestern Red Globes, after suffering a decline in the middle of the week closed at $3.40-$3.50 per 100 pounds, sacked at Minneapolis, holding fairly steady in terminal markets at $3.50-$3.65 with prices up to $4 at Kansas City and New Orleans. Middlewestern yellow varieties were fairly steady with a slightly upward tendency, closing at $3.25-$3.50 in Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Baltimore, reaching $3.75-$3.85 in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati and $4 in Columbus O. California yellows were steady at about $4 per 100 pounds sacked in practically all markets, but reached $4.50 in Omaha and Fort Worth.

Potato Crop Report for October.

The bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture in its report on the late or winter commercial potato crop, based on conditions October 1, gives the carlot movement of late potatoes from 17 principal producing states as 129,466 cars or approximately 90,626,200 bushels, as compared with 152,248 cars in 1918, or 85 per cent of last year's commercial yield. The crop has shown some improvement throughout the east and middle west during September. Maine, New York and Pennsylvania now indicate a production of 42,630 cars or 1,812 cars increase over the September 1 estimate, and 892 cars less than last year.

In the heavy producing states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, the production promises to be 55,628 cars, an increase of 553 cars over the September 1 estimate, compared with 63,500 cars last year, of 88 per cent of last year's crop. A decrease during the month has occurred in the Rocky Mountain sections, particularly in Colorado, which has declined from the estimate of 10,030 cars September 1 to 7,662 cars October 1, or 52 per cent of last year's crop.

Conditions in the northwest have improved to some extent during the month. Oregon, Idaho and Washington promise to ship 11,723 cars or 223 more than on September 1, as compared with 13,205 cars last year, or 89 per cent of last year's crop. California, Utah and Nevada have shown little change since last month and now promise to ship 6,185 cars as compared with 7,365 cars last year.

TRADE SHOWS DAILY IMPROVEMENT.

Business conditions are improving daily, a larger and better supply of good flowers arriving, and an increased demand has put enough life into the trade to make it compare favorably with last fall. Dahlias are at present the largest arrival in the local market, the quality is very good, and they clean up daily at a good figure. Chrysanthemums are now a factor, Golden Glow, Smith's Advance, October Frost and Unaka arriving in fair quality and meet with ready sale at from $2 to $4 per dozen. Pompons have made an appearance, and are as big a favorite as ever. American Beauties are improving in quality, and the cut is getting larger, special blooms bringing from $5 to $7.50 per dozen. Special grades of Russell, Columbia, and Premier are in short supply, while the receipts of Ophelia, Pink and White Killarney, Sunburst and Hoosier Beauties just about equals the demand. Carnations are improving, and will soon become a factor. Arrivals of sweet peas, calendulas and yellow daisies are small, and not of very good quality. As there has been no frost in this district, the farmers are still bringing in large quantities of dahlias and other outdoor stock which has a tendency to keep the market unsettled.

NOTES.

Dave Hill has taken over the stand in the Davis Arcade on Fifth avenue, and while several have tried out this location, and never made a success of it, Dave is optimistic, and if any one can make it pay, he is the one.

Randolph & McClements arranged a large wedding decoration at Connellsville, Pa., October 11. Dahlias were used in large numbers.

George Wessenauer, of Sewickley, Pa., is improving after undergoing a serious operation at the Sewickley general hospital.

Butz Bros., of New Castle, Pa., are cutting some fine orchids at present.

M.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Quality Flower Shop, with a capital stock of $10 000, has been incorporated by Wm. S. Caywood, Raymond Voght and Louis Sterns, all of this city.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; John Watson 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

PEONY sales are reported heavy this fall.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—The Vallance Nurseries report an unprecedented demand for fruit trees and roses, with orders for other stock also greater than in any previous year.

THE United States department of agriculture, in Farmers' Bulletin 1080, presents much interesting information on the subject of "Preparation of Barreled Apples for Market," including harvesting, grading and packing, packing houses and hauling.

Walnuts Under Trade Mark.

Do not be surprised if in the near future you see full page advertisements appealing to the public to use "X, Y. Z.'s Walnuts known by the trade mark, accept no substitutes", for a $10,000 prize has been offered to the one who invents a machine for branding the shell of each English walnut in a yearly crop that every year benefits business to the amount of $10,000,000. Devices submitted will be tested by a committee from the Walnut Growers' Association. At present, the system for marking the sack with the association label is unsatisfactory.

California Big Trees Oldest Living Things

Authorities who have examined the big trees of California declare that they have grown more than 4,000 years. They were growing when the pryamids of Egypt were built; they were old trees when Rome was founded and had been growing for centuries when Columbus set out on the voyage that proved so important. Some of the ruins of Greece and Assyria, of course, antedate these trees, but no growing things. If man's greed would spare these trees they would doubtless live for hundreds of years to come, for the ordinary forest fire has no effect upon them. They are, however, wanted for timber.—Indianapolis News.

Fruit Crop Estimates.

Apples.—The commercial apple crop for the United States is now estimated at 23,177,000 barrels, or 105,000 barrels increase over the September estimate and, compared with a production of 24,724,000 barrels in 1918, according to the October report as issued by the bureau of crop estimates through its fruit crop specialists. Changes have occurred in the Yakima valley, which has decreased about 1,500 cars from the September estimate, and in southern Idaho, which has decreased about 500 cars, due in both cases principally to late infestation of codling moth. Colorado has also decreased about 10 per cent and quality is extremely poor, particularly in the Grand valley. On the other hand, California and Oregon have increased over earlier estimates. There has been an increase in the barreled apple crop in the Hudson valley and parts of New England. Arkansas is harvesting a bumper crop of fine fruit under extremely unfavorable conditions, there being a very serious car shortage which threatens to keep much of the fruit from market.

Pears.—The October estimate of the commercial pear crop indicates an increase of about 175,000 bushels over the September 1 estimate. The crop in California remains the same as last month, but the crops in Illinois and New York have shown an increase of about 20 per cent. Delaware, on the other hand, has declined about 10 points. The crop of Bartletts in most of the important Bartlett producing sections turned out to be nearly a full crop. Kiefers are very short, particularly in Delaware, New Jersey, Michigan, Illinois and the upper Hudson valley.

Arnold Arboretum Plants Stolen.

The theft of some of the rarest plants in the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, Mass., was discovered October 1. These plants, all imported specimens, were removed from the Azalea path, on the side of Bussy hill, and included some of the most highly prized exhibits in the arboretum. These plants, many of which were brought from China by Prof. E. E. Wilson, the assistant director and plant scout of the arboretum, are the only ones in this country and would be hard to duplicate. All are leas, one of which bloomed for the first time this season. In one case there were two plants, the only specimens in the United States. The vandal took one and left the other.

The arboretum authorities have offered a reward of $200 for information that will lead to the apprehension of the vandal, but they are particularly anxious to recover the stolen plants, as they cannot be duplicated without great labor and expense.

Nursery Stocks in Finland.

The only important fruit tree in Finland is the apple, of which 150,000 to 200,000 trees are used annually, according to Consul Parker W. Buhrman at Helsingfors. Only a few thousand grafts are imported, however, and these, without exception, have come from Germany or Sweden. Domestic production has proved more satisfactorily on account of the difficulty of getting original stock that is hardy enough for Finland's rigorous climate. The nurserymen suggest the possibility of the importation of small experimental lots of hardy trees from the colder sections of the United States, as such trees will probably be better adapted to the climate of Finland. Greenhouse plants and ornamental trees are imported in considerable quantity.

Lifting and Storing Dahlia Roots.

After the plants are cut down by frost in the autumn, it is customary to allow them to stand for a week or two, on the theory that the roots may thereby perfect their ripening for the winter and that they are better off in the ground than they would be in any cellar. However, if there is much tendency to throw suckers or new shoots, it is probably better to dig the roots at once, as the new shoots are likely to weaken the roots by drawing away more than they give back. And one must remember that it is from the crown or stembase, rather than from the roots, that the shoots for next year are to come, and that this crown might be damaged by a freeze that would not injure the lower-lying roots themselves. —American Dahlia Society Bulletin.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—In a will filled in probate court, September 29, the florist business of Miss Mattie S. Newman, who had been in business in this city for 28 years at 3720 Olive street, and who died recently at her summer home in Colorado, is bequeathed to Miss Julia A. Armstrong, friend and business associate.

MANURE

It is direct heat dried and sterilized, weed seeds, grass seeds, fungus and disease germs destroyed in a direct heat rotary drying process that does not change or destroy any of the valuable elements in crude manure.

Air dried manures cannot be sterilized and usually carry excess moisture that actually makes them cost more per ton than WIZARD BRAND even at the same or a lower price.

Look for the WIZARD BRAND Trade Mark tagged or printed on every bag. If it is not there you are not getting WIZARD BRAND protection for your crop and pocket book.

Your dealer can get WIZARD BRAND for you if you insist or we will quote with freight rate on any quantity from a bag to a carload promptly.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Dahlias.

Before the dahlias were through blooming they should have been carefully named and a label properly inscribed fastened to each plant that it is desired to save. As soon as the plants are killed by the frost they should be cut down and the tubers dug. Leave about six or eight inches of stem and firmly attach the label to this in such a manner that it cannot become loosened and lost. A good, dry cellar, either with a cement or earthen bottom, will keep them nicely through the winter, but it should be frost proof and not too near a boiler or heater. The tubers can be placed closely together and then covered with soil and they will come through the winter and the tubers will be nice and plump in the spring. They should be occasionally examined to see that they are not getting too dry or shriveling. If this happens cover the soil with papers and then sprinkle the paper and the soil will absorb the moisture.

Gladiolus.

As soon as the frost has killed down the foliage the gladiolus bulbs should be lifted and dried off. Keeping the varieties separate, the bulbs, with the tops attached, should be laid out in layers either on a light, dry shed floor or on boards in the open air where they can be protected at night during frosty weather. A set of boards or frame shutters spread along on the south side of a building make a very fine place to dry them off and fully ripen the bulbs. Have plenty of covering handy that can be thrown over them on cold nights. When thoroughly ripened the bulbs can be broken from the tops and packed away. Look the bulbs over carefully for any diseased spots and if any having these are found keep them separate from the sound ones, for it is the prevailing opinion that the disease may be communicated to a sound bulb by coming in contact with a diseased one. Of the finer varieties and those which it is desired to increase, save all the small corms, and these can be planted to grow on in succeeding years to make flowering bulbs. There are so many new and meritorious varieties now being placed upon the market that the grower who has a market for gladioli should make it a point to use these, for the advance has been very rapid and many of the new ones are far ahead of the older varieties. This flower has forged rapidly ahead in the last few years as a cut flower, and with the improvement now going on is bound to retain its popularity.

After Chrysanthemums.

The early chrysanthemums are now through flowering and the space that they have occupied should be made of use by a growing crop. The soil in which they have been grown should be removed. It is very seldom that a good crop of any flower can be grown in the soil that has produced chrysanthemums. While it looks to be all right and often has much manure in it that the chrysanthemums have not taken up, yet our experience has been that the soil will not grow a succeeding crop. It is better to throw it out in a pile where it can be subjected to the sweetening process of nature. The stock plants of the chrysanthemums can be selected and blocked up closely together and the surplus stock sold, and the space made ready for a following crop. Many growers frequently ask what can be grown to follow chrysanthemums. It depends greatly upon what the trade demands. Where the early frosts are not severe, the single violets are left in the field and planted in the beds, but in the northern section of the country the weather is often too severe, the plants being badly frozen and will not recover until mid-winter. Plant growers will require the space for the growing plants and the lilies where planted early can be moved into the benches. Sweet peas make a good crop in these beds for spring blooming. If the seed is planted in pots in October and then transplanted to the beds early they can be bloomed in March. There are a number of annuals that can be profitably grown, such as bachelor's buttons, and stocks, or early blooming herbaceous plants like Canterbury bells, and Coreopsis lanceolata, which will give an attractive assortment of flowers in early spring.

Mignonette.

As the weather grows cooler, the mignonette will begin to throw the long spikes that are so much desired by the best trade. The plants should be carefully kept tied or held erect, for if they get bent over, the stems will grow crooked and they are worthless. Growers adopt different methods for doing this. Some grow them in wire rings similar to the carnation supports, others cut short brush sticks which they set between the rows of plants and still others run wire lengthwise of the bench and tie strings across, making a square around each plant in which it will stand erect. Other wires and strings are added as the plant grows. Keep the plants growing very cool from now on; a house at about the temperature of a violet house, that is, from 36° to 40° at night, will produce the finest spikes of flowers. When the flower spikes begin to show, keep the plants well disbudded, allowing only the center flower to bloom and all the side shoots should be cut off. This will have to be done very early with the first bloom that sets, for as soon as it forms three shoots will immediately start to grow at the base of the flower; these should be removed as early as possible, that the entire strength of the stalk can go into the terminal flower.

Callas.

The calla bulbs that were planted in pots during August should now have a fine start and should be placed in the benches or pots where they are going to bloom. Make the soil good and rich—it can hardly have too much manure to get the best results, but do not use too fresh manure, have it partly rotted. If grown in pots and the bulbs are large give them a good size, nine or ten-inch is none too large, and pot firmly. After potting give the plants a good soaking and then withhold water until the plants have obtained a good foothold in the new soil, when they will require lots of water. Place them in a house where the temperature can be held at 60° at night if flowers during the winter are desired. Keep the plants tied up, that the bloom may have straight stems. When cutting leaves, be careful not to cut too low or the young flower that is enfolded in the leaf stem may be injured.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

NEW YORK.—Bronze, copper and orange pompon dahlias were used on the Delmonico tables recently every day for a fortnight, growers realizing 75 cents per dozen for the flowers.

Motorcycle in Flowers.

The motorcycle design shown in the accompanying illustration, arranged by Rosaia Brothers, well-known Seattle, Wash., florists, for the funeral of a motorcycle police officer of that city, is said to have been one of the most original ever seen there, and it is doubtful if a similar design has ever been made on the Pacific coast. While wholly the product of the florists' workroom, it was so cleverly constructed that it had the appearance of a real flower-covered machine. The spokes were made of film wire, the rims of bachelor buttons, and the tires, with even the tread shown, were represented by white and delicate pink asters. Gold dahlias were used for the transmission and gas tanks, while the seat and extra carrier was of Ophelia roses. Asparagus arranged with Ophelia roses formed the mud guards, and the handle bars were of asters. White asters also were used in the headlight, the center of which was of red and blue dahlias. The frame work of the design was of wire, wrapped with ribbon.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

INTEREST MAINTAINED TO THE CLOSE.

Beaming faces and expressions of the utmost pleasure and satisfaction were reflected in all the parting handshakes of the convention. Everybody was pleased, and more than satisfied with all the incidents of the meetings, the work accomplished, the great forward strides the association was shown to have made the past year, and the glowing outlook of the future.

The closing session was called to order at 2 p. m., October 15, after heartily enjoying the second bountiful luncheon of the Buffalo Florists' Club. Charles H. Grakelow was called to the platform, and delivered a most eulogistic rhapsody on individuals with vision and unselfish desires to help their fellow men. He said they often had a hard road to travel, met with much discouragement, and often stopped and wondered to themselves, "Is it worth while—am I appreciated?" and then said, "I will not give up," and started anew, with fresh vigor, which finally won recognition, and the glorious, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Then turning to Secretary Pochelon, who was sitting directly back of him, and who had not the slightest knowledge of what was coming, he, on behalf of the association, presented him with a chest full of beautiful silver table ware, which he stated was a concrete expression of the feelings of the members toward him; a remembrance which both he and Mrs. Pochelon would enjoy, and for which he wished them both a long life, and that he would occupy his present position for many years to come, for God knows we need him. There was a great outburst of continuous applause, all standing. Mr. Pochelon was much embarrassed, but managed to reply in his characteristic manner. He said he would not sell his experience, and all he had learned from his participation in the work for any amount of money. He had always worked freely, heartily and gladly, as it was a great pleasure to be associated with such worthy assistants as the board of directors.

Telegrams were here read from a number of mayors of the various cities who had received flowers; also telegrams and letters from members not able to be present. One from Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo., stated: "More love is the need of all mankind."

In the question of delinquent bills the secretary asked for the power to pay all delinquent bills immediately on presentation, charge the offending member full price, and take the discount for the benefit of the organization. This was discussed, but no action taken.

Reciprocity between members was urged by a number, who showed that good results always followed. John C. Harper, of the A. W. Smith Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., explained a card system which took care of this feature. This firm had sent out 1001 orders the past year, averaging $7.70, and filled 906 commissions from outside members, the average value of which was $6.94, which proved the truth of Irwin Bertermann's contention that full price was received for nearly all orders, as the volume of out and in business so nearly balanced.

J. H. Tuttle, of the Lafayette National bank was here introduced. This institution had just been opened in a beautiful new building they had built for themselves. On the opening day, October 14, they had received great quantities of baskets and bouquets from well wishers, which great profusion of flowers had attracted large crowds who talked flowers all day, and incidentally, many new accounts were opened, so that he felt sure that he could say that flowers had great advertising value. One deposit, by County Treasurer S. A. Anderson, of $50,000, was well worth mentioning. There were, by actual count, 105 baskets, valued at not less than $2,000.

Secretary Pochelon announced that F. T. D. monies collected during September amounted to $6,700.

Vase baskets filled with very fine blooms of the new roses, Frank Dunlop, Madame Butterfly, and a vase of Cornelia, had been much admired during the meeting. Earl Mann of the E. G. Hill Co. spoke of a period of new roses, and particularly, Madame Butterfly, which he said was one of their best. George M. Geraghty, with John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., said the rose spoke for itself. Mr. Dunlop at last had been rewarded after many trials with grand results in this variety.

Sunday and early hour closing brought out a number of experiences. That it could be done without any loss of business was demonstrated in the case of Miss Getz, Cleveland, O., who adopted Sunday closing from the first, and also closed at 6 p. m. week days, had lived to see many coming over to this practice, and for the rest, she was giving them a run for their money. President-Elect Breitmeyer said the way to close, was to close, and not stay open because the other fellow did, and he will soon follow. C. H. Brown, New York, did not approve of force, as the best way was education and example.

Shorter hours were also advocated by Mr. Breitmeyer, so as to make the business inviting to young men, who were sadly needed for the increasing business to succeed the many whose hair now bore the silver threads.

Profit sharing was an interesting topic. Herman Knoble, Cleveland, O., stated that his firm now allowed five out of their force of 17 men, a 10 per cent share in the profits, which had given them bonuses of from $150 to $250 each.

Max Schling, New York, stated that nothing should be promised in writing, neither should it be called bonus, as a discharged employe could sue for any portion claimed to be due. He called it a "gratification" to be given to the men who proved competent and deserving.

In closing the session, Mr. Breitmeyer stated all these reforms should begin with each individual. They had tried to make it pleasant in every way possible for their employes, and in consequence, had a waiting list of applicants. Everything was in the conduct of things. He then called for adjournment, "So that there should be some matters left over for the meeting next year."

NOTES.

What a real, live wire is the mayor of Tarrytown, N. Y., being on hand to verify the story which was received from the telegraph company of his city, stating flowers could not be delivered because F. R. Pierson was attending a convention in a western city. When called to his feet at the luncheon, when the message was received, he made a splendid optimistic address.

The hospitality of the Buffalo florists was almost beyond bounds to the visiting brethren. It was so generous. Their many courtesies, together with the two fine luncheons, were the occasion for three hearty cheers, proposed by Charles H. Grakelow, at the close of the second luncheon.

As publicity agent, Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson did her part wonderfully well, getting columns of matter, some of them editorial, in reference to the convention, also many illustrations. Her talks to the convention on publicity, were to the point, and full of valuable information.

Members, in telegraphing, should not specify quantities of any stock desired but simply "money's worth," as prices vary so in different parts of the country, due in part, to more or less expensive overhead charges in carrying on the business, and stock scarcity.

The value of home originated orders was clearly demonstrated by one member whose telegraph business last year amounted to over $3,500. The average of his outgoing orders was over $12 each, while those he received did not amount to much over $5 each.

Charles H. Grakelow's presentation speech to Secretary Pochelon was most eulogistic, but so skillfully worded that the secretary, until the box of silver appeared, had no idea that he was to be the recipient. It was one of Charly's best efforts.

President W. F. Gude handled the gavel with his usual vigor, and was most resourceful in all matters that began to drag in the least. He kept things constantly on the go, there not being a dull moment from start to finish.

The large bill board signs, "Say It With Flowers," that were set up in the meeting room, were much admired. The fact that the local florists ordered 20, to go up at once, shows how they appreciated them.

A hint was thrown out by Secretary Pochelon that next year the practical demonstration of the difference between good and bad methods in filling F. T. D. orders would be a feature of the meeting.

Members who objected to filling orders for florists, who were not members, were told by Secretary Pochelon to always treat outsiders the best they knew how, and in that way get them to join.

Halloween.

The "spooky holiday," October 31, while not by any means a big business bringer, is well worth featuring, and can be made quite attractive from a decorative point of view. All dealers in fancy goods, costumes, etc., make a great feature of Halloween, as do all small stationers, who offer all kinds of crepe paper decorations, in which black cats, witches and other weird forms are represented. Jacko'lanterns are a favorite offering.

The conventional decoration for the flower shop window is corn stalks, with the ears half husked, as a background. An iron pot on a tripod, over an electically lighted, red fagot fire, is often used to carry out the witch idea. Pumpkins, with faces cut, and lighted with concealed electric globes, are popular. A box or two of flowers, and some tied up as if ready for delivery, with a decoration suitable for the day, is old fashioned, but it is conventional and if well done, is sure to attract attention to the shop, which is an important point gained.

Halloween is a great masquerading party, or social gathering night, when there are games such as bobbing for apples and other like amusements and dancing. At times, decorations for these events are quite profuse, but generally in which the cornstalk and pumpkin jacko'lantern play quite a part.

Frequently the feature will be a dinner which is decorated with pumpkin baskets, filled with orange colored flowers, or large pumpkins hollowed out and filled. Corsages of Ward roses are furnished as favors for the ladies, or they may be of calendulas. The room is to have an atmosphere of witchery, and made as weird as possible with the various stock articles placed among the plants, cornstalks, pumpkins, lanterns, etc.

Small vase baskets, filled with flowers, and tied at the handle with narrow crepe paper ribbon rosettes or bows, which are easily made from larger sheets of paper, should be good sellers. Small black paper cats will be an addition. There are so many stock articles manufactured and for sale at Halloween that can be used and worked in with almost any combination of flowers to fit them for the day, that quite a display can be arranged at a comparatively small outlay.

Halloween is just a frolic when most everything goes, and the florist should be alive to get his share of whatever there is going. Large single specimen chrysanthemums, tied with black paper cats, will be all right to carry or to wear.

The window should be decorated several days before, so as to get the advertising effect, and taken down the next day.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

In many parts of the country, Jack Frost has finished the dahlias, the fall cosmos and other outside flowers. This shortens the assortment very materially, and puts an added value to the roses, carnations, calendulas, sweet peas and, in fact, all the indoor stock. The past dahlia season will go on record as one of the best as regards quality of flowers. There was a very good demand for all choice varieties at satisfactory prices. Cosmos has also been very fine, particularly the double varieties. Much of this stock is cut too soon; it should be allowed to develop to several well open flowers to a spray before cutting.

Chrysanthemums will now be the factor for the next month. They should be kept to the front and featured in every possible way. They handle and keep much better when a number of the bottom leaves are removed, as these soon foul in the jars and make the water offensive even over night. Two or three drops of formaldehyde in each jar, will keep the water sweet and prevent fermentation for several days.

The addition of autumn leaves adds greatly to the vases of chrysanthemums, also to the small vase baskets of the pompon sorts, of which, a number together, arranged in a window display, with a price card, are quite sure to start something worth while.

An assortment of corsages, such as are worn at teas and other social events, made of suitable flowers, will prove an interesting window feature.

The wedding gifts of the florist's stock should be kept to the front, particularly in spring and fall when the majority of these important affairs take place. All other merchants, particularly jewelers, feature articles of which they keep a large assortment, and advertise extensively. A line of jardinieres, inside window boxes and plant stands, fern dishes and other receptacles, filled with choice plants, also an assortment of flower bowls, vases and other flower holding receptacles, all of which should be in every up-to-date flower shop, will be found very acceptable and well worth featuring in every way for these events.

Plan table decorations with chrysanthemums, the tall center vase carrying the flowers above the line of vision with low rose bowls at either end of a long table. Extra large flowers, without stems, placed on highly colored sprays of Autumn leaves, lying flat on the table, will make a unique display. Croton sprays arrange splendidly with chrysanthemums, the colors blending in so harmoniously.

Display a good line of fern dishes, filled and unfilled. The little table fernery is regarded as a nuisance by many florists, but the man who has a good list of these to keep up, is almost certain to get a lot of other business. Fern pans, brought on at the greenhouses, of a size that can be transfered to the table fernery as a whole, are a great help on busy days, and are generally more satisfactory in the house.

Where there are a great number of bouquets to be handled and arranged at a tea, some florists have fohnd wires, that hook into the the picture moulding, are able to support quite a number against wall spaces that could not be made available in any other way.

Tag and card envelopes, on which is printed, "This envelope contains card to go with bunch of,—or basket of. stating the kind of flowers for, then write recipient's name and address, is the business way of attaching the card to all kinds of floral work. Some still punch a hole in the card, and attach with a piece of wire, while others cut with a knife or poke a hole with a lead-pencil and tie on with string, tape or narrow ribbon. The card should never be multilated in this way, but kept clean inside the envelope. The inscription outside, stating the character and flowers used in the order, is a great help when the various gifts, often from 50 to 150 or more, have to be acknowledged. Fancy pins should attach the card envelopes to all ribbons of baskets or bouquets.

Blossom Floral Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Richard I. Blossom and Ruth Flick Blossom have opened a handsome new flower store under the name of the Blossom Floral Co. at 110 West Wayne street, Fort Wayne, Ind., an excellent location in the heart of the city. The interior is most artistic, the color scheme being French gray with ivory panelling on the side walls and inserts of French mirrored doors. A handsome refrigerator is also decorated in ivory, while at the rear is a large pergola covered with Mexican ivy. A bird fount here is another pleasing feature. The spacious show window, 25 feet in length, has a base of green tile.

Both members of the new firm have had wide experience in the florist business, Mr. Blossom, as a decorator, while Mrs. Blossom is well known to the trade, having been a member of the Flick Floral Co. of Fort Wayne, for 10 years, and for some time with John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., devoting in all 15 years to her profession. The firm is a member of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

HELENA, MONT.—An interesting feature of a motion picture film being shown in this state is the extensive exhibit of the State Nursery & Seed Co. of this city at the state fair. Views are shown of the entire establishment covering many acres of ground, as well as the carnation houses and fields of asters.

ORCHID NOTES.

Seasonable Varieties.

It may be noticed that during the month of August and the early part of September this year how conspicuous cattleya flowers were by their absence in the leading florist stores. The same thing happens every season, yet it is safe to predict that in about another decade this failure to have cattleya blooms at this time will be a thing of the past, for there are quite a number of artificially raised or home-grown hybrids that come into flower at what is known as the "off season," or that period of time between the flowering of the different species that are so well known, namely, Cattleya labiata, C. Trianæ, C. Mossiæ and C. gigas, with a few other species that flower generally in their own respective seasons with the above varieties mentioned. At the present time, owing to the unusual conditions brought about by the great war, there are many so-called sacrifice sales of seedling orchids. From these sales any enterprising and progressive florist who understands these plants can make no mistake in securing seedlings four to five years old, and by selecting certain crosses is sure of getting hold of varieties that will bloom in the off season, thus making a profitable investment. A little study along these lines is needed by many florists, for it is a fact the American orchid growers have for years followed the habit of trusting to the importation of natural supplies, rather than take on themselves the trouble of assisting nature by intercrossing the many different species that are so well known and which grow in their natural haunts hundreds of miles apart. When brought together on one place, it is a very easy matter to raise fine hybrids in quantity enough to produce flowers to bridge over all the so-called off seasons for cattleyas.

The coming winter season will be a kind of lottery for many orchid growers, owing to coal shortage, so it is advisable to harden up the plants as much as possible before winter sets in. This can be accomplished by keeping the houses dryer than usual and the ventilators open on all favorable occasions. On many places considerable crowding in will have to be resorted to, and it is none too soon to commence this operation, for it is better to leave certain houses empty for the winter than try to run the whole at a much reduced temperature than has ever been done before. To run a house of cattleyas below 55 degrees for any length of time will have ill effects on the general health of the plants in time. A certain well known orchid collector used to say he never found cattleyas growing in a wild state where the night temperature went below 63 degrees, so on the face of this 53 degrees is about as low as any grower can safely go without showing bad results under modern greenhouse culture.

Cattleya labiata is now about at its height, but care must be taken that the flowers do not remain wet too long after each watering. Leave a little top ventilation open all the time at this period of the year. No cattleya plant needs water more often than every fourth or fifth day. A safe way, when in doubt about the plants being ready for water, is to forget all about them till the next day. In the end, they will be all the better for such treatment, especially C. Trianæ, which must be well ripened before it will produce its full quota of flowers. When the bulbs take on a dark bronze color the grower may rest assured he is on the right track. If they are of a dark green and soft nature, they are growing under too much shade and the quicker this is gotten off the better for their welfare.

Any Laelia anceps, L. Goldiana, L. autumnalis or L. albida that have been hanging up on the roof of the house will be now sending out their spikes, and before they become too long should be lifted down on to a bench. Here they will develop better and can have all the water they require to mature the spikes to their full capacity. It is owing to lack of water at this stage that the flowers of these laelias often get covered with a sticky substance which prevents the blooms from expanding properly.

Oncidium varicosum will soon be bursting its buds, and must be watered liberally. Miltonia candida and M. Clowesii make useful spikes for cut flower purposes. It is always safe to give these an abundance of water, and to any orchid until the flowers mature; then gradually curtail the supply for a time till active growth commences again. Vanda coerulæ, the noted blue orchid, is coming in now, and will continue to flower through the winter months, but it is advisable not to keep this in a house with close atmosphere, for if any orchid enjoys a circulation of air around it this does, and it must have it or it quickly becomes infested with black spot; that is soon its ruin. Calanthe Veitchi is now sending up spikes, but usually the leaves commence to die down at the same time, which makes them unsightly objects to anyone who does not know their nature; yet they deserve to be grown for Christmas use. The bright and useful Dendrobium phalænopsis will soon be at its height, but it is seldom seen to perfection, yet when grown rightly it is by far the finest dendrobium for florist work. The one weakness it has is in the closing up of the flowers that open first on each spike; if a spike has 12 buds, it rarely developes them all to open at once, but when it does few orchids are finer and more useful. It is the overabundance of moisture in the house that causes the lower flowers on each spike to become sleepy when given abundance of water at the root from the time the spikes form until the flowers all develop. Keep plenty of air circulating around the plants and grow in a warm, sunny house with a night temperature of 60 degrees. They will prove to be one of the easiest and perhaps the most profitable orchids to grow, considering the amount of bench space they take up, and they are certainly less trouble to attend to.

Cypripedium insigne and C. Leeanum are still the stand-bys, but somehow these are so handicapped by the gaudy, brilliant colors of all the above species that the demand for them is limited, but the lasting qualities make up for anything deficient in this respect.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Packing and Shipping.

The florists' shops are now displaying the earliest varieties of chrysanthemums which may be called the forerunners of the season, and by the time these notes get into print, the greenhouse benches will be in all their glory with a fine array of blooms of every shade of color, as well as the many different forms and sizes. The very earliest varieties are only of average size, when compared with the midseason or exhibition varieties, and come under a class considered strictly for commercial purposes, but by the time the season has advanced to the last week of October, a number of the larger blooms will be ready for cutting, and it is then that the question is brought home to every grower: How best to pack and ship these large blooms, and be reasonably sure of them arriving at their destination in good condition. Chrysanthemum blooms are about the most cumbersome flowers that florists have to pack and ship, and unless the work is done well, there is sure to be considerable damage to the shipment. An hour or two in any of the large cut-flower markets of the country, watching the different shipments of chrysanthemums arrive, and observing the various methods used in the packing and the condition in which the blooms are received, is worth while to any grower. He will be soon convinced that the care of the flowers does not end with the growing of it, but that a great deal of the success of the crop depends on how the blooms are handled after being cut. In most cases, the man who takes the trouble to grow high grade blooms, is very particular in the cutting and packing of them, and his stock generally brings satisfactory prices, but on the other hand, every day on the market, there can be seen shipments of good stock that have suffered from careless packing.

The cost of the packing cases or boxes is a big item and must be considered by every grower, and every saving possible that can be made should be taken advantage of. But it is a poor policy to try and save in the direction where it will be detrimental to the product. The writer has seen boxes of flowers shipped to the market, with one row of chrysanthemums on the bottom covered over with a sheet of paper and rolls of smilax placed on top to fill up the box, with the result that on arrival, several of the chrysanthemums were badly bruised so that their value was reduced more than enough to pay for a separate package for the smilax. It is all right to put in some such material securely fastened, so that it cannot shift about while in transit, but the paper lining of the box should be the only thing that lies on the blooms. The the stems of the chrysanthemums, as smilax at the center of the box over bulky nature of chrysanthemum blooms requires that a large box be used for shipping, but it should not be any larger than what is absolutely necessary, whether it be made of wood or the corrugated boxes that are now used in such large numbers. There is a considerable difference in the size of boxes required for exhibition blooms and those for commercial purposes; the former having been allowed to develop to their fullest extent, and then held in water, are much more massive and heavier than the commercial blooms, consequently they require a larger and stronger box, especially when the shipment has to travel a long distance, but in the writer's experience, in packing and shipping large blooms of chrysanthemums, both for commercial and exhibition purposes, it has been found that it is best to keep the size of the box down to dimensions that is reasonably safe to carry the blooms without overcrowding, and to use two boxes rather than one of extremely large proportions.

For packing and shipping the very large or exhibition blooms a box five feet long, two feet wide and 12 inches deep, made of some durable wood, ⅛-inch sides, top and bottom, ⅜-inch ends, with a thin support cleat at the center, has been proved to be plenty large enough and easily handled. This box will hold one layer of three to four dozen of the largest blooms, which have to be packed with pillows under the neck of the blooms. For the smaller or commercial flowers, a smaller size can be used, and for this purpose the corrugated boxes are best adapted, especially for shipping distances of 200 miles or less. For longer distances, the wooden boxes are preferable.

The first thing in order, when packing, is to line the boxes with paper, according to the weather conditions. In the early part of the chrysanthemum season, four to six sheets of newspaper and two sheets of tissue is plenty of lining, but later in the season, when the weather gets colder, more lining will have to be used. However, it is always best to be guided by weather conditions and be on the safe side. The next thing to do is to make some pillows or rolls, to lay under the necks of the blooms. The best thing we have found for this purpose is excelsior, wrapped with tissue paper. These pillows are most particularly needed for the large exhibition blooms. The close, compact commercial blooms do not need them as much, but they, also, should have a pillow on the bottom of the box for the first layer of blooms. After this work has been done, a wooden cleat should be provided for fastening the stems at the center of the box.

Start at one end of the box with a row of blooms, laying them so that the necks of the stems rest on the pillow. Continue with another row until four rows have been placed at one end of the box, then start at the other end in the same manner, with the stems running toward the center of the box. Continue this from both ends until the box is filled with rows of blooms of one layer, with the stems toward the center. Then dampen some sheets of newspaper and lay over the ends of the stems at the center of the box. Place some dry paper over this and securely fasten down with the wooden cleat.

Be sure the cover of the box is securely fastened at the ends and well corded in the center. Some growers use screws in the place of nails for fastening the box cover on, which is a good plan, because when being taken off, it is not so likely to be ripped to pieces.

Cutting and preparing the blooms before packing is very important. These should be cut when ready and placed in water in a cool, partially dark place, where a temperature of about 45-50 degrees can be maintained, and allowed to stand at least 12 hours before packing.

CARE OF BLOOMS ON THE BENCHES.

The care of the blooms on the benches is a very important part of the finishing up work of the chrysanthemum crop.

The plants are now in two or three different stages of maturity, the earliest varieties being cut out, or nearly so; the second earliest in full bloom, the midseason varieties partially developed, and the late varieties in the bud stage. The early varieties being cut out, the only work needed on them is taking care of the stock plants. The fully developed blooms need to be kept a little on the dry side, and drier conditions maintained about the house; also, care should be taken to guard against a high temperature and draughts through the open ventilators or doors. Do not allow the blooms to remain on the plants longer than they are ready for sale. It is better to cut them a little under maturity than over developed. The midseason and late varieties should still receive close attention as to their general routine requirements, the most particular of these being careful attention to the temperature, watering and airing of the houses. While the weather continues good, give plenty of ventilation to insure fine petalage and good keeping qualities in the blooms.

SHIPPING THE PLANTS IN POTS.

This is a work by itself which must be governed to a great extent according to the size and shape of each plant. Plants that are grown and trained out to wires, will need to be packed into individual cases by themselves. The first thing to do is to see that the pots are washed clean. Then take some stout cane stakes, using one or two to make the center stem secure so that the plant does not sway about. Then fasten others throughout the plant, letting them extend about the flowers of the plant so that the covering can be fastened to them to prevent it lying on the flowers. Take some fine tissue paper, crumple it up and place between the blooms all over the plant to prevent them swaying about while in transit. After this, cover the plant with paper according to weather condition, fastening at the stakes that extend above the plant and at the pot, and as an outside protection cover the whole with fine burlap. The package is then ready to be set in stout boxes with handles. These boxes should be a little larger than the pots, so that plenty of excelsior can be worked around the pot to guard against it getting broken. The plants that have been grown more naturally, can be drawn in closer than those trained out to wires, otherwise the same method of operation will answer for the packing of them. The principal rules to observe are to make the plant secure, be sure the covering does not rest on the blooms, do not make the package any larger or heavier than is necessary, and be sure the plants are not dry at the roots when packed. Plant Quarantine Permit Applications.

We are in receipt of the following, dated October 11, 1919, from Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, regarding applications for special import permits under Plant Quarantine No. 37:

"I am sending you, for the information of your readers, a revised copy of the form of application for special permit to import new varieties or necessary propagating stock as provided for in regulation 14 of the rules and regulations under Quarantine No. 37. The board appreciates the fact that this is a rather formidable looking document, and that it will doubtless be criticized as placing an unnecessary burden on importers and involving excessive red tape. That such criticism will be considered valid from the viewpoint of the ordinary propagator or plant lover is fully recognized, and the board is very regretful that circumstances have seemed to necessitate the surrounding of these importations with all the safeguards which this application and the permit involve. Unfortunately, however, a small element of the plant importers themselves have made these precautions and safeguards necessary. The board regrets to announce that it has found that some few of the importers at least, have looked upon this department as fair game, and have undoubtedly gone forward with the deliberate intention of violating both the letter and spirit of the regulations. The great body of American nurserymen, florists and horticulturists will undoubtedly meet the conditions of the quarantine fairly and honestly, and if the board had to deal with such persons only, it could undoubtedly dispense with the bonding and many of the other restrictions referred to. If this course were possible, it would vastly simplify the work of the board, and make it much more agreeable. It is hoped, therefore, that all those interested in the importation of plants and the development of horticulture in America will strain a point and give the board this much credit.

"As an illustration of what the board meets in this work, there are quoted below the assurances which the board received from a certain prominent importing florist. These assurances followed some considerable correspondence in which the conditions of importations under regulation 14 had been fully explained. The assurances are as follows quoted verbatim:

" 'We assure you that these bulbs are to be used exclusively for the purpose of propagation.

" 'We assure you that they will be that they will be propagated by us or propagated by us or by a grower under contract for us absolutely.

" 'As regards the exact location where the bulbs will be grown this is something that we cannot yet announce. It may be in Long Island; it may be in Virginia; it may be in New Jersey.

" 'We are casting about for a suitable place and we assure you that your department will be promptly and duly advised just as soon as exact location where the bulbs will be grown shall be determined upon.'

"On the arrival of the shipment, which involved some 50 cases, and totalled 25,000 bulbs, and its inspection and liberation in New York, the bulbs were distributed, quoting from the report subsequently made to the board by the importer, to 'perhaps a hundred different people in various parts of the country.' This distribution was made on a purely commercial basis to all sorts of persons with whom he had contracted to supply these bulbs. These contracts for commercial sale had been discussed by letter with this importer, and that he fully understood the situation is indicated by the paragraphs from his letter quoted above.

"It should be noted, that the restrictions which have been found necessary to safeguard the entry, under regulation 14, and under special permits, of new varieties and necessary propagating stock have not deterred the trades involved from making liberal use of the opportunities for importation provided by this regulation. Nearly 100 applications have been received for these special permits, and most of these applications have been granted, many of them for quantities of a single variety of 50,000 or more; in two instances, 250,000. Such special permits under regulation 14 have been issued, to date, for over 1,500,000 bulbs and other plants. All these requests are passed upon by the experts of the bureau of plant industry of the department and, as noted, most of them have been approved, including even the large quantities indicated. In the case of these larger importations, the evidence seemed to be adequate to warrant introductions on such a large scale for the purpose of establishing reproduction plantings adequate to meet American needs. Nevertheless, the importation of plants running into these large quantities of a single kind, involves the necessity on the part of the board to keep under certain supervision, and to safeguard such importations, to see that the bulbs and plants thus imported, are used for the purpose specified and do not get at once, or within a short time, into ordinary commercial channels.

"The board regrets very much that it has been necessary to make so many changes and announcements in regard to these special permits. It must in fairness, however, be recognized, that this whole field is a new and untried one, and that such changes must be made frequently at the outset, as our information grows, and new needs develop. Ultimately, the methods will become fixed and standardized and undoubtedly more easily workable. The object of the board will be to try to keep the requirements as plain and simple as possible, and yet extend the protection which will be demanded, not only in the interest of the efficient administration of the quarantine, but also in the interest of the individuals who are earnestly going forward to develop production in the United States of plants which have hitherto been largely imported.

"The explanation of the provisions for the entry of new varieties and propagating stock under Quarantine No. 37 has been issued as Circular Letter 105, revised July 28, 1919. Paragraph 4 in this circular letter reads as follows:

" 'This application points out the condition, that if the applicant has requested the importation of larger quantities of stock than can be housed and cared for in the inspection houses of the department of agriculture, he will be required to provide local storage in Washington for such material during the period of detention for examination and, if necessary, provide also for the cost of disinfection. Small shipments, which can be easily handled, will be repacked without charge, and the original containers will be employed for such repacking wherever possible, but the importer will be required to meet the cost of such repacking, and of new containers, when such are necessary.'

"It was anticipated that importations under regulation 14, being essentially for introduction purposes, would be for the most part of small bulk, and that the department could, therefore, handle most of them without much, if any, additional cost to the importer. When it became evident that advantage would be taken of regulation 14 to bring in shipments of great size, running perhaps into carload shipments, it became necessary for the department to require the importer to meet all necessary costs. The board has in mind a plan which it would like to put into operation with importers, which will be a distinct aid to those whose importations are of considerable bulk, namely, to undertake to arrange with some local transfer and storage company to act as the agent of the importer, and to remove these importations from the custom house, Georgetown, to suitable quarters for their inspection and, where necessary, disinfection, and, after inspection, to attend to the shipment of the goods to destination. The board can probably provide an expert horticulturist to supervise the work, but it would prefer to have the trades involved furnish their own agent, who would remain temporarily or permanently in Washington for this purpose. In the case of very large importations by a single person or firm, it may be desirable for such person or firm to provide his or their own agent to supervise such handling and safeguarding of the importation, pending its inspection, certification, and bonding.

"The form of the bond to be required; will be issued in a few days. It will be based on the very simple bonding system which has been long used by the customs official in relation to imported goods shipped in bond or held in bond for any purpose. While the legal phraseology may seem formidable, the system is simple enough, and involves no risk, and comparatively little expense to a man who has no other intention than to comply with the conditions under which the importation is authorized."

[Revised Form 207 of the federal horticultural board, to be used in "application for special permit to import nursery stock and other plants and seeds," referred to above, in addition to the general conditions governing entry, specifies information required as to "new varieties" and "necessary propagating stock;" in the former, time and place of origination, and in the latter, reason must be shown for necessity of importation, the location where such material will be propagated, and the name of the actual grower. Copies of Revised Form 207 may be had upon application to the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C.—ED.]

NEW VARIETIES FOR PERSONAL USE.

Under the above heading, Dr. Marlatt writes as follows, October 7:

"In the explanation (HB-105) of Regulation 14 of the regulations as amended under Quarantine 37, it is stated that 'in exceptional cases the importation of novelties (i. e., new varieties) may be made for personal use, but not for sale.' This is intended to provide for the importation of such new varieties by directors of botanical gardens, collectors, and growers of special collections of plants of recognized standing, but was not intended to apply to importations which may be desired for personal use other than as indicated or for the adornment of private estates. In case such public gardens, collectors, or growers of special collections are not known to the experts of this department, they may be required to furnish evidence of their status.

Chairman of Board.

San Diego, Calif. Flower Show.

The thirteenth annual flower show of the San Diego Floral Society was largely attended and proved one of the best exhibitions ever staged by the organization, and as a feature of the county fair held at the same time, it added much to the interest of that event. Due to lack of space, however, the usual fine display of plants from Balboa park, was not as extensive as in former years. In the commercial section, Miss Sessions' display which included Quisqualis indica, achimines in two varieties, a fine Del Mar statice and new evergreen grapes was a creditable effort, The Beacon Hill Nursery was well represented with plants and shrubs, among the features being Ficus pandurata,, alocasia, philodendron and Lonicera nitida. H. E. Sies staged fine dahlias in many colors, most of them from seedlings of his propagation. The amateurs made splendid showings, dahlias and zinnias occupying a prominent place. Among the principal prize winners in this section were Miss Elizabeth Mould, Mrs. Percy Whitehead, the Misses Yawger, Mrs. John Doane, Allen B. Cook, F. J. Wright, W. P. Brothers, Mrs. C. F. Naylor, Mrs. Waite and Mrs. Sarah Hetzel.

National Publicity for Flowers.

"Oh, send your thanks by Peky." Or you might "Say It With Flowers, Stum, as the florists' association puts it." This is a sentence taken from a story in The Saturday Evening Post. (See page 130 issue of October 11.) Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., writes, October 18: "My Dear Mr. Young: Evidence that you are putting your campaign across looms up in two Philadelphia papers this A. M.—the North American and the Inquirer contained the enclosed references to 'Say It With Flowers.' I congratulate you." The clippings were as follows:

"Following the advice of a well-known ad, in the case of all seditionists, I. W. W's., Reds, radicals, refuse, Russian Bolshevists and roughnecks, we'd like to 'Say It With Flowers.' "

"If Myles Standish had only known about the 'Say It With Flowers' method, he need never have given a rival that chance to be invited to speak for himself."

It shows how our slogan, "Say It With Flowers," comes to mind at a right time. In how many other cases does it come to mind—daily, hourly, one might say? We do not know, nor need we care. We have, however, the complete satisfaction of knowing that throughout this vast country and Canada it, every minute, perhaps, flashes into the mind of someone, and with every flash is the prospect of a sale for some florist.

Considerably more than a million people—we might with truth say more than three millions—saw our splendid two column illustrated advertisement in the October 4 issue of Collier's Weekly. The large type used was made to read: "Say It With Flowers." It is the remembering that means so much. Those friendships you prize so highly—those courtesies you ought to acknowledge—those favors you intend to repay—all can be remembered more graciously and thoughtfully by the simple, timely gift of exquisite flowers. It is the tender thought—the sincere message—that makes flowers so appropriate. For 'the gift without the giver is bare'. But your gift of flowers is—you." The space occupied was 12 inches deep, 4½ inches wide. It was most appealing in character—just had to be read.

Similar advertisements with different illustrations and wording, and others in page form—many of them in four colors—are to be used in a number of weeklies and monthlies between now and the Christmas holiday season. Some of you can appreciate the heavy expense attaching to the procuration of all this publicity for our products, and the fact that we need funds with which to defray this expense. Never since the campaign began, have we needed funds more than now. We realize that we have just passed through our annual period of summer dullness, but we also realize that we have entered a period of good business, leaving behind a time when perhaps many in the trade might have felt a tug on the purse; therefore, we may very reasonably expect those who have not yet supported the campaign to do something for it now. There was only one reason for the beginning of it—the stimulation of sales of flowers. This has been accomplished in good measure, and continuance means a still greater measure. No matter where a florist is located, he has felt the benefit of this stimulation, and, beyond the possibility of doubt, will feel it still more as the campaign goes on.

If a florist is loyal to his business, would like to see it expand, and would have flowers considered as a necessity rather than a luxury in every home, it is his bounden duty to support this campaign which, more than anything else, is working toward these ideals. It is no Utopian dream. Experience has proved that we can accomplish our purpose. If you have not already subscribed, lose no time in sending in your subscription. Remember, you are giving nothing, you are investing with the prospect of sure returns on your investment.

GOOD DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

Business in this city and vicinity has been good, the demand accelerated considerably by weddings, receptions, bank openings an funeral orders, although the latter is not especially brisk, as compared with the influenza period last year. For which we are thankful. Stock has been of excellent quality, but there has been no oversupply. Sweet peas and violets are improving in quality daily. While chrysanthemums are arriving in good shape, with no surplus, yellow, white and a few lavender varieties have had a good sale.

F. T. D. ACTIVITIES.

The meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association has now passed into history as a most successful gathering. The local florists vied with each other in the arrangement of attractive windows and employed other means to impress the advantages of the service upon the public. The craft always had a hearty welcome for the delegates when they could find time to visit the various establishments, and it was good to have the opportunity to shake hands again with Philip Breitmeyer, H. G. Dillemuth, Edward Sceery, Irwin Bertermann, George Asmus and many other old friends, not forgetting Joseph Streit and wife, of Detroit, Mich., who were welcome visitors. Other visitors included Joseph A. Cannon, formerly of Montreal, Que.; E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. A. Manda, East Orange, N. J.; and M. Berg, of New York. BISON.

BUSINESS ABOVE NORMAL FOR SEASON.

The past week has been peculiar in more than one respect. The demand has been heavy, but at this writing, all the wholsale houses are supplied with good stock, including American Beauties, roses, dahlias, and chrysanthemums. Business has been good, in fact, better than usual at this season, but the supply is also heavier. We have also had a rainy week, which naturally hurt business to some extent. At present, American Beauties are in heavy supply, but during chrysanthemum season, there is not much demand for them, except on special occasions. Columbia, Russell and Premier are of excellent quality, but the supply exceeds the demand. Ophelia, Pink and White Killarney, Maryland and Sunburst drag and do not move very fast. Chrysanthemums are a big factor now, with enough to satisfy all needs in any size or color. Pompons are also coming in quantity, but mostly in the light colored varieties. Dahlias are in heavy supply, but at present are a drug on the market; the quality is fine, but it is true of them as of American Beauties—they stand no show against the chrysanthemums. Carnations are the only flower that cleans up without trouble, and the demand is far greater than the supply. Calendulas and sweet peas are coming in ,but are of inferior grade.

FLORIST CLUB'S INSPECTION TOUR.

October 14, was the day selected by the florists' and gardeners' club for its auto tour of the commercial greenhouses of this district. It rained all day, but in spite of the downpour, 63 members left E. C. Ludwig's store at 9 a. m. in 14 automobiles. The first stop was at the range of E. C. Ludwig, at Ludwig Station, Pa., where everything was found in the best of shape. Mr. Ludwig had anticipated the visit and had refreshments ready when the party arrived. They next visited the place of Alex Morrison, at Mars, Pa., and while Mr. Morrison was not there, his wife entertained the club royally. Mr. Morrison has a new unnamed geranium, which the members of the club admired greatly.

The next stop was at Crystal Farms, the big modern establishment of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., at Bakerstown, Pa. We fully believe that the Bakerstown plant is one of the best in the country. It was certainly a treat to see it. Everything from the plumosus house to the orchid range was looking fine, and just as spick and span as it is possible to have it. Luncheon was served in the men's dining hall.

From here the party went to the establishment of John Weiland, at Allison Park, Pa. Mr. Weiland is a carnation grower, but not being able to secure enough carnation plants, he has been forced to devote some of his houses to sweet peas. The fish pond is one of the sights at this place.

NOTES.

Ira C. Harper, of the A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co.; DeForest Ludwig, of the E. C. Ludwig Co.; E. W. Ludwig and J. W. Ludwig, of the Ludwig Floral Co., attended the F. T. D. convention at Buffalo.

FALL BUSINESS INCLINED TO DRAG.

Due to unsettled weather, fall trade has not opened up briskly as yet. There is a certain amount of funeral work, but counter demand is only fair. Outdoor stock is gradually going out since the recent frosts. The end has come for gladioli, gaillardias and late asters. Fine stock in dahlias is still arriving, however. Pansies are now being offered, but the call for them is weak. Chrysanthemums have begun to come in, Chrysolora being the best of the yellow varieties. Violets, good in quality for so early in the season, are improving daily. Carnations are overabundant, and consequently down in price.

NOTES.

Among those from this city who attended the Buffalo convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association were Edwin P. Wilson, George T. Boucher, George Kramer and William L. Keller.

Thomas Sullivan, of George B. Hart's commission house, was married, October 6, to Miss Barbara Bubb.

Edwin C. Hendig has removed the fixtures from the Rosery Flower Shop to his store in Oswego, N. Y.

The employes of George T. Boucher's store and greenhouses held a pig roast October 21.

H. E. Wilson is now cutting good Chrysolora chrysanthemums.

Dewey Lester is now with the Rochester Floral Co.

Horace J. Head is making a western trip.

Visitors: Morris Cohen, Milton Selinka and Stephen Green, New York. CHESTER.

The market is well supplied with stock of all kinds, and the larger part of the receipts are of a high quality with fair demand. Shipping, however, is brisk. Prices are reasonable. The daily receipts in roses are fairly large and generally of a high quality. The carnation supply is good. Red varieties, are not selling at all at this time, due, probably, to the competition of the red dahlias, which have been fairly plentiful during the past fortnight. This vicinity has escaped a killing frost up to this time, which has given the dahlias a long lease on life. The chrysanthemum cut is very large, and includes a full assortment of sizes in white, pink and yellow. Pompons are in the market, and are proving popular.

LILY of the valley is 20-25 cents per spray, wholesale, at New York, 20 cents at Chicago.

THE Long Island dahlia growers still have a wonderful showing of flowers, the late season being very favorable. Lilacs are reported in bloom at Glen Ellyn, Ill., October 21.

THE summer window boxes have made a grand showing in Chicago this year and, on account of the continued absence of frost, some of them still looked well October 15.

THE registration of cable addresses by the cable companies will cost $2.50 per annum after October 31, 1919. Your name will be dropped from the registers if this fee is not paid.

THE action of the New York Florists' Club at its meeting October 13, in voting to move to larger quarters, in a location better adapted to advance floriculture, is a move in the right direction.

Membership in S. A. F.

How often have we heard of men who said they did not join the Society of American Florists or a local florist club, because they did not have time to attend meetings, or seemingly, appeared not interested. This answer might go if it were an association not connected with a man's own occupation or profession, but when given by men as an excuse for not joining organizations for the betterment of their own business, it shows the highest type of slackerism. To allow a few men who have the same interest as their neighbor, to shoulder all responsibilities, surely, is not right, unless they have the backing of the many to encourage them. And then, to participate in the benefits that come afterwards, without indulging in the expense, now and then, is another point of slackerism and selfishness.

We passed through a period of this kind of duty and service, given by a few unselfish men at Washington, two years ago, who represented your S. A. F. then, and on another occasion, when a conference was held on the plant prohibition act, and many other things might be mentioned in order to show the importance of an organization. Yet, there are far too many who hold aloof from joining the various bodies, where so much good might be accomplished, and is being done.

The Society of American Florists should have the backing of every man in the profession for the way it gets behind every movement that tends to help the business generally. And the men who do not join, have still the benefits given by the society, and the knowledge that they are not supporting it. Does it pay to stay out? The old time sage asked: "If I am not for myself, who will be; but if I am only for myself, what am I?"

Does not this argument convince those who still hesitate about joining and contributing to the various activities connected with flowers? And if so, we need you, and you need us. Therefore, in a sense and spirit of co-operation where all benefit, join and contribute, and you will be a bigger man for so doing.

Arnold Bennett once said: "You will never have a better chance than you have at present. You may think you will, but you are mistaken." Does not this strike home to all who are hesitating about joining? Go to it now, and there will be a return many-fold by way of better understanding and good-will toward those with whom we come in contact.

Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

BUSINESS SHOWS GOOD TONE.

From all sources, comes the report that for the week ending October 18, business was very good indeed. With the approach of winter, the death rate seems to have increased, and with a good demand for social functions, most of the receipts were quickly disposed of. The daily cut of roses was about equal to the demand. In chrysanthemums, the cut is growing heavier from day to day, and as they are very popular, are moving at good prices. The same can be said of bunch chrysanthemums. In carnations, the situation has not changed much. While the receipts are increasing, the demand seems to be greater; hence, the shortage, and the rise in price. Enough greens can be had at all times.

NOTES.

On October 11, James Currie, superintendent of Forest Home cemetery, and member of the florists' club, was elected president of the board of park commissioners to succeed Henry Weber, who held this position for many years past. While Mr. Currie has been a member of the park board for some time, we feel sure that with his thorough knowledge, he can accomplish more good in his present capacity.

The wedding of one of the popular younger members of the craft was solemnized October 21, when Lawrence, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, was married to Miss Hazel O'Leary. A six o'clock dinner was served at the Hotel Pfister, about one hundred guests being present. Miss Asmus, of Chicago, was one of the bridesmaids. They have our best wishes for a bright future.

Wm. Manke & Co., who made good financially on a batch of Niza pompon chrysanthemums last year, are again beginning to cut this variety. Last season they were at least two weeks earlier, and being the only pompons in at that time, during the flu epidemic, realized fancy prices.

The quality of the Mrs. C. C. Pollworth chrysanthemums as grown and offered by the C. C. Pollworth Co. is certainly living up to the promises made when disseminated a few years ago. Their carnations, which are fine, are coming along more freely now.

Cards received last week from Otto Sylvester, Sr., and wife, Oconomowoc, Wis., announce the marriage of their daughter, Esther Emma, to Werner C. Otto, October 9. Local friends extend their congratulations and best wishes.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. began cutting chrysanthemums at its Brown Deer range last week, and the quality never was better. Shipping trade is very brisk in spite of prices asked. They are still short on carnations.

Gust. Rusch & Co. are receiving a daily cut of the newer roses, also long stemmed American Beauties in quantity. Their growers have not yet begun to cut either sweet peas or violets.

Reports have it that Mrs. Seaman will open a flower stand in the Wells building. This is in the same block, where she served Currie Bros. Co. for many years, so she will be "right at home," so to speak.

Mrs. Ida Baumgarten and daughter, Miss Gretchen, have returned from their auto trip through the east, and report a most pleasant and interesting time.

Wm. R. Schroeder, of the Schroeder Floral Co., returned October 16 from St. Louis, Mo., where he spent a week visiting friends.

Otto Eggebrecht, who was especially fortunate with outdoor asters this year, began to cut Princess of Wales violets last week.

Here's October 20 and most outdoor flowers, though chilled, have not yet been cut down by frost.

Visitors: Jac. J. Kolb, Beaver Dam, Wis.; Christ Hansen and Louis Hartung, Two Rivers, Wis.; J. Rindfleisch, Beloit, Wis.; Werner C. Otto and wife, Oconomowoc, Wis. E. O.

DOTHAN, ALA.—The Green Bay Gardens have purchased the Dothan Floral Co., formerly conducted by Mrs. Minnie Matthews, and will continue the business with Miss Bessie Crawford as manager. Greenhouses will be erected about the first of the year. The new organization consists of John H. Crawford and the Misses Sarah and Bessie Crawford.

FALL BUSINESS INCREASES.

With the arrival of cold weather florists are beginning to feel an active demand. After a long period, when social events were negligible, the demand for corsage bouquets for dances and receptions, table decorations, etc., comes as a very welcome addition to business. Wedding orders have been unusually numerous this fall, due probably to the end of the uncertainty caused by the war, and this business is helping greatly to make up for the absence of influenza orders, so numerous at this time last year. Funeral work, however, has been steady, and the prices received have, on the average, been higher than ever before. The first chrysanthemums are on the market, and the demand for these autumn flowers is good. Of course, neither the quantity nor the quality is up to the standard it will reach in a few weeks. Roses are fairly plentiful and their quality is all that could be desired. Pompons, too, are here, and are being eagerly snapped up by flower buyers. Carnations enjoy a ready sale, but their quality is still off color. The severe frosts of this week put the ban on all remaining outside flowers.

SUNDAY CLOSING SEEMS ASSURED.

Previous to the meeting of the florists' club held last Wednesday evening at S. N. Peck's flower shop, the outlook for a continuance of Sunday closing in this city looked extremely discouraging, but the enthusiasm of those florists who had experienced the benefits of one day off, carried the day. After some spirited discussion, a committee composed of Max Spanner, Frank M. Schramm and Walter Krause, was appointed to see the florists who had signed the previous pledge, and induce them to renew their determination to stay closed. Those present decided to take no further action about opening until this committee reported. From the sentiment at the meeting, the success of the movement seems certain.

NOTES.

Henry Klunder, formerly manager of the Art Flower Shop, and lately proprietor of a flower and vegetable farm in East Toledo, has taken a position with a Cincinnati flower shop. He has disposed of his property and left for the Queen City and his new position. His many friends here wish him the success that his ability as an expert decorator warrants.

Florists in this city are beginning to take a more active interest in the national advertising campaign of the Society of American Florists, as can be noted from the increasing numbers of "Say It With Flowers" signs that are displayed. Most of them have now contributed to the campaign, which must be backed up locally if it is to be a success.

Frank M. Schramm has returned from the F. T. D. convention at Buffalo full of enthusiasm and new ideas. He says it was the greatest convention ever, and he looks for a great increase in F. T. D. business as a result of the progressive ideas revealed there.

George Bayer's Bonnaffons are in fine crop this season, and although they are not yet on the market to any extent, he is already being deluged with advance orders. His product is always in great demand because of the excellent quality.

John Barrow, who has made a striking success of his flower store on Detroit avenue, feels that he has earned a rest, and has left with a party of friends for a three-weeks hunting trip for big game in the wilds of Canada.

Miss Helen Patten, after spending most of the summer at Georgian Bay, is back on the job full of energy, planning the biggest season of her long and successful career. She has affiliated with the F. T. D.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman has executed some substantial wedding orders during the week, and also reports a good demand for funeral work.

Paul Timm has a fine crop of chrysanthemums and reports business better than it has been in some time.

STOCK CONTINUES TO CLEAN UP.

Stock of all kinds continues to clean up each day, not withstanding the fact that there appears to be more arriving this week, especially chrysanthemums. American Beauty roses are in good demand at prices ranging from $2 to $6 per dozen, and sometimes at better prices in the fancier goods. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier are having a heavy call, and all the other roses are cleaning up nicely each day at high figures. Some fine Ophelia, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, My Maryland, Champ Weiland, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Montrose, Mrs. George Shawyer, Killarney, White Killarney and Killarney Brilliant are to be had, together with a limited supply of Cecile Brunner, Nesbit and Elgar. Carnations are selling quickly at $2 to $6 per 100, with stock in short supply. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful, but still clean up early at good prices, although at times. some job lots have been bought at low figures considering the general market condition the past week. Pompons are quickly disposed of. Lily of the valley is scarce at $20 per 100, and gardenias at $6 per dozen. Orchids continue to command high prices with no surplus to speak of. Sweet peas are selling for $3 per 100, with the supply limited. Some calendulas are bringing as high as $6 per 100. Bouvardia, lilies, callas, snapdragons and a few late indoor grown asters are to be had. The growers are calling attention to their wholesale houses to obtain higher prices for their stock at all times possible, so as to meet the increasing cost of production. Coal will advance from 75 cents to $1 per ton the first of November, and several other items used by the growers have gone up, which means that higher returns will be neces-

DISTANCE

Is no obstacle to the Retail Florist in buying Cut Flowers from Chicago.

It is a generally known fact that Cut Flowers travel safely over great distances and are then sometimes held for many days in the "cool room" by the Retailer for delivery to the ultimate consumer.

Your Ice Box is Your Stock Room

A matter of a few minutes and the long distance telephone will bring the Retail Florist into our salesroom.

In less than an hour a telegram will place an order for shipping on our files.

Within two to twenty-four hours mail is delivered here from cities within 1000 miles from CHICAGO.

No better service can be offered by wholesale houses of other cities or can our claims be offset by wholesale growers in the vicinity of any Retail Florists because of their convenient location.

CHICAGO MAKES THE MARKET PRICE ON CUT FLOWERS.

NOTES.

E. B. Washburn and wife, of Hollywood, Calif., spent several days here this week with his father, C. L. Washburn, leaving later for a business and pleasure trip with his wife's relatives at New York. Bassett & Washburn had an exhibit of their California grown palms at the store this week which attracted much attention and resulted in many orders being booked for spring delivery.

F. O. Franzen, who was formerly in the florist business on North Clark street, died, October 17, after an illness covering several years. The funeral was held the following Tuesday from the chapel at 3176 North Clark street, with interment at Memorial Park cemetery. He leaves a wife, who has the sympathy of the trade in her bereavement.

The George Wittbold Co. is another one of the local retail firms who will keep their stores closed on Sundays throughout the year. Fred Nelson, manager of the retail department, is heartily in favor of the movement, and would like nothing better than to hear that every store in the city will follow suit. Who's next?

C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., New York, was a visitor this week. He is on his way home from a trip to Japan and a visit to California. He has been on the road for nearly 30 years, and is the oldest traveler in years of active service calling on the horticultural trade today.

A. Lange has two very attractive windows this week, one for Halloween, mainly sprays of autumn foliage, cornstalks and pumpkins, the other bride's and bridesmaid's bouquets, with accessories for fall weddings.

V. Bezdek, of Gross Point, says that Aviator is one of the best paying carnations at his greenhouses. the returns the past week being exceptionally good and the cut the largest of any variety he has.

John Poehlmann underwent a successful operation for appendicitis at the Grant hospital, October 17. He is improving nicely, and will be able to be about soon.

Joe Schouten, of the Ernst Wienhoeber Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred last week.

M. Monblatt, of the American Bulb Co., is back from a business trip through Wisconsin, including a visit at his old home at Green Bay.

D. E. Freres is back in the wholesale commission business with headquarters at the store of Percy Jones, Inc.

The Oriental Goldfish & Supply Co. has moved into larger quarters at 3757-3761 Cottage Grave avenue.

Adam Graham and daughter, of Cleveland, O., are visiting friends in the city this week.

The first frost of the season to damage outdoor flowers occurred October 17.

Herman Bruns and bride are spending their honeymoon in the east.

Miss Marguerite Kane McNulty, who has had charge of Peter Reinberg's books for many years, has harkened to the call of Dan Cupid, and will be married October 29. The Misses Nettie Parker, Martha Gunterberg, Olga, Lillian and Anna Tonner, Mrs. Frank Ayers and Agnes Swenson, gave a luncheon in her honor at Marshall Field & Co's. store, October 18, when they presented her with a beautiful cut glass vase. Everyone in the trade will be interested to know that the lucky young man is Clarence Ellsworth of the J. F. Kidwell Co. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. McNulty, 1807 Lunt avenue, Rogers Park. The young couple has the best wishes of the trade.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co's. greenhouses, the stock is in excellent condition, and several of the visitors who made the tour of inspection with the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago Thursday, October 18, remarked that they never saw the entire place in such fine shape as it is now. All the houses that were closed down last season, are running full blast and large crops are in sight for the near future. The visitors asked the writer to thank the Poehlmann Bros. Co. for the magnificent chicken dinner that it treated the crowd to at the Wayside Inn the same day.

Miss L. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, leaves this week for Baconton, Ga., where her pecan groves are located, and are in fair crop this season. There are quite a number of people in the trade who own groves there, one of whom is Mrs. H. C. Wullbrandt, who will join Miss Tonner later.

Phil Schupp of the J. A. Budlong Co., in speaking of the fall business, says that it has been very satisfactory, and he is optimistic in regard to the future. The shipping trade is a big item with this house, and is steadily improving.

Paul Klingsporn returned this week from a business visit in the east, including the F. T. D. meeting at Buffalo and a trip to New York. Clarence Ellsworth, of the J. F. Kidwell Co., made the trip with him.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., and Dick Salm, of Union Grove, Wis., in talking over conditions, agree that there are 600,000 American Beauty plants less this season than were grown in former years.

Percy Jones, Inc., is having a strong demand for plant stands, which appear to be exceedingly scarce throughout the country, judging from the way orders are arriving in every mail.

At the Joseph Foerster Co's. store business is brisk, and the establishment was filled with city buyers on the morning of October 18, when the local sales established a new record.

Zech & Mann have no complaint to make in regard to the fall business so far, which has been brisk, especially in the shipping line. The local demand is improving wonderfully.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are showing fine chrysanthemums, which are arriving in heavier supply. Business continues brisk here, and each day results in a grand clean up.

One of the retail stores in the loop is for sale, the proprietor wishing to concentrate his efforts in another line he is interested in.

E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., is back from a successful business trip through the southwest.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports a heavy call for sweet peas, which are arriving in larger quantities this week.

Visitors: Adam Graham, Cleveland, O.; Miss Kramer, Birmingham, Ala.; enroute to Aberdeen, S. D.; A. Nielson, Pana; J. E. Jones, of the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.; A. J. Stahelin, Detroit, Mich.; Miss Erby, Memphis, Tenn.; J. S. Wilson, Jr., Des Moines, Ia.

Louisville, Ky.

MODERATE SUPPLY WITH FAIR MOVEMENT.

Business has been fairly active with stock of all kinds, with the exception of carnations, in good supply. Some very good dahlias have been among the offerings and there have been fair quantities of chrysanthemums and roses. The first killing frost in this section was recorded on the night of October 18.

NOTES.

August Baumer has returned from the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association meeting at Buffalo, and reports a session of much accomplishment and general interest.

Emil Walther has been sending to this market excellent chrysanthemum plants in full bloom. They have the appearance of specimens grown for exhibition.

The F. Walker Co. is cutting quantities of excellent roses, Columbia and Mock being especially fine; also, high grade chrysanthemums.

Anders Rasmussen and his bride have returned from an extended wedding trip, visiting the principal eastern cities.

Fred Haupt has disposed of his interest in a local rubber tire concern with which he has been identified.

Dave Weller, formerly manager of the Nanz & Neuner Co., is now with the Wm. Walker Co.

H. G. W.

HANNIBAL, MO.—Mrs. Winnie Nugent will open a flower shop in the near future at 403 Broadway.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The feature of the meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society scheduled for October 22 will be the lecture of Edward I. Farrington, of Boston, Mass., on "What's New in the Garden."

EARLY FALL DEMAND AUGURS WELL.

The fall season has opened suspiciously, although some inclement weather during the past week had its effect on the volume of business in the local retail establishments, but the only bad feature was the weather, and with the sun coming out again, the public began to buy more actively. On the whole business, has been quite good, with excellent prospects for the future. The best feature has been the demand for loose flowers. There is more or less social activity, and it is believed that class of business will increase in the near future as the season will soon be in full swing. Funeral work has been slow. The supply has been more plentiful, as a larger assortment of the seasonable stocks are on hand. This includes chrysanthemums, carnations, roses and sweet peas. Chrysanthemums are selling from $3 to $6 per dozen, and there is a steady demand. Carnations retail at $1.50 per dozen. They include red, pink and white, with pink the favorite. Roses are arriving in large profusion and retail at $2 to $5 per dozen. They include Premier, Sunburst, Ward, Russell and Ophelia.

NOTES.

The florists' association, which held regular meetings last season, will soon become active, with semi monthly meetings. The association has always done a great deal of good in retail circles, and a large proportion of this city's florists were members. Arrangements are being made to call a meeting early in November, when the programme for winter activities will be arranged. Professor Hottes, of the Ohio State University, is president, and E. A. Munk, of the Munk Floral Co., secretary.

J. W. L.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

The meeting was opened in due form at 7:45 p. m. October 16, with the president, the secretary, two other male members and two members of the ladies' auxiliary present, the smallest meeting since the organization of the club. This was due to two causes, the first and principal one being that just about the time members should have been leaving their homes for the meeting, a violent thunder storm visited the county, and second, because the programme committee had arranged no events to attract the members. S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, Pa., was a visitor, and had the pleasure of shaking hands with all present.

An invitation was read from the Baltimore Florists' Club inviting us to attend its ladies' night, but on account of the small attendance, no action was taken. The secretary presented a telephone invitation from the Chester County Florists' Association to make a visiting trip to Chester county in the near future, and the automobile committee was instructed to get busy and secure machines for this trip, October 30. P. W. DeHertogh was elected to membership. Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Mrs. B. F. Barr and Mrs. A. K. Rohrer were added to the programme committee, and this will be the last meeting without any definite programme.

Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago.

October 16, the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago traveled to Morton Grove for a visit of the greenhouse establishments at that place. The growers assembled at the office of Poehlmann Brothers Company at 3 p. m. and led by Adolph, August, Walter and Earl Poehlmann, were shown this mammoth modern establishment. As usual, everything was found in splendid condition. Great interest was displayed by the visitors in the many modern labor-saving devices employed. Particular note was taken of the coal handling facilities, which make it possible to load a seven-ton truck in 35 seconds.

After seeing the Poehlmann range, the growers were taken by autos to the establishment of Jos. Brooks, who grows carnations and miscellaneous stock. Next on the route was Wm. Fluegge, who specializes in pot plants, and has a good lot of cyclamens coming along. Further on is Emil Nelson's place. All roses are grown here, and the industrious proprietor is always on the job. After having seen this place, the joyful news was passed that the Poehlmann Brothers' Company had a chicken dinner waiting. Needless to say, the dinner served at the Wayside Inn was enjoyed by all, and using the expression of one grower—"it hit the spot."

Following the dinner, the monthly meeting was held, at which many important and timely topics were discussed. Facts and figures were presented, showing the enormous increases in the cost of everything entering into the production of flowers, and the difficulty of growers to keep pace with them. As a result of these advances flowers will be higher.

The growers are very enthusiastic about their signboard campaign, which should prove to be a great stimulant to business. The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago stands for the advancement of floriculture, it aims to elevate the flower business in general, and deserves the support of every flower grower tributary to the Chicago market. Its membership consists of one representative from each greenhouse establishment. Although only six months old, the association has made rapid progress, and already its membership numbers 76, comprising about 6,000,000 square feet of glass. The following appear on the secretary's list:

UNSEASONABLE WEATHER A DRAWBACK.

A combination of warm and wet weather produced conditions that greatly handicapped the market, so that the business of the past week was anything but satisfactory; in fact, in several quarters, it was said to be the worst week of the season. The situation, as explained, is that dahlias are still in full crop, the fall cosmos is about at its height, and there is an abundance of fall asters, outdoor chrysanthemums, tritomas and other outside stock. The greenhouse chrysanthemums are now coming strong, being seen in good assortment in all the wholesale houses. Carnations are rapidly increasing in volume, while there are quantities of roses. The market is overstocked, a condition not unusual just before the first killing frost, which may be looked for now at any time. It has been the best dahlia year ever experienced, (with the exception of the unusual demand of last season) as the quality of the flowers was never better, and the quantity was larger than for any previous period. Considering the quantity handled, prices have been well maintained and growers are quite satisfied with returns. The better grades of chrysanthemums are in good demand at prices fully one-third greater than before the war. A higher level can no doubt be maintained, and will be, if the growers do not get scared over a few days' dull business. Carnations are improving with each shipment, but the outlook for large quantities is not very promising. Snapdragon is to become one of the staples. The stock arriving is fine. Calendulas will be another quantity flower, many growers having quite large plantings, of which the first cutting is very good. Sweet peas are coming forward slowly, there being some small shipments every day. Cattleyas are much more plentiful, with considerable concessions in price.

A NEW ROSE BUG.

Rose growers in this vicinity are much annoyed, if not alarmed, at the ravages of a minute black bug or beetle, about the size of the head of a pin. This appears to come out of the ground, although its habits are not definitely known to the average grower, but the fact that it is very destructive to the rose plants is only too evident. It is first noticed when the plants that have been dried off and cut back begin to push out; then as each little shoot begins to expand, the bug makes a meal of the tender tip, and continues his ravages, going from eye to eye as they show tinges of green, until finally the plant dies. Later on, they eat holes in the leaves of the more mature growth. Their period of existence appears to be during August, and up to November, when they disappear. They were apparent last season for the first time, but this year their numbers have greatly increased. One firm has employed boys and girls to hand pick them as insecticides appear to have no effect They are paid by the thousand bugs. Considerable replanting has already had to be done in replacing plants that have died from this cause.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" WEEK.

The publicity movement, inaugurated the past week with the giving of flowers on Saturday to the churches, placing flowers in store windows, and cheering up those in the wards in the hospitals with flowers, was quite a success. Those of the retailers who decorated their stores, and pushed the business by means of advertising and a larger stock, fared very well. As Frank M. Ross put it: "The fixing up of the stores put more conceit and pep into the clerks, prompting them do their best when waiting on customers." Such a movement, to get the best results, requires time to work it up, with each committee knowing exactly what its work is to be. It also requires well-prepared newspaper matter, which working in conjunction with the other floral features, makes them much more effective.

NOTES.

Edward Reid, who has just returned from a visit to his ranch in Montana, believes the dahlia has no place in the market as a cut flower. It is a field crop that comes directly in competition with greenhouse grown stock, the product of the growers, on whom the market depends for flowers the entire season. The dahlias can be, and are, cut in unlimited quantities. They require but little more care than ordinary field crops, while the flowers with which they come in competition, occupy valuable greenhouse space. For nearly a whole month, the prices of this good stock is held to much lower figures than it would bring if the dahlia was not allowed to be sold.

C. U. Liggit, George Burton and E. A. Harvey, visited Charles H. Totty Madison, N. J., last week and also called on other growers there. The new rose, Frank Dunlop, was seen at its best with Mr. Totty, and was greatly admired by these specialists, as was Madame Butterfly. The Duckam-Pierson and the immense range of L. B. Coddington, at Murray Hill, where there are over 400,000 forcing rose plants, was a revelation to the visitors.

Those who represented this city at the recent F. T. D. convention in Buffalo—Chas. H. Grakelow, A. T. Moore, Edward Fancourt. Paul Berkowitz and Robert Kift—are loud in their praises of its hustling, live-wire action, there being something interesting every minute of its two days' session. The more than 200 delegates, nearly all proprietors of stores, made a most enthusiastic body.

The Jos. Heacock Co's. system to keep up a succession in palm growing, is being greatly taxed on account of the extra demand for the medium sizes. The same difficulty is experienced by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., the middle or medium sizes being all sold out. Should these conditions continue, large size kentias will soon be selling at a premium.

Quite a number of the craft attending the F. T. D. meeting at Buffalo, visited this city before returning home. Paul Klingsporn and Clarence Ellsworth, Chicago; Thos. S. Joy, Nashville, Tenn., and Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., spent Saturday here.

Charles H. Grakelow was much pleased with "Say It With Flowers" week. His decorated store was open evenings, and an orchestra brought many visitors.

Jack Berger called a halt on the dahlias by having his growers hold all their shipments for orders, so as to give the fast coming chrysanthemums a chance.

President J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., is attending the sessions of the United States chamber of commerce, held in Atlantic City, N. J., this week.

Robert Craig, Arthur A. Niessen, and E. A. Harvey attended the dinner of the Florists' and Gardeners' club of Baltimore, October 21.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. finds Prima Donna one of its best roses. Choice chrysanthemums are a feature here. K.

INCREASED SUPPLY, LIMITED DEMAND.

Business was not at all active during the past week. The supply of stock continued to increase, with no appreciable advance in the demand. American Beauty roses dropped to $35 and $40 per 100, for specials. While there was a fair demand for good tea roses, such as Premier, Columbia and Ophelia, much short stock hung fire. Chrysanthemums were greatly on the increase in supply, and as this is the beginning of the reign of the "Queen of Autumn," it is to be expected that they will take precedence over most of the other stocks, excepting roses, which cannot be put in second place by any other flower. The dahlias have suffered heavily since the advent of a large stock of chrysanthemums. Carnations, too, some of them being good for the season, are moving slowly. A number of the retail stores will not buy carnations while so much outdoor stock, and pompon chrysanthemums are plentiful. As the American Railway Express, on account of the strike of employes, has declared an embargo on all stock to and from this city, violets are arriving by parcel post, and in poor condition. They are, therefore scarcely to be considered. Orchids continue cheap and hard to clean up. One of the oldest wholesalers stated, October 17, that the wholesale market was in better condition at this time, 1917, than at present. The reasons for the high prices of 1918 are well known.

October 20.—The supply of stock is heavy with a moderate demand.

NOTES.

Although carnations, on account of the heavy stock of chrysanthemums, are now bringing only moderate prices, the indications are that when the season has fairly opened, they will be high. There were great losses in plants, before and after planting, and it is stated that no good stock, for filling in, can be bought in any of the eastern states. Small and weak stock that it would take half the winter to nurse up, is held at $150 per 1,000. There are growers who, if they cannot realize good prices the coming winter, are likely to cut out carnations entirely. The heavy losses, as well as the heavy overhead expenses, have almost discouraged them. It would be unfortunate if the carnation supply was greatly curtailed. The carnation is most emphatically the flower of the plain people, and with rose prices running high, as they usually do in winter, a shortage of carnations would be an injury to the trade in general.

The new central display greenhouse at the botanical garden, Bronx park, at public conservatory range No. 2, on the eastern side of the grounds north of the Allerton avenue entrance, which was presented by Daniel and Murry Guggenheim, will be formally opened on the afternoon of November 8, and will be open to the public daily thereafter from three until five o'clock. Brief addresses will be made at the opening ceremonies by Dr. W. Gilman Thompson, president of the board of managers, and by Dr. D. T. MacDougal, director of botanical research, Carnegie Institution, Washington, D. C., at 3:45 o'clock. There will be a special exhibition of plants and flowers in the new central greenhouse arranged in co-operation with the Horticultural Society of New York which will be continued during the two days following from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m.

As will be elsewhere noted, quite a number of visiting florists were in town last week, and it is pleasing to observe that they were quite sociable with the "natives" and residents. That is the way to do, and we hope our florists are as fraternal when they go abroad. Many things can be talked about that will help the trade. "Bilin' soap and aboosin the nabers," as Artemus Ward put it, is not the strongest mark of friendship.

Friends in this city have recently received letters from J. Austin Shaw, who will be pleasantly remembered by many in the trade. With Mrs. Shaw and other members of his family, he is residing at Hollywood, California. He is taking osteopathic treatment for his lameness, and hopes to be benefited. Always an optimist, he writes glowingly of the California climate, and adds: "There are many worse off than I."

We have received an invitation to attend the twenty-third annual flower show of the Morris County, N. J., Gardeners' and Florists' Society, to be held in the armory Morristown, N. J., October 29-30. This society always stages good shows, and we do not expect this one to be an exception—unless, as we hope, it will be exceptionally good.

It has been stated that Charles Thorley, the retailer of Fifth avenue and 46th street, is managing the campaign of Robert Moran, who is running on the democratic ticket for president of the board of aldermen. The republican candidate is Congressman LaGuardia.

A visitor in the wholesale district, October 18, was Miss Carrol Macy, formerly in the retail business here as the "Onaway Florist." She is now retired, and lives at Edgemere, L. I., where she has a kennel of blooded dogs that have won prizes at the fashionable shows.

President J. F. Ammann, of the Society of American Florists, came on to this city after attending the convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Buffalo, October 14-15. He spoke highly of the convention.

The first chrysanthemums of the variety Glenview, noted in the market, came to J. J. Coan, October 18. He is also receiving fine stock of the white variety, Josephine Foley, that wholesales for $12 per dozen.

The young son of A. T. Bunyard, of 413 Madison avenue, who was recently operated on in a Rochester, N. Y., hospital for appendicitis, is now at home and well enough to be up and resume his play.

Joseph H. Fenrich is handling the chrysanthemum stock of the Chas. H. Totty range and a large assortment of good roses from the Duckham-Pierson Co., both of Madison, N. J.

William J. Manda, son of Joseph A. Manda, who recently returned from France, has been operated on for appendicitis, and spent some time in an Orange, N. J., hospital.

Mr. Slattery, of Thomas F. Galvin's Boston store, was in town October 13-14 to assist Mr. Hale of the establishment in this city in the arrangement of a wedding decoration.

Meyer, Madison avenue and 58th street, has an attractive window decoration, composed largely of large plants of the red celosia, and a variety of foliage plants.

Harry Anderson, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., was in this city the past week calling on the retail trade. He is a clever, hustling young man.

J. H. Small & Son arranged a decoration in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, October 11, for a luncheon given by the Pennsylvania Society to Cardinal Mercier.

Traendly & Schenck are now receiving fine stocks of the chrysanthemums, Chrysalora, Poehlmann, Dick Witterstaetter, Oconta, McNiece and Tiger.

October 18 brought clear and cool weather, a heavy supply of chrysanthemums and better business than the preceding days of the week.

H. Baylis, of the New York Cut Flower Co., is receiving good stock of the chrysanthemum, October Herald, from Dailledouze Bros.

In addition to a good stock of American Beauty and Scott Key roses, Joseph A. Millang is receiving good carnations in variety.

Excellent stock of lily-of-the-valley is being handled by Geo. Hildenbrand, of John Young & Co., also a fine quality of cattleyas.

The Rosary Flower Co., a retail concern, has removed from Park avenue and 80th street to Park avenue and 55th street.

Robert Clifford, who spent the summer in Mrs. Leikens' Newport, R. I., store, is now back in her Madison avenue store.

The Henshaw Floral Co. is handling an exceptionally fine stock of chrysanthemums.

Visitors: Henry Penn, Boston, Mass.; John M. Champion, New Haven, Conn.; Louis J. Reuter, Waltham, Mass.; W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo.; W. G. Matthews, Dayton, O.; Paul Klingsporn, Chicago; C. E. Ellsworth, Chicago; Vincent J. Gorly, St. Louis, Mo.; Geo. O'Brien and wife, Richmond, Va.
